Village Shop Talk ...

By Larry Fone

Last week two people said "Cohasset is the best kept secret on the South Shore." Guess the comment means we do not reach out to other communities. The merchant community will change that shortly, or try to once again! The Cohasset Village and Harbor Association constantly addresses that problem.

Who and What is Cohasset? This super town with all the obvious pluses. Beautiful village and common. Churches that not only provide a Sunday sit and get religion, but are active in providing activities and services to those in need...of help at any level.

Cohasset is the harbor, the sailing club, the yacht club. And so many other activities. Perhaps we are secret, to outsiders, and that problem should be erased. All folks are welcome. Cohasset provides the most memorable shore line south of "Bostonville," some fine restaurants and special shops you could not find anywhere!

So shop Cohasset Village. Harbor and 3-A is not only special for us who live here but a treat for those "unfortunates" who don't live here!

All shops in Cohasset are receiving new and exciting stock, notably wonderful new jewelry at Cards and Shards. Take a look see. Don't forget Flemings' grand offering of gifts...and for the "shippee" crowd fine made hardware! Mary and Hal Brother look forward to seeing you. Both unforgettable Cohasset personalities.

Last week Connie Parker, better known as Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, president of the Cohasset Historical Society entertained 47 folks from the Norfolk County Development and Tourist Council. Gave them the Grand Tour of our fine historic museums and the Lothrop House. Connie does more than anyone I know in not keeping Cohasset a secret.

Friday I had a special little visitor. A lovely black and white male cat with a white flea collar which I now call "Bumper." If anyone knows the home of this beautiful little critter please call Cookworks 383-1906 or my home 383-0898. I just can't believe this fine little animal does not have a home where it is wanted.

If someone did dump this animal, there is a stiff fine for this in our state.

The question this week "What would you like to see in Cohasset Village and the common for beautification?" Trees, shrubs, decorations for Christmas? What? Call Cookways, 383-1906.

Shop Cohasset Village and Harbor and 3-A Shops. Appreciate!

This was one of the scenes Sunday through the streets of the Hingham-Cohasset area as the Knights of Columbus and the Sons of Italy sponsored a parade which started from West Corner, up Rockland Street to Kilby Street and ended on the grounds of the Sons of Italy Hall on the corner of Kilby and Route 3A.

Cohasset doctor featured in new book

(Submitted by Wolf's Head Press of Virginia)

Boyd DeWolf Lewis has written an autobiography, "Not Always A Spectator." It tells the life story of a bookish boy from a small New England town who became an international journalist, editor of news services, president of a large communications company — and in active maturity, a successful portrait and marine painter.

The book tells of a young man who built his happy life upon stormy beginnings, who conquered childhood illnesses to win athletic trophys, who just as easily might have become a surgeon or an artist had not happy accident led him into newspaper work.

His narrative reveals him to be a man of faith — faith in his country, faith in the destiny of man, faith in the correctness of morality and fair play. But it also shows that he has no belief in gods, devils, heavens or hells save those we create for ourselves.

He is an optimist; he believes things are rarely as bad as they seem. Throughout his life Lewis has invested confidence in his fellow man and he has rarely been disappointed.

Subtitle of the book is "A Newsman's Story." It is, says the author's preface, "the story of many great and small events...many great and small people, with which and with whom" he came in contact after an almost miraculous career start in Boston in 1927.

The autobiography, just published by the Wolf's Head Press of Vienna, VA., deals at length with several South Shore personalities, in particular the late Dr. Howard S. Reid of Cohasset, beloved family practitioner.

Dr. Reid and Lewis, lifelong friends, had an interesting encounter on the Western Front in World War II during the Battle of the Bulge. Dr. Reid, an Army colonel, was medical chief of the 107th Evacuation Hospital, which had three narrow escapes from being overrun by German panzer armies.

Once Upon A . . .

By Patricia Desmond

She looked at her world, eyes full of cry drops and decided to write a better beginning.
The young girl,
starched and flouncy, blinked, held her breath deep and twinkled into a fairytale, a crimson-scented tomorrow,
a day of pure imagination, filled with soap bubbles where there'd been spider lace and tart tasting lollipops, where there'd been nothing.
Paper kites fluttered higher, freer than butterflies and the morning star glowed long after dawn.
A day better than her yesterday.
Isn't that the basis of all fairytales?
Improvement ever after,
growth, change,
impossible wonderment, like love that's always returned and dreams that almost come true.
The young girl wrote it all down in her memory and woke up a princess in her own — self-created — tomorrow.

ATTIC MAGIC

Cast chosen for 'Table Manners'

Director Valerie Lester has announced the cast for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's fall production of Alan Ayckbourn's comedy "Table Manners," to be performed Nov. 19, 20, and 21 at the Cohasset Town Hall.

"Table Manners," a modern English drawing-room comedy, calls for a cast of six, made up of three women and three men. The play was written during the spring of 1973, and is the first part of a comedic trilogy called "The Norman Conquests." The title does not refer to the invasion of Britain in the year 1066, but rather to a series of events occurring in an English country cottage. The setting is modern. Norman himself is a man who seems to have a strong effect upon those around him; an effect frequently disturbing to friends and relatives alike.

The other five characters in the play, in fact, are relatives of Norman, and their lives are greatly complicated by his presence. Norman does not permit himself to be ignored by anyone, particularly by the women whom he meets. The result in "Table Manners" is a vignette of sometimes hilarious, sometimes poignant, events occurring during a weekend gathering at an English cottage.

Norman, the Conqueror, will be played by Davis Dassori whose theatrical background includes playing the role of Henry Higgins in last spring's Hingham Civic Music Theatre production of "My Fair Lady," as well as extensive experience in St. Luke's Drama Group in Scituate.

Ruth, Norman's wife in a not-so-happy marriage, will be portrayed by Sarah DeLima, a veteran performer in both the Cohasset Dramatic Club and the well-known Waytes and Players Company of Hingham. She is a graduate of the Guildhall School of Music and Drama in London, England, a former professional dancer, and a member of the Broad Cove Chorale of Hingham. Her first dramatic role after moving to the United States was as Molly in the Agatha Christie mystery, "The Mousetrap."

Reg, the brother of Ruth, is played by Harry Heinemann, a longtime Cohasset Club member whose experience includes both acting and directing. Recently, he appeared as Vanya in the Club's 1980 production of "Uncle Vanya," and directed its fall presentation of "Sly Fox."

Sarah, Reg's wife, will be played by Lee Dunne, another cast member whose theatrical career has included both acting and directing. She appeared in "Uncle Vanya" and "The Secretary Bird," and has directed "The Mousetrap."

Annie, Reg and Ruth's younger sister, will be portrayed by Andrea Dassori, whose experience encompasses both Shakespearean and modern theatre. She has appeared in productions of Shakespeare's "Tempest," Moliere's "L'Avare," and Wilder's "Our Town."

Tom, a friend of Annie's, is to be played by Derek Holmes. A professional British actor until 1963, Derek Holmes has appeared in all productions of the Elizabethan Company of Hingham, in "Uncle Vanya" presented by the Cohasset Dramatic Club, and in the Boston Public Theater production of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," which was directed by his wife, Judy Holmes.

Director, Valerie Lester, has assembled a superb cast for the Cohasset premier of "Table Manners," so plan now to see them on the historic Cohasset Town Hall Stage on Nov. 19, 20, and 21.

It's upset time, Skippers overhaul Middleboro

By Rob Tis

The Cohasset High School football team pulled off one of the most incredible victories in high school history Monday morning.

The Skippers went into the game the ultimate underdog. They were 0-3. They had lost to Middleboro by 40 points last year and the Skippers' main halfback didn't even dress, but worst of all the Middleboro Sachems were one of the most feared teams in high school football.

After the second play from scrimmage however, things changed. The Skipper line made an incredible pass rush and batted the ball into the air. It soon came down right into the hands of Skipper end Don MacKinnon. At this moment, all of those supposedly insurmountable obstacles vanished and the phrase, "Hey, these guys just might do it," was heard everywhere.

The Skippers' momentum was now snowballing and before long, "Mr. Enthusiasm" himself, Jack McNeill, broke around 10 tackles in a 40 yard run which put the Skippers on Middleboro's 10 yard line. From here fearless Skipper quarterback Kevin Dooley took it in himself on a perfectly executed sweep. Paul Buckley knocked the old polota through the uprights for the extra point.

Middleboro, of course, had to show off its all world offense, led by a kid named Sherwin Gamble, who supposedly runs the 40 in about two seconds. Sherwin broke out for three long runs and got three T.D.'s.

The Skippers could have very easily given up at this point. But they didn't.

As the half was coming to a close the Skippers inched up to the goal line but couldn't penetrate by the end of the half. So it stood Middleboro, 20, Cohasset 7 as time ran out.

Whatever Coach John Leone said at half time it certainly was effective. The Skippers received the kick-off and began a long drive. They took the ball all the way to the Sachem fifteen where they got a little tricky.

Quarterback Kevin Dooley handed off to Bob Donahue and Bob faded back and found a wide open Kevin Dooley in the end zone with an on the money pass. Paul Buckley did the honors once again and the Skippers moved with 7 points.

The Skippers didn't have much time to waste and they didn't as Pat Conlan pounced on a loose ball and Cohasset regained possession. The Skippers drove furiously toward the goal line and quarterback Kevin Dooley took the pigskin over the goal line for the third time and tied the score.

Middleboro was now extremely frustrated. The Skippers, however, smelled victory. Tom "Booda" Stanford at this point made the key play of the game. Booda made a fantastic interception on the Skipper 20 which saved a possible touchdown and gave the Skippers possession and a chance to take the lead.

The Kevin Dooley show now moved into high gear as he hit two perfect 30 yard passes, one to Bob Meers and the other to Tom O'Brien. This left the Skipper offensive machine around the 10 yard line.

The Skippers took the safe route on the ground from here and Bob Donahue took it in to put the Skippers ahead. Paul Buckley put it through the uprights one more time to put the score up to 27-20 in Cohasset's favor. From here it was up to the defense who were weary from chasing Middleboro's speedsters for the last two hours. Once again the Skippers did not give up. The Sachems inched very close to the Skipper goal line as the seconds ticked away.

They came very close but with only a few seconds left on the clock Jack McNeill intercepted on the one yard line and the crowd erupted with jubilation, knowing that the Skippers had grabbed victory from the jaws of defeat.

The Skippers worked at this victory and didn't get it because they were stronger, faster, or luckier, but because they wanted it a bit more.

CHS students score well on scholastic tests

Advance placement scores most impressive

Cohasset High School students are bright and score well on national college entrance testing, school officials were told Monday by John Leary, director of guidance.

Leary went over the scores of the graduating class of 1981 in the Scholastic Aptitude Exam, the achievements and advanced placement scores.

"Testing is at best hopelessly confusing," Leary said beginning his talk with real meanings of the common acronyms used in these circles.

The number of students from Cohasset High who take the SAT and other tests is unusually high. Of a graduating class of 151, there are 143 who took the tests.

Leary said the average scores would be far higher if only the better students were encouraged to take the tests.

"I'd be willing to guess it would go to 600's in the achievements," Leary said discussing median scores or the middle ground.

"But what we're trying to do is to open doors for kids and not to close them off."

"If I issued a directive to you tomorrow to be selective about the tests, would it be correct to say you could push the test scores up?" Crowell asked.

Leary agreed it would be possible.

Crowell hastened to add that he would not do that, that he does not feel that would be in the best interest of the system.

The average scores for Cohasset class of '81 was 444 in verbal SAT testing. The national average was 424.

The scores for both Cohasset and the nation have declined, overall since 1972. In 1972 the Cohasset average was 484 and the national average was 453.

The scores have not changed much since last year. The average for a student in the class of 1980 at Cohasset was 447.

In math SAT testing Cohasset averaged 490 last year while the national average was 466. That is also down from a high a 523 for Cohasset in 1973. The national peak was 484 in 1972.

Leary pointed out how much higher Cohasset students scored against the students they were competing with for college acceptance.

The averages on achievement tests were higher, indicating that Cohasset students know more than their natural ability would predict.

"We have prided ourselves on our bright, gifted youngsters and we still do," Leary said. "While the seniors were down three points (in verbal scores) they were 20 points above the national average.

On achievements 101 out of the 143 students taking the test at all took one or more achievements. This is 70 percent of those taking the test. The Coming soon, last year's tax bill

Tax bills, which will be sent out soon, will be duplicates of the bills sent out last year at this time.

The bills will not show increased assessments due to revaluation, nor will they show decrease due to Proposition 2½.

The assessors office isn't sure when the bills will be going out.

Under recently passed legislation the 127 communities in the state which are undergoing revaluation were granted the chance to send out estimated tax bills. The state Department of Revenue had been predicting a three month or longer delay in approving revaluation figures in the communities. Such a delay would have been costly, as it would have forced towns and cities to borrow money at roughly 10 percent interest to pay operating expenses.

The new legislation calls for a notice of estimated tax to be no more than 50 percent of a property owner's previous bill for one year.

The assessors office says the state must still approve the mailing of the bills. As soon as that approval comes through the bills will be processed. It will take at least several weeks to process the bills once the approval is given.

It will be another 12 to 16 weeks before the state approves the revaluation figures, according to best estimates. Those estimates have changed from time to time.

Library accepts $1000 Gleason gift

Emily Gleason died last spring leaving $1,000 to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library with no restrictions.

This week the library trustees voted to accept the gift from the trust set up in her will.

Mrs. Gleason was a member of the library trustees for 49 years, resigning from the board several years ago when her health prevented her from keeping up her attendance at the meetings..

"She loved the library," Richard Hayes, chief librarian, said. "The freedom to read books was very important to her. She believed in a good book collection."

Mrs. Gleason was interested in art and literature. She was a member of the World Affairs Council.

Hayes said her gift comes at a time when the library is facing continuous financial troubles.

"It's nice to be paying attention to the good deeds," Hayes said.

Library hours were cut back due to Proposition 2½. The library is closed all day Wednesday.

The book budget was hit hard by inflation at the same time.

Hayes said the real difference won't be noticed right away.

The collection will remain strong for a time, he said.

"Something like this month's science magazine can't be bought next year. It's even hard to buy this year's books in another year, publishers aren't keeping as large an inventory because of their problems with inflation," he said.

Hayes said there is more pressure than ever on the little money that is available for what he calls the "Soft" services of government like library and recreation. The opposite would be the services generally accepted as indispensible like fire, police and dump maintenance.

He said it might be a good idea to put a new tax on video games to support municipal government. When questioned about it, Hayes didn't think it would be a bad idea to have the state pick up the cost of public education.

"But no one is talking about real tax reform," he said. "The best we can hope is level funding and that will mean cuts in services because of inflation."

A winning week for Cohasset soccer

Both the boys' and girls' soccer teams showed what they were made of this week.

The boys faced a tough Abington team on Friday. The Green Wave took an early lead with a goal in the second quarter. With only six minutes left in the game, the pressure was on and Ron Bergenhiem came through as he drove the ball right past the Abington goalie. Kudos to Mike Nedrow, Derm O'Connel, and Drew Dougherty who all gave fine defensive efforts.

On Thursday, the girls' soccer team totally annihilated a strong Hanover team 4-0. Forwards Sarah Seavey and Amy Duncomb both had two goals for the Skippers. Sue Dalrymple, Angela O'Brine, Mary O'Brien and Christine Barret all did a fine job feeding the front line. It was truly a rare occasion in this game when the ball was in the Cohasset end of the field.

Cohasset's week

Bid awarded

A bid for two computers for the business department was awarded to Radio Shack of Fort Worth, Texas, for $4,166.48 or about $300 less than the grant given the town by the state to be used for occupational education programs.

The amount will buy two TRS computers, a printer and related software.

School officials say there were two bids. One was lower on paper, through an error made by the bidder. If the school system were to allow the bidder to correct the error, that bid would be high.

Mailbox turnaround

The mailbox in front of the Cohasset post office cannot be used by people still sitting in their cars any more.

The mailbox, which people say was a great convenience, has been turned around.

Dog transportation fee

Plans for a new dog transportation fee have been finalized. Charlaine Scholz of Shishonee Kennels in Marshfield will collect the $10 transportation fee and send the amount to the town at the end of each month.

Gift of flag

Selectmen accepted a flag gift to the town from Lawrence Larson of 60 Elm St. The flag had been draped over his brother's casket.

Estate sale

The contents of Stoneleigh at 478 Jerusalem Road will be sold off this weekend.

Peddler's II is running an estate sale at the property sometimes referred to as the Massa castle. The hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 23 to 25.

The property, a massive seaside estate, is in the process of being sold. The Hunneman real estate office in Hingham has apparently found a family for the home. Word is the estate will remain a private residence.

The property has been empty for several years.

Furnishings to be sold this weekend include rooms of Heritage and other brand names, televisions, stereos, a tractor and pool table.

No date set for STM

There is still no time set for a special town meeting — the lack of plans for the dump are holding up the meeting.

Arthur Clark, executive secretary to the selectmen, said they hope to get information on the dump soon.

"That's the only thing that's holding us up," he said.

Halloween Party

There will be a costume Halloween party on ice at Cohasset Winter Garden rink for children, Saturday, Oct. 31, noon to 1 p.m. sponsored by the Silver Blades Skating Club.

Open house

Cohasset Hardware brought out dozens of residents for their open house recently.

Among those seen in the aisles of paint and appliances were: Connie and Larry and Pops Fone, Toni Hamilton, Margery Dougherty, James Corcoran of Lee Shore Paint, Mr. and Mrs. John Sadler and Manuel Salvador.

Door prizes from the paint, hardware and housewares departments were awarded.

Margin Ct. reconstruction

Selectmen voted last Wednesday night to open bids on October 28 for reconstruction of Margin Court.

Plans will be the originals which were submitted and approved for funding at April's town meeting.

The board postponed opening bids to allow Margin Court residents to contact selectmen about additional work of widening the road. Eight residents of the private way signed a petition to selectmen requesting that the original plans for work be done on Margin Court.

Residents hoped taht the work would be done as soon as possible. The petitioners asked that a piece of ledge be removed from the left side of the upcoming hill.

William McAuliffe said that Margin Court residents withdrew their September request for additional work because they realized the plan work would involve retaining walls and added expenses for the town. He said that their main concern is that work be completed before winter.

Pratt Halloween stories

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library will offer a Halloween Story Hour on Monday, Oct. 26, at 7:30 p.m. Children's Librarians, Ms. Marilyn Pope from the Paul Pratt Library and Ms. JoAnne Norton from the Norwell Public Library, will join together for an evening of hair-raising tales.

Ms. Norton, who has told stories for several years in the Boston area, will present an English folktale by Joseph Jacobs entitled, "The Rose Tree." Ms. Pope will tell an old favoritie, "The Yellow Ribbon," as well as a more modern ghost story entitled, "The Metronome."

Due to the nature of the stories, it is advisable that children in the first grade and below not attend. Parents are invited to accompany their children to the Story Hour.

Helen Ketcham to autograph new book

Helen Ketcham, a Cohasset resident, will be autographing copies of her first novel, "Mistress of Wynds," at the Hingham Square Bookshop, Saturday, Oct. 24, at 11 a.m.

Helen is well-known in Cohasset for her long association with the Dramatic Club where she has directed and written musicals and plays. Her novel, a well-researched Gothic romance with a unique twist, is receiving much local attention.

Helen Ketcham, with a pen name of Meg Haviland, shows off her new gothic novel, "Mistress of Wynds."

No video for Riddle's

Police Chief John DeBassio convinced selectmen last Wednesday night to deny Riddle's Food Mart any video game licenses.

At the previous selectmen's meeting it seemed as though the board was willing to grant one license to the store on a trial basis. Because Raymond Riddle has requested two licenses, selectmen had to contact him to find out if he would accept one video machine license. Apparently Riddle would have accepted one machine had a vote gone his way.

Instead, the selectmen have set precedent by banning video games in package stores. Chairman Henry Ainslie said, "I think that Mr. Riddle would be able to control the use of the game in his store...but I bow to the chief, who is in charge of overseeing these things."

Selectman Rocky Laugelle said, "Morally and ethically you don't want to encourage kids to hang out...but I still say, what's good for one business is good for another."

Immediately following the unanimous vote, Laugelle said that he was not in favor of any video games in town, at all. He hates to see youths pour their quarters into game machines.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur agreed with DeBassio that a package store is an improper environment for video machines. Several weeks ago she suggested that machines might promote loitering of young people and that the board should think in terms of setting policy — which they did.

CHS students test well...

national average for students taking achievements is 20 percent of the test takers.

Leary explained that achievements are used mainly by New England colleges for placement and this increases the likelihood a Cohasset student would want to take the test.

In English composition the average Cohasset score was 493 as opposed to the national average of 512. In Math I the Cohasset average was 521 while the national was 539.

The most impressive piece of information distributed to the committee was on the advanced placement tests.

Last year nearly half the seniors, 61, took at least one advanced placement test. Results showed 93 percent qualified for college credit.

After the meeting Irene Brown, committee chairman, mentioned that when her daughter graduated from the high school she received half a year's credit at her college. Crowell said it is possible for some graduates to begin as sophomores at their schools.

"This is a good indication of what our courses can do," Crowell said commenting on the high number of students who won college credit.

O'Neill fundraiser draws a full house ... of nobodies

By Patricia Desmond

Lt. Gov. Tom O'Neill came out against civil service and increased tax assessments last week at a fund raiser at the Park Plaza in Boston.

He was surrounded by a group of political nobodies at the event. But the room was filled and everyone but press people paid $100 a ticket for their hot hors d'oeuvres, imported cheese, vegies and something or other to drink.

The crowd applauded loudly. I recognized Norma, the Ear, Nathan, John Thomas, who was big in jumping when I was in college, Mike Saint, a former Ledger reporter now Tommy's press secretary, Michael Goldman, a former bigwig in the MDC in the days of the Duke who now works as a consultant for the O'Neill people, and the kid that covers the State House for the Ledger today.

There were a few other reporters in the crowd. No big names.

It looks like Tommy is the underdog, according to the bets. It also looks like he's getting alot of support from people who are dissatisfied with state government. Grass roots support.

Tommy, quite obviously, comes from a political family. He didn't mention his father once during the fund-raiser but people behind the scenes say help is at hand. His people say they've been collecting money on the sort of schedule they hoped. His ads are already running, although party regulars would think that it's too early to begin a media blitz. His ads joke about the rematch theme the Duke's people came up with.

He's been on the campaign trail almost a month officially but the real race began long ago as the hopefuls began lining up support.

He has a joke about his two-year-old. Lindsay had her second birthday a week ago Sunday and the precocious child blew out the candles and said, "Tommy for Governor."

He plans to win and believes he can. Right now he's trying to make it clear to people that the choice, as the pollsters say, is between the Duke and the lieutenant governor.

His people say that the only problem they see is making sure people don't perceive the Duke as the only alternative to Ed King.

"They (Dukakis campaigners) are telling people that things were better four years ago. No doubt that's true, but they weren't that much better. No one was happy with the way things were then."

Tommy's public speeches don't spell it out the same way but what he has to say and does say is that while King and Dukakis are different on some social issues, they are basically the same.

"I am convinced I can run and be successful by pinning the candidates down on the issues," he said.

"I am talking about provoking a fundamental change in government, based on our common sense. I want to shake up the foundations of the State House."

The sacred cows he is ready to do battle with include:

—Civil service. He wants merit hiring and promotions, saying that civil service hasn't done what it's supposed to and that because everyone is hired as a provisional first, it isn't even used.

"No one takes a test before getting a civil service job," he says.

—The state's public school program. He complains too many graduate without being able to read or write at Grade 9 level.

—Housing. He wants to see a program aimed at rehabilitating abandoned housing units. The units would be turned over to the reclaimers.

—Freezing the residential property tax assessments. He wants the individual tax burden lessened. He wants to wipe out the nickname Taxachusetts.

"This is the classic underdog challenge," O'Neill said. He decried what King and Dukakis are doing with their campaigns as a fight between a 1965 brand of conservatism vs. a 1965 brand of liberalism.

☐For the past three days, a special team of 22 members has been evaluating the Cohasset Junior-Senior High School for accreditation from the state. While in the schools, team members visited classes and talked to students and staff, at random. The results of their findings will be delivered in a formal written report later this year.

☐What could be better than a gourmet dinner by candlelight? And when that dinner has been carefully prepared by Joe Burbank, whose art is by no means limited to the canvas and is shared by good friends and neighbors, all is right with the world.

It's rumored that Joe awoke with the dawn to plan, shop and cook for the big event. And it all had to be done without the support and encouragement of Gigi who was attending her class reunion. Nevertheless, dinner at the Burbanks has become somewhat of a media event and this one was no exception. Whether it was the special veal entree or the tasty cheesecake dessert, Joe and his neighbors from Old Pasture Road dined royally on epicurean delights in the Burbank tradition.

☐Charlotte Saikowski, chief editorial writer for the "Christian Science Monitor" will speak on Poland and the Soviet Empire at the League of Women Voters United Nations Dinner on Saturday, Oct. 24. The dinner which will feature Szechuan chinese cooking will begin with a social hour at 6:30 p.m. in Trueblook Hall. For further information, call 383-9766 or 383-0247.

☐Suffolk University's Society of Physics Students (SPS) has been designated a 1980-81 outstanding society of physics students chapter and is the recipient of two notable physics awards.

Dr. Walter Johnson of Cohasset, Chairman of the Physics Department at Suffolk, is advisor to the school's SPS Chapter.

The Outstanding Chapter Award was given to only 36 of the 500 SPS chapters in the United States and Canada. It recognizes the high quality of a chapter's activities during the academic year.

☐Professor Edward Derringh of Cohasset is on the Wentworth Institute of Technology Industrial Advisory Committee convening for its Fall Meeting this week.

The committee is composed of more than 100 representatives of industry, alumni and faculty. Video game

Riddle's Market won't be getting its requested video game licenses since the board of selectmen wisely listened to Police Chief John DeBassio.

The selectmen showed the town that they mean to do everything they can to keep under-age youth from being given the occasion to acquire liquor.

Our young people seem to be able to find liquor even without the blessings of authorities. The school system is doing what can be done to educate the young away from too early use of intoxicants.

And our town fathers are coming down hard on any business that traffics, even unwittingly, with alcohol for the young.

There will never be an iron clad way of keeping alcohol and the young in separate places. There will never be a perfect system of enforcement.

But we are proud of the efforts being made by all the community leaders involved: the selectmen, the police chief, the school committee and superintendent.

Gleason bequest

Emily Gleason left the Paul Pratt Memorial Library $1,000 in her will.

The gesture bespoke the years of giving she had already devoted to the library and the town.

It's not the sort of thing that generally supplies the meat for editorial comment. But this is a different year. The library hours have already been cut back, the book buying power of the library has been diminished and Librarian Richard Hayes worries that next year may see further cutbacks.

The reason we comment editorially on the particular gift to the library is to suggest that other people do the same.

Hayes said that if 20 people a year donated an amount similar to this gift, he could make up for the cuts necessitated by Proposition 2½.

Donations are always welcomed by the Library or the Friends of the Library.

A bow to Emmons

Congratulations to Ron Emmons and the entire cast of "The Young and the Fair."

The high school's latest dramatic production didn't fill the auditorium but then even the Cohasset Dramatic Club says it wouldn't be able to fill that hall for a play.

The cast did a laudable job on the production. They deserve more community support.

Those old school days

By Gilbert Tower

Looking back

People are continually urging that more articles on reminiscences be sent to the local paper. Everyone goes to school and early days at school are always interesting.

The writer's first school was opposite the junction of North Main St. and Jerusalem Road. It was taught by Miss Suzie Stoddard who lived across the triangle. To get people interested in the school work Miss Stoddard would plant some peas, or beans, and the children would watch them germinate.

I imagine that that is now, and always has been, standard procedure for the first class in school. The time has now been reached when small one room schools have been given up and the North End School, which was a one room school, disappeared years ago.

There was the Center School on top of the rock where the Episcopal Church now stands. That was moved to a location overlooking the bluff at the end of the Common adjoining Mr. St. John's miscellaneous collection of all kinds of things including his store. Everyday when going to the Osgood School the writer passed by the spot where the corner stone of the new Episcopal Church would be. To a boy it was interesting that a hollow place in the ledge was picked out for the corner stone. The writer remembers seeing one of Mr. Lyman D. Willcutt's stone masons mix a batch of concrete and fill the place in the rock where the corner stone would be. It was amazing that that batch of liquid concrete would harden and become a part of the corner stone of the Episcopal Church.

The little Center School house building overlooking St. John's store and the south end of the Common was at that time used by the Episcopal Church to hold meetings. Eventually the Center School building was moved to a space in front of the Osgood School on Elm St. and it became a work shop. Changes succeed each other rapidly. The big, old Osgood School did very well for some years, then the High School on Pond St. was built. The Osgood School in its turn was demolished and the Ripley Road School became the Joseph Osgood School.

After one year at the North End School the writer was sent to the Osgood School on Elm Street where the first grade there was taught by Miss Annie Souther. Miss Bailey of Scituate taught art. Miss Bailey, over a hundred years old now, is said to be still living in Scituate. The Principal was Mr. Charles Jacobs. He was very nervous and maintained very strict discipline. He undertook to teach French, and his simple sentences such as "Voila la fenetre" provided a good start in French. Mrs. Schuman taught German in private classes.

Miss Annie Souther always wore an apron. She put the apron on back-to and tied the strings in front and then pulled the strings to bring the apron around front. It was always interesting to watch that procedure every morning. Miss Souther enforced discipline with a little rattan rod about a foot long. She made the children hold out their hands whether they had done anything wrong or not. Her glasses would reflect so that she could see what was going on in the rear. She said she had eyes in the back of her head.

Every day after school the writer went down to the cove and watched workers. That was fascinating and instructive. In the rear of the wagon and carriage shop Mr. James Denithorn put together parts for wheels. The writer would sit on his bench and Mr. Denithorn working at his vice was very interesting to watch. He would start with a hub of elm wood and cut staggered recesses for spokes. They would be carefully wedged tight so as to stay in.

In the front part of the carriage shop, on the first floor, would be Pratt, who assembled the hub, spokes and rims, supplied by outside shops. The wooden rim would be given a preliminary bending

The tape player was returned

Letters

To the Editor,

Some of my faith in the future has been restored. I am pleased to report that my daughter's tape-radio player has been returned.

I know how difficult it was for a parent to love a child so much, as not to protect them, but to make sure the right thing was done. I thank this parent.

A special "thank you" to a friend of my daughter's and the person who took the player. This special person served as a "go-between" and came out of it still friends to both.

The 'Vino' was a soft drink

To the Editor:

It bothered me greatly to pick up the Oct. 14 edition of the Cohasset Mariner and see a picture of a teenage girl holding a container of "vino" while participating in the Sunday Columbus Day parade. It looks like, "Yipee-do, come join the fun — who cares if she is only 16 and not a legal age to drink?" I care.

Responsible small town journalism should be able to do better.

Dianne Taylor
Cohasset

[As reported by photographer Greg Derr, the "vino" in question was a soft drink, not wine. Such information should have been included in the photo caption. Ed.]

You can't take him anywhere

By Paul Steven Stone

I shouldn't have let him come with me to Angelo's last week. I can see that now. But he'd been on his best behavior lately, and when my daughter Katie scrambled into the car he just sort of climbed into the back seat before I could say anything. So it wasn't as if I'd actually invited him along.

The difficulties began before we set foot inside the supermarket. The entrance to Angelo's was barricaded by two middle-aged men armed with tubular coin collectors and fistfulls of tootsie rolls. You could see they belonged to a gang, for as with all gangs theirs set a standard of dress to which its members stylishly conformed.

"Help us help retarded children," their yellow vests proclaimed, and on the bottom flap pockets in which they stored enough tootsie rolls to undo half the dental work in Scituate was emblazoned the name of their particular tribal order — the Knights of Columbus.

Like many others, I had held erroneous impressions about this apparently respectable social order. I knew of their good deeds, their civic involvement, their many charities. Unwitting child that I was, I walked up to their coin-jingling barricade and thought I had nothing to fear except the loss of a few lonely coins in the service of a good cause.

Of course I now see the error, and the danger, in such innocent assumptions. Whereas most gangs encourage their members to relate to the general public on a purely physical level, the Knights of Columbus seem to work exclusively in the domain of the psyche. There's none of this rearranging the basic elements of your face when you get worked over by a Knight who knows what he's doing. The jabs are more subtle, and in their subtlety far more penetrating.

Do all lambs walk to their slaughter with a smile? I was certainly smiling as I walked with my two companions up to one of the gang members.

"Hi Andy," I called, recognizing a familiar face atop the yellow vest.

"Hi Paul," he answered innocuously enough. "And who is this?"

Fatherly pride caused me to answer, "My daughter Katie," but I see now that he was referring to my second companion — my ego. And it was to ego he directed his remark when he told me, "I liked your column last week. For once I managed to stay awake, you know."

That was it! The strike was swift and bloodless. I dunked a few coins into the can and Katie harvested a tootsie roll.

What craftmanship, what pride of art. I look at his words now and I grudgingly conceive the genius that guided their construction.

"I liked your column last week. For once I managed to stay awake, you know."

I wonder how many other perfect arrows he had crafted that day? Did each innocent donor, distracted by his tootsie roll, receive a zinger of comparable quality?

"I liked your column last week. For once I managed to stay awake, you know."

Ego started in right away.

"Did you hear that?" he said. "He liked your column, you connected, you're a star in this town, brother; a real celebrity."

I tried to ignore him, of course, but it didn't take long before I was seduced by the fragrance of his suggestions. It was a father/husband/shopper who stepped onto the automatic door opener, but, alas, it was a shining celebrity who strutted through the door.

"Don't open that tootsie roll," I instructed my charming daughter in a manner so benign and dignified that one might have expected her to curtsy in response. She didn't curtsy, however; she frowned.

"Let's go over to the newspaper rack right away," ego suggested. "We can count how many Mariners they've got left, maybe leave one of them open to what's obviously the most important page in the paper."

"We're here to pick up some sherbet," I reminded ego. "We can stop by the newspaper rack on the way out."

"Okay, okay, okay," ego said, obviously miffed. "Maybe it's better that way."

"Better?" I asked. "Why?"

"Well you heard that guy, didn't you? He as much as told you that you put him to sleep every week."

"Let's get chocolate," Katie insisted, pulling on my arm.

"Shh!" I said, pulling my arm back. "Daddy's thinking." I turned to ego. "But he said he liked this week's column."

"Sure he did," ego laughed. "That's the same kind of pleasure you get when the dentist pulls back his drill to wipe his nose. Face it, Paul Steven, you're the town bore. Ever since you started your column the local consumption of sleeping pills has dropped significantly. Ever notice those folks who fall asleep on the benches in front of Angelo's ... ?"

"You mean ..."

"That's right: they were reading your column. Most of them nodded off after one or two paragraphs."

"Oh my goodness," I moaned.

I pulled my collar up around my face and pulled out half a gallon of orange sherbet from the cooler.

"Daddy, I want chocolate!" Katie demanded.

"Give the kid some chocolate," ego suggested. "She might start making a fuss, and you wouldn't want to be noticed, would you?"

"No," I shouted in alarm. "Someone might recognize me."

I grabbed a small container of chocolate ice cream and ran towards the cash registers, dragging Katie in tow.

"Don't look that way!" ego warned me.

"Why?" I asked nervously. I was holding the sherbet in front of my face, pretending to read the list of ingredients.

"That's the newspaper rack. It's probably filled to bursting with unsold Mariners. But you know what the worst thing is?"

"What? No, don't tell me."

"Everybody assumes that you know how bad your column is."

"They do?"

"You bet. Couldn't you tell just by the way that fellow was speaking. He knew he wasn't saying anything you didn't already know."

"He did?"

"There's only one thing worse than a bore, and that's a bore who knows he's a bore."

I paid for sherbet and ice cream, and carried Katie to the car. In truth, I had hoped to outrun my ego, who at the most is 4'2" in his running shoes, but the little devil was already at the car when we arrived.

"Go away," I said angrily. "This is the last time I'll ever take you with me."

"Where did you learn to run like that?" he asked me suddenly. "I never thought of you as fast before."

"Fast?" I said, struck by the idea.

"Did you ever think of taking up running?"

"Come on," I said. "Me?"

"Don't be so modest," ego said, climbing into the back seat. "You run pretty good, you know ..."

"You really think so?" I said, smiling.

"... for an old man."

Those old school days...

after being steamed. The blacksmith would then measure the circumference and weld a steel rim which would fit over the wooden rim after the wood had been expanded by the steam warming in the fire. On the second floor of the wagon and carriage shop the vehicles were painted. They had to be hauled up to the second floor platform.

Another very interesting shop for a boy to visit was Arthur Higgin's boat building shop at the head of the cove. Arthur Higgins was very patient with the boys and let them watch every step in the procedure of boat building. He would make models by joining together flat slabs of soft pine which could be taken apart to show the spacing of frames on which planks would be attached.

Arthur Higgins builit two kinds of small boats. One kind was made of planks on frames. Another kind was made of narrow strips of cypress which would be joined together by galvanized steel nails driven in to hold the strips together edgewise. They were good boats and lasted many years.

Who would now imagine that in Cohasset we used to have a Chinese Laundry opposite the end of Stockbridge Street. Then next to that Manuel Salvadore had a bowling alley. This collection of buildings at the head of the cove was disorderly and it is a great improvement now to have Kimball's By-the-Sea Motor Inn.

Where Hugo's Lighthouse is now used to be some buildings, before my time, where mackerel were packed for shipment to the West Indies and other places where that fish was a popular food. In the summer the ocean and bays, and inlets were alive with mackerel along the Cohasset shore.

Their story has been well told in the history books. Mackerel were caught by hand line, packed in barrels with salt and sent away. The business of coopering was necessary to provide the barrels. Anyone who has never seen a barrel made by a cooper has missed an experience. To make a barrel now requires some clever tricks. Barrels, kegs, small piggins, firkins and hog's heads, at the other extreme, were needed years ago. Now-a-days cardboard and wooden boxes are much cheaper and have many advantages. Ships going on voyages had to carry barrels of water.

Sir Francis Drake destroyed the water barrels intended to be carried by the Spanish of the Armada. Those barrels having been destroyed by Drake at Lisbon was one of the reasons the attack by the Spanish Armada was a failure. The trade of coopering was carried on by many Cohasset men. Staves had to be supplied and sapplings from swamps would be split to make hoops.

'The Young and the Fair' well done

"The Young and the Fair," done by students from the high school was professional, serious, thought-provoking.

Power vs. morality played the stage as the young actors took the parts of college students under the direction of Ron Emmons.

Karen Ekberg showed strong acting talent in a role that played poorly could have been melodramatic. Bravo!

Amy Urmson was effective in her role on the negative side of the issue at hand. She generated a shrewd sense of mellifluence .

Others in the cast included: Samantha Barrett, Missy Barcomb, Susan Douglas, Joanna Fone, Elaine Mullen, Maureen Buckley, Tina Birmann, Maureen Kelley, Cathy Hoy, Kerry Crehan, Julie Atkinson, Katee Duffy, Tammy Karcher, Christine Barrett and Suze Barrett.

They should all be singled out for special praise. The play was well done.

A testimonial dinner will be given in his honor on Thursday, December 3 at Hugo's Kimballs.

Tickets may be obtained by contacting one of the following people: Donald Clark, 749-5319l; A. J. Antoine, 383-1527; Gerard Keating, 383-0672; Herb Towle, 383-6310; Bob Driscoll, 749-0196; Arthur Clark, 383-1195; or Gerard Stanton, 383-0944.

60 Plus Harvest Fair

Village shop talk

By Larry Fone

Good news...Last week in my column I reported a lost kitten. Fortunately the owner and this fine little cat found each other. The way to protect your animal, especially the young ones, is to put your name and telephone number on a collar. Local vets can order a collar for you. They cost from $4 mail order to $8. Not too much to spend if you care for your pet. Also many of us carry a pet alert card in our wallet. This card is available through the Animal Rescue League of Boston. I'll try to get some to have in my shop. Also there is a "Pet Hot Line" 329-4428, 24 hour answering.

But in Cohasset for a lost pet your best bet is first call the police, second, call Richard Yocum the animal officer, third, put an ad in the Mariner. All these folks need a good description. But best of all if you care for your pet, especially young ones, don't let them out alone til they can figure out where home is...and don't let the kids no matter what age take a animal on a bicycle, to unfamiliar territory. A pet is family...treat him that way.

Often, when a pet needs a home, the local veterinarians will help. Never found one yet who wouldn't...Try!

More good news...The historic buildings in Cohasset Village are getting some T.L.C. A fine paint job in a subtle pewter grey being done by David Wadsworth the curator. The building will be looking top drawer in a couple of weeks. The accent color on doors and signing will be a muted red. I am doing the signing with the help of Greg Wall of "The Wooden Nickel." The face lift should be top notch. Though much of the materials have been donated, labor too, most of the dollars come out of the coffers of the Cohasset Historical Society. So many members work so hard to raise money and it can be so quickly spent.

Perhaps besides becoming a member, minimum membership $5, really you might want to contribute $5 for all the purchases and renovations constantly being done. Also the Lothrop House needs furniture, prints and someone must have a grandfather clock. All items given will have an appropriate memorial plaque. Call Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, President C.H.S., 383-0773.

Also the Lothrop House is becoming a very special place for weddings, receptions and elegant gatherings. Time to plan ahead and get your reservation. Come look see at the house. Full kitchen facilities. The rate is also reasonable. Call Mrs. Parker.

If you like to change colors, walls, woodwork as much as I do you must look at the color sample display of Moore paints at the Cohasset Hardware. Super.

It appears that some parents might want to counsel their kids on how to shop.

All shopkeepers in Cohasset try very hard to provide attention to youngsters and teenagers and most kids are just as good in a shop as they are at home. However wandering groups of young folks, provide a problem with shop owners. Especially groups who have the "loud mouth" spokesperson and the typical "smart aleck."

Our shops are places of business, not occasional recreation. Guess just a sense of good manners is all that is needed.

Shop, visit Cohasset.

Folks who enjoy pizza should take advantage of Gino's coupons. The double cheese offering is just great.

SAVORING SCULPTURE by the Cohasset seaside are sculptor Dennis Kowal and Shiffi Jordan of the Cohasset office of Jack Conway, Realtor. This is one of the works Kowal will exhibit during an open house planned for 1 to 5 p.m. Oct. 25 at 505 Jerusalem Rd., Cohasset. Kowal and Jordan are standing on one of the several balconies that the house features.

This Halloween, treat the little kids to cones.

Deer Hill Outdoor School postponed

Outdoor School has been postponed a year, if not scrapped all together.

A decision will be made on the program during the school committee's budget discussions this winter. But that decision will involve whether the program will be held in the 1982 school year.

School Committee member Diane Kornet suggested the program could be put off for this year with the thought of reinstituting it as a Grade 6 program next year.

It has been a tradition for the students in Grade 5 of Deer Hill to go to Outdoor School. The tradition began about 10 years ago and until last year Camp Wing in Duxbury was the location. Last year the group went to Thomson's Island.

Mrs. Kornet's suggestion came after Eugene Crowell, school superintendent, explained that teachers in other grades had been offered the extra assignment, which would have paid $107 extra, and only one teacher indicated interest.

Crowell said he and Deer Hill Principal Ken Ekberg were considering the first week in June as a likely time for the trip. It would have lasted four days and cost students $88 each.

At the recent open house at Deer Hill there was a sign up asking parents interested in volunteering to chaperone the event to sign up. No one signed up.

Mrs. Kornet, who is the parent of a fifth grader, said she hadn't seen the sign-up sheet. Both she and Committee member Martha Gjesteby have received calls from parents concerned about Outdoor School. The other members have not been contacted.

Mrs. Kornet said postponing the program from fifth to sixth grade would give the class a nice experience to close their time at Deer Hill.

"It would also give us some time to think the program through and keep us from making a hasty decision. I've heard some strong feelings in favor of it. Some parents were shocked and surprised."

School shorts

Sports problem

The school committee is expected to meet tomorrow night (Thursday) in closed session to talk about a problem in the high school sports program.

Members of the junior varsity soccer team waited through a portion of the school committee meeting Monday night at the high school only to find that not only would the matter be closed to the public but also that even the school committee couldn't talk about it that evening.

The rules of an executive session called to discuss someone's professional reputation require that the person or persons involved must be given 48 hours notice and a chance to be present.

Outside the meeting team members didn't want to talk about whatever it was that precipitated the need for a closed session.

"It's fragile," one student said. "I wouldn't want to do anything to tip the balance."

Policy review

School committee policy is undergoing a review.

This week committee members looked at policies that deal with their role, their relationship with the superintendent and the way they should gain information.

In two of the three policies minor changes of terminology were worked out to eliminate ambiguity. The changed wording will come up again in one month's time for formal vote.

The process of looking at three policies at each meeting will continue.

Executive session

School Committee went into executive session Monday to discuss a staff matter. They did not return to public session.

'Table Manners' to be presented

By David Wadsworth

The Cohasset Dramatic Club, beginning its 1981-82 season, will present Alan Ayckbourn's "Table Manners" at the Cohasset Town Hall on the evenings of Nov. 19, 20 and 21.

Written in 1973, "Table Manners" is one-third of the author's trilogy called "The Norman Conquests." Ayckbourn himself is a British playwright who had burst on the theatrical scene during the early 1970's with several new plays which were acclaimed by audiences and critics alike. His play "Absurd Person Singular," was produced on Broadway during the 1974-75 season even as "The Norman Conquests" was having a successful engagement at the Globe Theater in London.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's production at the Town Hall marks the local premier of this Ayckbourn play. Directing the performance is Valerie Lester, who most recently directed for the Dramatic Club, "The Importance of Being Earnest," the 1979 fall presentation. At Harvard University she has directed Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," and for the Loeb Experimental Theater at Harvard, she directed the Medieval Mystery Play "Noah."

In addition, Mrs. Lester has done extensive volunteer work directing drama workshops for young people in the Hatherly School, Scituate.

Production manager for "Table Manners" is George Hamacher, a veteran of numerous Cohasset Dramatic Club productions. Stage Manager is Alice Duffy, Set Designer, Wayne Miessner, and Stage Secretary is Julia Jordan. The lighting effects will be done by Clark Young. These, to name a few, are a part of a production staff which represents extensive experience with the Dramatic Club and other theatrical groups.

Dramatic Club & Selectmen discuss fees

Members of the Cohasset Dramatic Club met with selectmen last Wednesday night to talk about town hall fees.

Club president Florence Kelley said her group will need heat for about three to five dates near show time. She estimated that five days/nights would be necessary for the winter production while no heat might be used for the May production.

Several members agreed with Kelley, that during set construction, doors are often left open to air paint fumes.

Chairman Henry Ainslie said the fee was established strictly to offset energy costs. "The system should apply equally for everyone," he said.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur asked the Club if they had a flat rate in mind. Treasurer Sheldon Ripley said, "We would be functional at $100 a show. He reminded selectmen that shows are usually produced at a loss, when you included the costs of paint, lumber and total set construction."

Ripley also stated that the Cohasset Dramatic Club wants to pay their way. However, the $30 charge per day/night would surely put the group out of business he said.

Selectmen have tabled the matter and plan to act quickly since "Table Manners" is scheduled for Nov. 19, 20 and 21. The board will total costs of electricity and heat for the days requested by the club.

Leary's office leaves little time

John Leary says the only negative part of his attending the annual meeting of the National Association of College Admissions Counselors in Philadelphia recently was that his office in the organization didn't leave him enough time for the workshops he wanted to see.

Leary, high school guidance counsellor, is the president of the New England region.

Newman elected to C.A.C.G. board

The board chairman of Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc., Retired State Supreme Court Justice Paul Reardon, of Hingham, has announced the recent election of Mary Newman, of Cambridge, to C.A.C.G.'s board. In a statement issued this week Reardon said, "As C.A.C.G. expands its board statewide I am extremely happy to welcome as a new director Mary Newman, a representative in the General Court for many years, an expert on law and legislation, and an avowed opponent of casino gambling in Massachusetts."

Joining in the announcement was C.A.C.G. president, Carol Oteri, of Hull. She said, "Now that a selectman from Hull has revealed plans to amend the late filed casino bill to allow ONE casino per COUNTY it has become more evident than ever that casino proposals threaten every corner of the Commonwealth. The issue is not and never has been 'one casino for Hull' or 'one casino for Adams' and people who believe that it is are fooling themselves. Thinking people in other sections of the state do not expect others to fight their battles for them. For this reason they are willing to join with us and roll up their sleeves to prevent the legalization of casino gambling. Mary Newman, from Middlesex County, is a well respected, hard working individual who will be a tremendous asset to our cause."

Newman's comments on her affiliation with C.A.C.G. were, "I believe that the support of essential public services should not be dependent on gambling in any form. People who play 'games' of chance are frequently those least able to pay. It is bad enough for the state to encourage them to gamble. It is worse for the state to hand over a license to exploit their need."

Newman, a state representative from 1953 to 1954 and from 1957 to 1970, has a long history of public service. From July, 1971 to January, 1975 she was Cabinet Secretary for the Massachusetts Office of Manpower Affairs. She is currently a member of the Visiting Committee of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration. She was regional director of Health, Education and Welfare for the New England Region from July, 1976 to March, 1977. She was also a member of the Massachusetts Parole Board from 1955 to 1957.

Mrs. Newman holds honorary degrees from Regis College and from her alma mater, Swarthmore.

CCC flea market

The Cohasset Community Center parents committee will sponsor a giant yard sale and flea market Saturday, Nov. 7, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. outside the center.

In the event of bad weather, it will be held in the Town Hall. This will be the first fund raising event of the year, and all proceeds will be used for the benefit of the nursery school.

The items for sale will include clothing in good condition for all members of the family, toys, books, household items, sporting goods, some antiques and food.

Co-chairmen for this year's event are Rosemarie Mercurio and Mimi Aronsen. Spaces are available for individuals and can be obtained by calling either 383-6515 or 383-9886.

Donations of items will also be accepted at the center daily from 9 a.m. to noon.

Niner's wrap up their season

The Cohasset Niners' final luncheon and meeting for the 1981 season was held on Oct. 14.

Everything was perfect — lovely weather, a superb luncheon planned by Cynthia Leggett and Janet Rhodes, and of course prepared and served by the excellent staff at C.G.C. Madeline Hawkins and Jean Bailey did their usual fine work selecting the prizes.

The officers for the 1982 season are: chairman, Jean Hollingshead; co-chairman, Ann Reardon; secretary, Barbara Ireland; treasurer, Ann Cooper.

Four ball winners: 1st. flight, Ann Cooper and Doris Swain; 2nd. flight, Barbara Ireland and Helen Mathewson; 3rd. flight, Jean Chambers and Jean Hollingshead.

Ringers: Group A, Ann Cooper; Group B, Jean Chambers; Group C, Barbara Froio; Chip ins, Inga Bisbee; Alumnae Cup, Betty Jane Ruggles.

The Natalie Henchliffe Bowl was awarded to a very excited and well deserving Jean Chambers for the most improved.

We would like to thank Doris Swain for doing a great job to make 1981 such an active and enjoyable season.

Artists to speak at S.S. Art Center

A rare opportunity to hear two imaginative and unusual artists talk about their work will take place Sunday, Oct. 25 at the South Shore Art Center at 2 p.m.

The public is invited to attend to meet the artists and to hear them describe their creative process in producing the current exhibit, the "Wit-Knee Biennial."

Syma's work in glazed porcelain is in the form of whimsical bells, plates and "treasure boxes," each with a thought-provoking title.

Jim Ann Howard's paintings are done in mixed media in a variety of approaches to subject matter and also carry compelling titles that involve the viewer in the work.

The talk will start promptly at 2 and be followed at 3 with refreshments.

There is no admission fee for this unique opportunity to discuss the work with the artists themselves.

Super Mom suffers through first dance

By Patricia Desmond

The moon with her pale trail of cold light was full and the town by the cold and black sea was quiet.

From the window of the house of Super Mom shone the paler white light of the electronic tube.

Passersby rode silently by in the dimly lit chill of fall. Inside Super Mom sat curled on a sofa, wearing fluffy, blue slippers lined with warmth and a mock velvet bathrobe. She nibbled cheese-its and talked inconsequential nonsense while Beloved nodded a soft, Unhuh, without missing a blink of the baseball game.

Most of the children were safe away, folded with kisses and hugs in their small but separate sleeping closets, sometimes called bedrooms.

Mit slept in Cribby with several of his favorite people clutched close beneath the layers of blankets. Gosh slept fitfully, restless as always. Wren slept not at all, instead he sat in the darkened room staring at his toys, wondering when his father would notice he could fight sleep longer than a speeding bullet.

Tap, tap, came a sound at the brightly marked door.

Super Mom opened it in seconds, beaming with pride and some concern. July, who only recently became a Sixth Grader, was home, delivered in tact from her first real school dance, delivered back by the father of a friend.

"No one gets a ride from their own mother," July had explained earlier in the week. She couldn't explain by what magic the children of the chosen drivers of the caravans wafted into the dance.

She stood in the doorway smiling, her lipstick smudged, and her coat unbuttoned. She gave a victory wave to the car in the driveway as it hummed back onto the road.

"Did you have a good time?" Super Mom asked, remembering all the silly questions mothers are supposed to mumble through for time immemorial.

"It was okay," July said, getting ready to heave her coat on the corner of the hallway.

"Hang it up," Super Mom admonished not waiting for her indescretion.

"How many times did you dance," she continued to pry.

"A couple," July said, "It was sort of good but boring."

July headed for the kitchen, ice cream on her brain. Super Mom followed in magnetic tow, worrying for her oldest child and only daughter. Worrying that all the pain of growing up was starting now, a little sooner than she remembered it had begun in her life.

"But what was the dance like?" Super Mom continued the interrogation.

"Everyone just dances if they want to. You don't dance with anyone," July said picking a dish from the cupboard slowly.

"I danced once," she altered her story. "No one asked me even then. I think it's more fun to go to the movies. Can I see an R movie this weekend?"

"I don't go to R movies," Super Mom answered.

"I bet Beloved would take me, if you said it was okay," July continued.

"Gosh would want to go too, afterall he's only a year younger than you are," Super Mom continued fighting this train of emerging adulthoodidity.

"He's still a child," the child said.

"I have to talk with your grandmother now, I promised to call her as soon as you got home," Super Mom decided the best answer was no answer at all.

"I'll ask her what she thinks," Super Mom just threw this in to begin adding weight to her ultimate decision.

An 11-year old at a school dance was troublesome enough to think about. An 11-year-old at the scene of violent outrage in widescreen color was beyond Super Mom's ability to cope.

"What do other mothers do," she wondered as she dialed her own Super Mom long distance. She knew her mother wouldn't know. Anymore than her mother could tell her how to explain the problems of puffing grass or the dangers of the world of the 80's.

"Hi, Grammy," July took the phone first, "The dance was real super. I can't wait for the next one. I think they're having a Halloween costume thing...

"Yeah, I danced all the time...Yeah...HaHa...The boys were silly. One boy got expelled for throwing a glass of purple punch at a teacher...

"Yeah, I like dancing better than anything...will you come by Sunday?"

You gotta be 30 sometime

By Patrice Stoddard Burke

I remember the day vividly; the sky was an ominous gray color, the wind howled as the approaching storm neared.

The waves with their enormous white caps came splashing high above the seawall and onto the causeway. In all actuality the day was nothing of the sort. It was a simply beautiful warm and sunny July 11th typical of many of the glorious days we had last summer.

It was as if even the weather wouldn't let me wallow in my self pity. I still don't understand what I thought would happen. After all it wasn't like my hair would turn gray over night or that the crows feet would suddenly turn into eagles claws. It didn't necessarily mean that everyone would snicker when I went shopping in the juniors department or that the salesgirl would automatically direct me to the Misses.

It wasn't as if the kids would suddenly give me one of those looks that say act your age Mom when I'd go dancing around the house or even that my husband would suggest a short nap in the afternoon for the sole purpose of me getting sleep. Even the neighbors weren't consoling when I told them. After all it was the year before that my husband went around pretending I was thirty. (Sometimes it gets pretty taxing being married to the second Johnny Carson, but that's a story in itself.)

The entire morning of my thirtieth birthday I pondered on what I thought the perfect thirty year old woman is. You must take into consideration that I have a very difficult time judging ages but here goes: They usually are of medium height, their hair is always short and neat, their make-up is perfect (never loud or brassy), they wear Pendleton suits and Cobbies, they never carry a shoulder bag but have a small stylish purse always with them, their pocket books are very neat and they can find anything in a moment's notice, their checkbook is always balanced and they know exactly how much money they have on them (You can bet that their faces have never turned a hue of ruby or their mouths go agog when they are at a checkout and discover they lack the financial sustenance to pay the bill.) I have found that's a great way to get to know the checkout girl and other friendly and not so friendly people in line.

These thirty year olds actually go so far as to have their dollars in the bill fold and their change in the change purse. (I mean, come on, everyone knows that that's for decoration and all change is supposed to get thrown into the bottom of the pocketbook, again it's much more exciting to say to the clerk, "Oh, wait a minute, I'm sure I have the change" (and then go rummaging about, wondering if you really do). One thing you'll always notice about this type is they always know where they are going. You can bet they never get lost at drive-ins, have to have their husbands paged or have the bundle boy walk all over the parking lot with them to find the car you're sure has been stolen. They generally are well versed on current affairs and if married know everything about husbands, children, cooking and flowers. Their homes are immaculate and never would you open a closet and have the contents fall out on you.

After inventing my mold for the perfect thirty-year-old I took a good look at myself.

I must admit that my inner self has matured nicely over the past few years and I really feel I know what I want out of life and how to attain it or at least I'm trying. But that stereotype just did not fit me.

I started finding myself getting terribly depressed over that fact. I was a misfit, I wasn't like them at all. Then it hit me like a thunderbolt this miraculous revelation, or as (Johnny II always puts it, "The Stoddard way of rationalism").

It must be a mistake! It isn't time yet! I couldn't be thirty! I must still be twenty-nine! So, with a big sigh of relief and feeling ever so much better I continued my life as usual.

Coziness is catching

By Lois Martin

Much as I like clothes, I like my bathrobe best. It's the most important part of my wardrobe, I think. The uncertainty in that qualification means that I recognize I ought not be everyplace in it.

But the thing is, when I'm ready for my bathrobe, nothing else will do. While I'm open to options for daytime dress, come an evening when I'm going to stay home, there is only one garment that will do the trick.

And I've learned this is true for other women. But, in keeping with an attribute of which we're accused, the preeminence of the bathrobe is complex, not simple. There's much more to a bathrobe than meets the eye. When I buy one, I'm dead serious about my selection.

It's got to be cozy. I've tried a few flimsies in an effort to waft around the kitchen. But there's that danger of dragging my loose sleeve through bacon grease or freezing to death in our early morning economy which is 60 degrees.

Besides the goal is to be comfortable. Things that don't cover much aren't. My husband says Ringling Brothers Circus has better organization of its acts than our kitchen has. You know when an elephant's going to come on the scene in a circus, he says, and what it'll do. But action in my kitchen doesn't allow me to wear a Frederick's of Hollywood product. My comfortable robe offers ground cover.

I'm not wild about splotchy prints in robes, though I've had those, too. And I don't want a zipper to deal with first thing in a day. No, give me long close sleeves of one warm color and it's own belt so long as it has loops.

Actually, there's a primary reason I need a nifty robe. It's because I go off duty when I put it on. My robe's a statement: "She won't do much more today...if anything."

It has only been with recent maturity and older children that I have kicked a habit that was downright foolhardy. In years past, if I'd put on my bathrobe by 6:30 p.m., outside urgencies required I leave the house in the car to run errands. I kept that up with some sense of triumph at being undiscovered in my nightwear highway gear until Aug. 9 of the year former President Richard Nixon resigned. That night, in merely following another car to pick up a family member, I got lost, ran out of gas, sent a minor into a restaurant/bar to the telephone while I cowered behind the wheel in my summertime goods, of which there wasn't enough to protect my reputation as a mother.

I never asked to run errands anyway.

But there's a bonus for my cohabitors in my robe wearing. They relax more, knowing I'm not up to overseeing important achievements around the house. Coziness is catching. One time after I'd returned from a trip, I donned my robe and started sashaying leisurely around the kitchen. And a son told me I looked nice. I hope I wasn't peaking back then.

To insure that's not so, I'm looking for a new robe. A winter white one, I think, perhaps with smart edging, one that would withstand being caught in by drop-ins whom I favor.

It looks like a long winter. No harm being ready to enjoy it. You'll know when I've found it. I'll toot the horn.

Top is the Scholastic Aptitude Test in math, second is the verbal SAT, which involves language. At the bottom of the page is the chart for the AP or advanced placement tests. A score of 3 or better on the test gives three semester hours of college credit. There were 61 seniors last year who took at least one AP test, 93 percent qualified for college credit.

The poet in residence at Deer Hill

[Editor's Note: This is a letter from Deer Hill Principal Ken Ekberg to the parents of the school.]
Dear Parents:

Deer Hill's resident poet Lewis Hyde, began his four-week program last Tuesday. During the first two days, all of the students spent a class period with him. They were introduced to the world of fairy tales and dreams and did a writing exercise after an informal get-acquainted discussion.

Mr. Hyde explained that the bulk of the work he will be doing, at Deer Hill will be with "core groups" — three groups of 12 students, one from each grade level, who will meet with him for one class period three times a week. He told the children if they were interested in doing more of the kind of work they did in their initial meeting, they could volunteer to join a core group, as long as they understood they would have to make up class work missed during the poetry lessons.

Since everyone expected that the number of volunteers would exceed the number of places in the core groups, it was decided, and conveyed to the children, that the fairest way to choose the groups would be to draw names from a hat. "If your name is not drawn," Lewis told the children, "well then, you were unlucky. And, if your name is drawn, you were lucky." This procedure was recommended to us by the Artists Foundation (which administers and funds the program). It is a method that has worked successfully in many school sites and also meets one of the Artists Foundations goals for residencies, which is that this be a noncompetitive experience.

Because of the small number of students at Deer Hill, we are fortunate that Mr. Hyde will be able to accommodate three core groups, instead of the usual one or two per school residency. The Artists Foundation, which began these programs 10 years ago, has found that given the usually short length of residency time, core group work has been the most effective way to make an impact in schools.

Staff and teacher education is another important aspect of the residency and the one that will carry over after the program is completed.

ALL students will benefit from the residency in many other ways: Mr. Hyde is scheduling as many 45-minute classroom visitations as possible during his "free" days. (He will be at the school working four days a week, with core groups meeting three of the days; the residency requires that the artist be "on site" 12 hours a week); when otherwise free, Mr. Hyde will be in his room for studio hours so students and teachers can drop in to talk about poetry; core group students will be encouraged to share their weekly lessons with their respective classes; plans are being made to integrate the residency with the visual arts and music programs and the library is fully keyed into the program; and, teachers will have the benefit of Mr. Hyde as a resource person from whom they can seek new creative writing techniques.

With a second poet, Kathi Aguero, to be in residence at the Joseph Osgood School beginning in late February, this dual residency was designed to make poetry/creative writing felt throughout the school year. Some activities that are planned are readings by core group students at each other's schools; a community reading/workshop with both poets in the early spring; a visual art/poetry exhibition, possibly at the South Shore Art Center, in the spring; and a book of poems from each residency as a final project.

Most important, the lasting effect of a residency program which places a professional artist in a school site, will be a new awareness among teachers and students of language and a sustained impact on language arts curriculum.

In summary, parents should understand that while this is going to be a concentrated, intensive experience for some students, all children will achieve an increased awareness of their own artistic and creative abilities as well as a new confidence in expressing themselves.

Sincerely,
Kenneth Ekberg, Principal Deer Hill School

—The Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill Schools' Artist-In-Residence Committee consists of Principals Kenneth Ekberg and John Creamer, teachers/site coordinators Joann Magoun and Marie Price, and parents Judy Bronstein, MaryLou Studds, Karin Bartow, Deanna Mulligan, and Jane Bishop.

—The Artists-In-Residence Program is administered by the Artists Foundation with funds from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, the National Endowment for the Arts, and local matching funds.

—Lewis Hyde will address the Deer Hill Communications Council at their October meeting to be held on Wednesday, Oct. 21, at 9:30 a.m., in the school library.

'Halloween Happening'

A special Halloween Happening will be held Saturday Oct. 31 from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Community Center of Cohasset.

For pumpkin carvers and decorators in Kindergarten through Grade 6, there will be a pumpkin contest featuring various categories such as best homegrown, most original, most beautiful and most natural. Pumpkins should be dropped off at noon for judging.

The center's weird and wonderful witch, Wanda, will lead a children's costume parade around the Common at 1 p.m. Any child in Kindergarten through Grade 3 is welcome to participate. Refreshments will be served to contest and parade participants.

Because the event has been planned for outside, in case of bad weather, it will be cancelled.

Skippers trip & fall to East Bridgewater

By Rob Tis

It looked like victory for the Skipper football team against East Bridgewater this Saturday, but they could not hold on as they suffered a 19-14 upset. This popped quite a big balloon which was launched after last week's thrashing of Middleboro.

The Skippers drew first blood in the first stanza after Bob Donahue broke out for a 29 yard run leaving the Skippers on the Viking 1 yard line. Quarterback Kevin Dooley took the ball over on the next play and Paul Buckley booted the point after to give the Skippers a 7-0 lead.

Bob Donahue, the Skippers big fullback, spearheaded the Skipper running attack almost single handedly with normally starting speedstars Jack McNeill and Joe Becker out with injuries.

The Skipper defense held the Vikings and Cohasset kept their lead until the half.

The Vikings, however, managed to score a touchdown early in the third quarter to bring them within 1 point of the lead.

The Skippers were still in command though and launched a spectacular drive which was capped by a picture perfect pass from fullback Donahue to tight end Bob Meers for a 15 yard touchdown play.

From here on the Skipper offense was continually stifled, hurt by lack of depth in the backfield. The Viking offense continued to roll however slowly chipping away two more touchdowns to secure their 19-14 victory.

Kowal to exhibit sculpture Oct. 25

National acclaimed sculptor Dennis Kowal, a Cohasset resident and a pioneer in the use of carved acrylic and steel in his work, will exhibit his sculpture at 505 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, from 1 to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 25.

The home, a contemporary sculpture in its own right, is the perfect setting for Kowal's work. Custom designed and built three years ago, the dramatic design of this concrete and glass structure with a strong Bauhaus influence, caused quite a sensation in this quiet New England town.

Rising up from its stark setting right opposite the ocean, with walls of glass, balconies, and an expansive roof top deck, the home commands spectacular views of the open ocean and Minot's Light from the front, and the Boston skyline in the rear. Sunrises and sunsets from this vantage point are unsurpassed. The unique design of this home gives the visitor the distinct feeling of being on a luxury ocean liner, particularly from the rooftop deck.

Kowal's sculptures are very much at home in this setting, with massive steel pieces arranged on the first floor wrap around deck and acrylic sculptures set in front of the walls of glass project rainbows on the white interior walls.

Kowal has won critical acclaim for his exhibits in New York, Boston, and Chicago, and his creations have gone into over 50 private collections.

His most well known piece locally, is his 13 ft. tall "Winged Migration #2" which dominates the garden of the new National Fire Protection Association headquarters at Batterymarch Park in Quincy.

The open house/exhibit will be hosted by Shiffi Jorden, of the Cohasset office of the Jack Conway Company, who is the listing broker on the Jerusalem Road property. The exhibit is free and open to the public. Wine and cheese will be served.

BSO series for children

The Boston Symphony is offering a series of three concerts for children on Saturday mornings, Dec. 12, Feb. 27 and April 3. The bus will leave the Joseph Osgood School at 9:45 a.m., returning at 1 p.m.

Movements from the works of Haydn, Beethoven, Mozart, Prokofiev, and Tchaikowsky will be included, also the Carnival of the Animals by Saint-Saens.

The ticket price has remained unchanged, and a series subscription must be purchased before Oct. 25 by writing or calling Mrs. James Mullen, 383-1993, or Mrs. David Sweeney, 383-1184.

Fire Department is out of money

Chief Piepenbrink worries about reduced services

By Donna Cogliano

The fire department has run out of money for overtime which means an immediate decrease in fire protection.

Whenever a man is sick, out injured or on vacation from today until the minute the coffers are refilled, the department will run one man short.

Now that may not sound like a great change. And as long as only one man is out at a time, it will be no great change.

As Chief Charles Piepenbrink said Monday, "If five or six men call in sick in the same day, I'll put a lock on the door."

He said he is thinking about taking the fire ambulance off the road.

"There are two choices, they can give me more money or I can reduce services," he said.

The town has already seen two service reductions in little more than a year in that department. First the fire station at Beechwood closed. Neighbors tried and failed to force the reopening of that station. Then the station at West Corner or North Cohasset was shut down.

As of today the only fire station in town in operation is the central station on Elm Street.

Arthur Clark, executive secretary to the selectmen, said the chief has yet to ask for a transfer of funds. The selectmen would have to vote on any request, forwarding it to the advisory board for further action.

The chief met with selectmen last Wednesday to discuss his overtime budget. Clark said the board was concerned because the money, $18,155 voted by town meeting last spring, was nearly gone at that point.

"We alerted him to it," Clark said.

The money was supposed to last until next July when the new fiscal year begins.

A deputy will be out on sick leave until January, but other than him, there has been sickness "a day here and a day there" said Piepenbrink. Nine sick days were taken in the first week of October compared to a total of ten days in the entire month of September.

Adivsory committee vice chairman Jim Lagrotteria said the fire department's overtime budget also ran low last year, but much later in the year.

Headquarters was previously run with four men. Since outlying stations were closed, headquarter's now maintains a shift staff of five men, with the sixth man out on vacation.

"Didn't closing the outlying stations help your man power?" asked Selectman Mary Jane McArthur. "It boils down to a staff of 25 persons," said

Homecoming was a winner

By Rob Tis

It was homecoming weekend for the Cohasset Skippers and they lived up to everyone's expectations as they romped over the Norwell Clippers, 22-6.

Both teams hung in a state of limbo during the first quarter, neither able to produce much offense and both made turnovers.

The Skippers got their act in gear in the second quarter. Quarterback Kevin Dooley hit a wide open Bob Meers 20 yards straight downfield and Bob legged it the rest of the way for a 55 yard pass play. Dooley then hit Joe Becker for the two point conversion.

The Skippers kicked off and almost as soon as Norwell got possession the Skippers capitalized on a Norwell fumble. The Skippers had to move fast and they did. With only 10 seconds showing on the time clock gluefingered Bob Meers pulled down another Dooley pass in the end zone, this time from 20 yards out.

Town dump gets a reprieve

The town dump on Cedar Street can continue on for another five years, according to a plan drawn up by E.J. Flynn Engineers of Middleboro for the board of health.

Town meeting will be asked to appropriate a still undisclosed amount of money — probably in December — for the operation.

State approval will be sought next week. The board of health scheduled a special meeting for 8:30 tonight (Wednesday) at their office on Elm Street to decide whether the engineer's plan would be accepted as it is.

There are 43.89 acres in the dump land. When the operation shuts down 5.7 years from now only eight to ten acres will be filled.

The state will not approve any further expansion of the dump, according to Fred DeFeo, chief engineer in the company's sanitary engineering division.

Large amounts of gravel and clay will be needed for the engineering plan. Unofficial estimates say the plan will cost in the neighborhood of $250,000.

The selection won't set a date for the special town meeting until they have a figure on the dump operation, Clark said Tuesday.

It will take about five weeks from the time the meeting is called until it can be held to allow for printing and official notice.

DeFeo said he may be able to have the figure by the end of next week.

"Provided the state approves the concept," he said.

The concept calls for a six foot layer of gravel over the entire landfill, plus a six inch cap of clay.

State officials have been arguing with the town over how much fill is needed over the lowland where expansion is sought. The low land has a high water table.There are a few places where no fill would be added before the landfill operation begins to expand but the average filled area involves four feet, DeFeo said.

The future of the dump will require a small transfer station where dumpers will unload their trash into recessed steel bins. The bins will then be moved to the actual landfill site as they are filled. The present machine can be used.

Overtime plagues Police

Police Chief John DeBassio has his men on continuing overtime these days just to keep the staffing at three men per shift.

He said Monday he is worried about the ability of his officers to work the extra shifts month after month.

"It's not as much a question of the overtime money as it is the productivity," the chief said in his office on Elm Street.

He and the selectmen have been discussing the selection of one or two new officers for a matter of months. Patrolman Jerry Doyle took a six month leave of absence beginning last July to try a job with the MIT security force. The chief said he believes Doyle will stay with his new position which pays more than the town.

The other opening was caused by the resignation of Patrolman Randy Feola in August.

Both slots have been filled on overtime as necessary while hiring procedures were worked out.

The selectmen voted recently to order psychological and medical examinations for any new patrolmen, prior to being hired.

The five men are listed on the permanent intermittent force, according to civil service testing.

Arthur Clark, executive secretary to the selectmen, said the board may select from those five men for the openings as they come up.

However the permanent intermittent list expired Sept. 24. A new exam for permanent intermittent will be held in November. Officials within the state Personnel Administration, the new name for civil service, say the town can expect the new list to be available next spring.

It normally takes six to eight months for results to be available to the applicants. It takes another two months, allowing time for appeals, before the list is certified.

This whole process means there won't be any new

Cohasset's week

No haunted house

There won't be a Haunted House in town this year but the Community Center is already working on plans for next year.

The Haunted House was operated by the Jaycees in years past. They have donated their equipment to the Community Center. But the old house is in serious disrepair and not considered safe.

The closest Haunted House this year is in Scituate on Cudworth Road.

Dogs ordered restrained

Last Wednesday selectmen ordered two large dogs restrained. They belong to Roger Rice of 71 Forest Ave.

Four neighbors met with selectmen to ask help before a child is seriously injured. So far - the dogs have allegedly killed one dog and injured another.

Joseph Mercurio said that both dogs tend to mix with children. A woman told selectmen about an incident that happened last week: one of the accused dogs stole a ball from a group of children and tore it to shreds. She said that parents are frightened for their children's safety.

One afternoon last week the Otter Hound charged at Kathleen Croninger who was walking her dog. She had to duck into a neighbor's house for shelter.

Dog Officer Richard Yocum said that he had spoken with Mrs. Rice who said she would comply with any request he made.

Fuel assistance

Applications for fuel assistance will be available at town hall on Tuesday, Nov. 3. Representatives of the South Shore Community Action Council will assist residents from 9:15 A.M. to 3 P.M.

Records are required. A letter or other proof of incomes should be presented including:

1. 13 weeks of pay checks (if employed) 2. social security 3. S.S.I. 4. AFDC (welfare) 5. unemployment 6. retirement income 7. other income, unpaid fuel (utility) bills (dated after Oct. 1).

For further information call Alfred Odermatt at 383-1283 or Marie McCarthy at 383-6567.

Unposted meeting

Yvette Rattenbury was called in to see the selectmen two weeks ago on the matter of her termination as a police department employee — but that meeting was not posted as required by the open meeting law.

Mrs. Rattenbury met with the board Thursday, Oct. 8, at town hall, the day after the regularly scheduled meeting of the board.

As of this Monday there was no record in the town clerk's office of that meeting. A book is kept in that office with each posted meeting. There was no notation on the meeting in the book.

Charles Hely, who handles allegations of violation of the open meeting law for District Attorney William Delahunt, said it would be up to the terminated employee to complain about the non-posted meeting.

He said nothing would be done unless she contests the lay-off.

Mrs. Rattenbury was hired five months ago to work as civilian clerk/dispatcher for the police department.

The police union had protested the filling of the job before Mrs. Rattenbury was employed. Since then the town was ordered by the state Labor Relations Board to negotiate with the union over the creation of the job. The town's only offer to the union was to terminate her. The union refused the offer at first, then accepted it when further attempts to negotiate failed.

Margin Court bids

Bids for the reconstruction of Margin Court will be opened at 8:30 tonight (Wednesday) at town hall.

The selectmen will open the bids on the job which was advertised according to the original plan rather than for the recent proposal to widen the road.

Selectmen received a letter from a Border Street resident who wants the sidewalk kept clear of snow.

"Before the snow is upon us, could there be a rule established to keep the sidewalks on Border Street clear?" she had written.

She explained that the school bus presently leaves children off at the motel to walk to Otis Avenue.

Chairman Henry Ainslie said last Wednesday the board would contact the highway department regarding the matter.

Flag accepted

Selectmen voted 3-0 to accept a flag gift from Mrs. Ferreira in memory of her husband John Ferreira. Selectman Rocky Laugelle said "Thank you very much," and noted that John Ferreira was a World War II veteran.

Music Circus license

Selectmen granted the South Shore Music Circus a weekday entertainment license for the 1982 season. Performances will take place from June 15 to Sept. 15.

As done in previous years, Selectmen will ask management to provide quiet entertainment during weeks that school is in session.

Fuel delivery bids

Selectmen opened bids for fuel delivery to town office buildings last Wednesday night.

Nightingale Oil of Braintree bid $1.10 per gallon of oil and $20 per hour oil burner service charge. Alco Oil of Cohasset bid $1.16 per gallon with a $20 service charge. The board voted to take the matter under advisement.

Executive Secretary Arthur Clark said that last spring the town was paying about $1.19 per gallon of oil.

Payment approved

Selectmen approved payment of $3,433 to Daniel Cotton, architect, for services involved in the heating job at town hall.

Two different traffic patterns were suggested in the detail work. Barbara Kearn, health board member, suggested the less expensive plan would be more appropriate. That probably means using the same road and locating the steel bins near the present recycling center.

The bins will be used to give the dump operator more control over where the trash is scattered. The bins are used at the Rockland dump and cost that town about $2,500 each. Three bins would be needed.

"It's too bad we can't use more of the land," Dr. C. Michael Bliss, board chairman, commented.

"The state is not happy with the landfill," DeFeo said.

Much of the land after this expansion would involve using ledge. DeFeo said ledge is not usable.

The area of expansion is behind the present peak. The operation is 92 feet above sea level now. When the back low lying land is filled, it will reach the same heights.

The present elevation is about 48 feet above sea level in the area to be filled. The water table there is at about the same level. The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering is requiring six-and-a-half feet of fill above the water table.

DeFeo said the state began the talks insisting on seven feet of fill.

"We compromised," he said.

Kearn pointed out that much of the expense of capping the dump is required by the state even if the landfill were to be abandoned right away.

One resident objected to the need to comply with state regulations. DeFeo said the state could take the town to court and have the dump closed in a week for noncompliance.

faces working for the town's police force at least until next spring.

Laura Rasmussen of the legal office of Personnel Administration said that exam and the expired list have nothing to do with the appointment at hand.

"To appoint to the regular force, the town may choose from anyone on the permanent intermittent force — provided the selectmen have formally appointed them to the permanent intermittent force and we've (Personnel Administration) approved the appointment," she said.

Chief DeBassio said he expects the results of the psychological and medical exams will be available this week or next.

Beginning next Monday the manpower problem will increase since one more man will be unavailable. Patrolman David Cogill will attend the Brockton Police Academy for a three month training session.

"It's too much to expect the men to work four, five or six months at that kind of pace," the chief said referring to the 16 hour days and loss of days off.

He said the shortage is interfering with the Crime Watch program he inaugurated last spring. He added that the shortage is interfering with regular training programs he would normally schedule at the end of the busy summer season.

Piepenbrink. With one man on vacation and another out sick, headquarters is left with a four man shift, which Piepenbrink says is unreasonable.

Lagrotteria asked the Chief if he was required by law to maintain a minimum staff. Piepenbrink said that he would not be in any violation if he reduced his minimum of staff on duty.

Lagrotteria said that the last couple months, having been heavy vacation months, has probably contributed to the problem.

Selectmen have tabled the matter asking Piepenbrink to try to find a solution.

"All I can do is run shorthanded shifts," he said.

Rabstejnek receives service award

George J. Rabstejnek of Cohasset, president of Harbridge House, Inc., has received the Distinguished Service Award of the National Defense Transportation Association for his service as chairman of the National Strategic Mobility Conference Ad Hoc Committee.

The committee, comprising representatives of private industry and United States defense agencies, recently completed a study of the national capability to support military initiatives throughout the world.

The study analyzed the total complex of United States military and civilian resources for surface transportation, airlift, and sealift. It was conducted under the auspices of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and the study findings were delivered to the Secretary of Defense.

In presenting the award to Mr. Rabstejnek, Gerald Collins, president of NDTA, said:

"This award is presented for outstanding leadership in the implementation of an NDTA program involving the nation's security. George Rabstejnek, through his management of the National Strategic Mobility Conference Ad Hoc Committee, helped to search out needed improvement in the military-industrial partnership in transportation and logistics areas."

"The conferences proved to be a productive method of developing improved cooperation and understanding of the military/industrial relationships in transportation and logistics. By virtue of the dialogue generated at these conferences, the partnership emerged stronger and better prepared to deal with national security emergencies. Mr. Rabstejnek was an important factor in this effort."

Harbridge House is an international management consulting firm with headquarters in Boston.

More water shutoffs coming

It will be about two more weeks before the water departments shuts off any more water service.

The next list involves people who owe more than $300.

Ben Curley, water department superintendent, said he is waiting for the county's computer to supply the town with an updated list of who owes what.

Earlier this month the water department turned off the tap for a few customers whole bills were over $400. All water was back on within 24 hours — payments being made or arranged.

Curley said the department has had people come in to set up payment schedules since then.

"Some of them aren't even on our lists yet," he said. "What we're asking from people who owe back bills is a minimum of $25 a week until the back is caught up."

He said some people weren't aware the water office would accept partial payments.

New emergency medical center opens at Cushing Plaza

An emergency medical center opened last Friday at Cushing Plaza.

It's not meant to replace South Shore Hospital for people who should be admitted to hospital care.

It's meant for the people who go to a hospital emergency room because they don't have a physician of their own or can't reach that physician at the time.

The doctors on staff of the facility all come from a background of hospital emergency room experience.

"It's ideal for the patient who is usually well," according to Dr. William Rafkin, one of the owners and practitioners.

In its first week of existence the center administered to about 80 patients.

"No one waited more than five minutes," Dr. Rafkin said. "As we grow busier that will change but my goal is to make sure people don't wait any more than 15 minutes. Usually they'll be out in an hour at most, including x-rays, tests, examination."

The center is open seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Dr. Rafkin said he expects it will continue on that basis, without days off for Sundays or holidays.

The center is tucked between Caesars Shoes and King Jewelers near the corner of the plaza. The storefront operation has been upgraded to seem suitable for the services.

An overhead sign says simply, "3A Medical Treatment — Emergency Care — No Appmt Necessary."

Under the sign, sheer white drapes line the big window. A huge green plant can be seen from the parking lot.

In the first week of operation three patients had to be sent on for hospital treatment. One was a man with a fractured skull, another was a woman who needed heart surgery.

"We are what the general practitioner used to be," Dr. Rafkin said. "In the 1950's when you were sick either you went to your doctor or he came to you, right away.

"If you have an earache and it's night time, you don't want to wait to get treatment. And because of our longer hours we can see people who couldn't otherwise get to a doctor."

There are three physicians involved in keeping the facility staffed. Dr. Rafkin, who moved to Cohasset recently, Dr. John Mackie and Dr. Steward Brill.

The center also handles medical treatment outside of the emergency category, also on a walk-in basis. They do physical examinations for jobs or schools and will diagnose problems.

"We are still in the process of arranging which specialists will back us up," Dr. Rafkin said. Some arrangements have been made.

The laboratory equipment for simple tests and x-ray machines are located in the facility.

Dr. Rafkin has been working in the emergency room at Goddard Hospital. Dr. Mackie has been working in an emergency room on the Cape.

Facilities of this kind are rapidly growing all over the country. There are 1000 of this type by now, Dr. Rafkin said.

"There are advantages for a doctor too," he said. "It's less impersonal than working in an emergency room."

He pointed out that his new center is really a combination of a doctor's office and an emergency room.

The phone number is listed with information under Cohasset Walk-In Emergency Center. It is 383-9364.

☐Martin and Jane Corry of Pleasant Street are pleased to announce the birth of their daughter, Meghan Malloy, Sept. 30, at Winchester Hospital. Grandparents are Mr. And Mrs. William F. Malloy of Cohasset and Mr. and Mrs. Martin G. Corry of Baltimore, Md. Jane Corry is a kindergarten teacher at the Joseph Osgood school. Martin is an attorney in private practice.

It all began when she drove up to the mail box downtown in front of the Post Office and tried to mail a letter, unaware that the boxes no longer faced the street. Now when one has spent years learning certain patterns of behavior, it's not easy to accept sudden change. Helen will tell you that. "I just sat there with my hand out the window trying to get my letter into that box," she laughs.

Finally, Helen had her dawning suspicions confirmed by a helpful passerby. "Yes," he told her, "they really have turned them around."

☐Patriot's cheerleaders, lookout — Cohasset is on its way! For the second year, the varsity cheering squad under coach Jan Ditmar has developed an impressive dance routine which was specially choreographed for them by Joanne Fichtner.

Performed to the Jackson Five's "Can You Feel It," the routine added a lot to this weekend's rally and homecoming.

☐The entrance at Town Hall has been improved considerably with the addition of four eight-foot Douglas Firs which were planted under the supervision of Peter Laugelle, superintendent of the tree and park department.

☐It was a lot of work and for awhile Friday it looked like it was an impossible task but a new counter has now been installed in the town clerk's office.

The new counter with its handsome butcher block top was especially made by the Cohasset High School students as a project in shop class. However, because of its size, it could not be carried up either flight of stairs to the town hall. The only way to get it in was by hoisting it up through the window in the clerk's offfice which on a windy day like last Friday, was no easy matter.

☐Last Sunday was a very special day to Sandra Dunn of Linden Drive who celebrated her Bat Mitzvah at Temple Israel in Hull. A Bat Mitzvah, as explained by Sandra, is a confirmation of the day on which a child becomes an adult.

Sandra was "very excited and a little nervous about getting up in front of 165 people" to sing a two-page section of the Torah in Hebrew. Many of her former teachers, relatives and friends were there to share her special day.

☐Everyone is excited about the poet in residence program which is now underway at the Deer Hill School and the effects of the program were already obvious at a recent gathering of some students from that school at our home.

One of the exercises Poet Lewis Hyde had done with them was to discuss and help them write about their dreams. Each child related what they had written about, in school. It was only after a lengthy description of a dream by one of those students, that her sister who was also present realized that the dream being described was actually her dream. "But that was my dream," she cried in dismay. Not at all disconcerted, her sister cooly replied, "But your dreams are so much more interesting than mine."

As a part of the program, the following works have evolved:

A Riddle Poem, by Vicki Kelley, 6th Grade:

I have legs like a bird's,
My tail is like 3 deflated balloons,
My eyes are like beads,
My hands are like clutches of steel,
My back is like the sand on the ocean floor one wavy day,
My mouth is like a baby's
My teeth are like an old lady without her dentures
My name is Gertrude
I am a lobster

A Riddle Poem by Shanti Shipsky, 6th grade:

My eyes are blowtorches,
My feet are a fish.
My head is a pendulum,
My skin an Indian Design.
I am full a league long,
My head is also a stretched circle when I am angry.
My tongue is a fork
My teeth, knives,
Some catch me and make me dance.
I am King Cobra.

A story with a metamorphosis (change) in it by David Zaloga, Grade 4:

One day I was out in the woods and I heard a noise. It was a panther, one of the most dangerous cats in the world. It was coming closer and closer, finally I could see it coming, I pulled out my gun and shot it. The animal god was very angry so he turned me into a panther and I went away to live a panther's life.

The program, known as Gallery Management Relocation Services, provides Gallery of Home brokers, relocation directors and sales counsellors with a comprehensive understanding of how the corporate relocation process works.

☐Airman Paul Stockbridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stockbridge of 368 Beechwood St., has been assigned to Lowry Air Force Base, Colo., after completing Air Force basic training. He will now receive specialized instruction is the intelligence field. Stockbridge is a 1980 graduate of Cohasset High School.

The crafters represent quality

By Laura Doherty

In an age of plastic and throwaways, Country Crafters represents an opportunity to carry on a New England tradition of quality and workmanship.

In 1972, a Norwell woman who wanted to sell her handiwork offered her home to other crafters for a Saturday sale. From the success of that sale, Country Crafters was launched.

Marsha Silvia, with her partner Susanna Piers of Scituate, has been running the group for five years. Marsha explains their goal as promoting the growth and development of local crafts by providing an inexpensive medium for displaying and selling crafts and a chance to form friendships, share ideas and offer encouragement.

"We're like a store that's only open four times a year," Marsha explains as she describes the group's shows. The tremendous growth of the group is evident in that the total proceeds of what crafters made nine years ago is less than what one crafter makes today.

Currently, there are 40 members, some of whom come from as far away as New Hampshire and Cape Cod. There is also a waiting list of people who would like to become members which, Marsha notes, grows with every show. Membership in Country Crafters is limited, she continues, because each member must specialize in a different craft so that there is no competition within. There are always the restrictions of available space.

Marsha and Susanna describe the difficulties in deciding on work submitted for admission. "It's hard not to hurt people's feelings," Susanna says, "but then we know that we're keeping up the reputation of the group."

"It takes patience and wanting to do the best that you can to create something worth buying," she adds, as she underlines the importance of looking at submissions from the other side of the table - the customers' side.

Patience and wanting to do the best possible could be the reasons for Marsha and Susanna's success both as business partners in Marsan Originals and as members of the board directing the crafters. It all started when Marsha made a quilt as a gift and received commissions for others. Susanna, Marsha's sister, began with children' clothes but switched to quilts. They joined Country Crafters 7 years ago, between them at the time, they had a total of nine children - all under five.

Both Marsha and Susanna have great senses of humor. When asked how they went about choosing compatible members, Marsha's quick reply was "If they can get along with us, then they can get along with anyone." They can both laugh over the mishaps they've had to face. For instance, their show was advertised as a shoe and customers came ready to try it on.

One of the exciting successes of the crafters is the number of former members who now own full time businesses such as the Gelpkies' Crazy Nut People. About 25 percent of the crafters are men, many of whom have full time work. Aaron Loomis of Marshfield, a retired engineer, began his wooden toys with the crafters and now sells all over the country.

Superlatives are appropriate when describing the work of crafter Marsha Sylvia who here shows off some of her handmade quilts and pillows.

Many friendships have developed within the group and there is an annual Christmas party, celebrated in February when crafters have finally completed their orders.

At the last show in Norwell, over 4,000 people attended. The next show is scheduled for November 15 from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. and November 16 from noon until 4 p.m. in Plymouth. It will provide an excellent opportunity to select a unique and quality craft for the holidays.

Fire protection

The issue of overtime in the fire department is one that needs immediate attention on the part of the selectmen.

When people voted for Porposition 2½, they never gave a thought to whether the fire department would continue to answer emergency calls. And when they placed the fire department, which was run by an autonomous chief, under the board of selectmen last spring, they meant that the selectmen would make wise decisions on the department policy.

Well, it seems there are some surprises for the people of this small town.

The Fire Chief is being left on his own to try to resolve the budget problems caused by too many men out sick over too short a period of time.

The chief has said simply that he will no longer call in men to replace those out sick or injured. He will stop using overtime since the account is gone.

That is not a realistic answer.

The real question that must be immediately addressed is whether the town can afford to lay-off more fire fighters.

Right now the regular complement at fire headquarters, which we need not remind you is now the only working fire station, happens to be five men. There was a time when it functioned with four. Of course there were other engine companies elsewhere in town then.

We aren't sure we'd like to see the regular fire staffing go back to four. We're just about positive we wouldn't.

But it seems far worse for the town to have days when the station is manned by three, two, one, or closed down due to illness.

What we would like to see is an immediate resolution of the problem. We would like to see some public discussion of the problem. Perhaps the answer is a small transfer from the reserve account, to keep things as they are until a special town meeting can discuss whether they want to see the town protected by four men on a shift or whether they want to approve more money for overtime.

The effectiveness of the town's fire coverage is something that we all have a stake in. We pay for it. And we suffer if it isn't what it should be.

Dump spending

Town meeting will soon be asked to approve a large expenditure for capping the dump.

The figure guessed at by our secret sources is a quarter of a million. The actual numbers will be worked out fairly soon and publicized. Our number is a very rough attempt to find the ballpark.

There is little choice. We can say too bad the town didn't find another alternative a few years ago. We can say the recycling effort should be pushed hard to

Criticizes State Sen. McKinnon

Letters

To the Editor:

It was with shock, disdain, and utter amazement that I read a news article in which Senator Allan R. McKinnon was critical of the various on-going construction projects on the South Shore.

Contrary to the position taken by the Senator, we are indeed fortunate that our Massachusetts economy can support this activity. Everyone benefits, the manufacturer, craftsmen, materialmen, labor and the construction industry as a whole, not to mention the wide spectrum of support industries involved in the process. Let's continue to circulate into our economy the millions of dollars produced by these projects during our short construction season. It is well worth the inconvenience.

Now that I think of it, I find it hard to understand how Senator McKinnon can be so far out of step with the sentiments of his constituency. For example:

In July of 1981, McKinnon announced in the press that he had led the fight for final legislative approval for $299,000.00 appropriation in the fiscal 1982 budget for the operation of a Hingham to Boston commuter boat. He had the audacity to promote this expenditure for a luxury craft, notwithstanding the fact that the towns and cities of the Commonwealth were hard pressed for funds and laying off countless thousands of school teachers, policemen, firemen and other municipal employees. This is not to mention the drastic layoffs at the state level.

Fortunately saner heads prevailed. The Governor vetoed the bill and the legislature stood firmly behind him in the name of fiscal responsibility.

We all anxiously await to see what outrageous pursuit the Senator will next undertake. Someone said recently that he is now lobbying to register the gypsy moth as an endangered and threatened species.

On the Rattenbury issue

October 7, 1981

Board of Selectmen
Town Hall
Cohasset, MA

Gentlemen:

In light of the recent controversy surrounding the Cohasset Police Department's newly created position of Clerk/Typist/Dispatcher, I can no longer in good conscience remain as a reticent bystander and silently observe this important and necessary clerk/typist position be manipulated in a union/management tug-of-war.

As the jeopardized employee in question and as a fellow taxpayer, I feel compelled to voice my concern, not only with the manner in which my job is being dealt with, but also with the fact that the town's failure to properly resolve this issue will result in a lost opportunity of the town to effect a long overdue reform within a town department.

The position in question was publicly advertised, applied for by me, and ultimately awarded to me by the town after close scrutiny of my skills, experience, abilities and personal and professional background. I accepted the position in good faith and I was assured that any pending grievance would in no way affect the stability of the job. With this assurance in mind, I then terminated a higher-paying position to take on the duties at the Cohasset Police Department. I have performed my duties in an efficient, professional and competent manner. That I have lived up to job expectations cannot be denied by anyone in the Police Department and must be recognized by the Selectmen.

After lengthy negotiations by those representing both sides of the issue, the controversy seems to be reduced to the issue of "dispatching." Since I have never been assigned to dispatch, how can this one duty among numerous essential duties be an issue of such significance as to warrant the cessation of all clerical duties in the Police Department by one trained to do so?

Without prejudice, I must advise you that (1) the town has an obligation to me and (2) the removal of this position from the Department would only have a negative effect, either directly or indirectly, on the deliverance of effective police services to the residents of the Town of Cohasset, as it will, as before, distract officers with burdensome clerical duties and thereby hinder them in their ability to perform more important police duties.

Police officers are trained and compensated to perform certain specified tasks. A clerk/typist is trained and compensated to perform a wholely different set of tasks. The arbitrary mingling of these tasks simply results in confusion, poor quality work, inefficiency and increased costs and time. Sound Municipal Management requires that the Selectmen do what is in the best interest of the Town, not simply what is convenient.

This, Gentlemen, is the real issue at hand. What is in the best interest to all of the citizens and taxpayers of Cohasset?

Eliminating this position will raise grave doubts regarding the credibility of the Board of Selectmen and in particular the Board's ability and resolve to do what is necessary to effectively manage the town's departments.

A strong and well-reasoned stand by the Selectmen on this issue may not allow all to "save face" and some feathers may remain ruffled, but in the final analysis, the board will have met their obligation to the citizens of Cohasset.

Yours truly,
Yvette R. Rattenbury

The haunted house trip: it's gross

By Claire McDonough

An enormous orange moon hung like a lantern over a house that looked like it had been designed by Charles Addams.

A brisk wind sent wispy clouds skudding across its crater-marked face. The children of the night stirred restlessly, their high-pitched voices penetrating the chilly air. It was 1976, and I was taking my three youngest children to their first "haunted house."

"I'm cold and I'm hungry," whined one of the children of the night. "Why do we have to go to this spooky place?"

"Because you've been bugging her for three weeks," her brother Larry explained. "And because we already paid for the tickets. And because I want to go. And anyway, shut up," he added magnanimously.

"Why are your lips moving?" my youngest son Skipper asked. "Are you praying?"

"You could call it that," I muttered. Why had I forked over $5 to see something that would probably keep the kids awake all night? To say nothing of making me ill? "Isn't this fun?"

"Did you know," he responded, "that when you talk only the bottom part of your mouth goes up and down, not the top part?"

Larry chortled. "I hope it's really gross. Frank says it's gross. They have a plate full of intestines on the dining room table and they move. It really grosses you out."

"I'm scared," Breida whimpered. "I want to go home."

"They have this knife," her brother whispered evilly. "And it's all covered with blood. And there's blood dripping from the ceiling. And everywhere you look, there's blood. It's gross."

Eight year old Skipper moved closer to me. "I don't like gross," he confided.

A cowl shrouded figure appeared in front of us. He beckoned us forward with a hand that glowed green in the dark. He rested a bony, glowing icy hand on my sweating one. "Now that's gross," I admitted.

"Heck," Larry muttered, "he's just one of the teachers from school." He brightened. "Does that mean I don't have to go to school any more?"

"Guess," I told him as we followed our silent guide into the house.

For what seemed an eternity but turned out to be fifteen minutes we followed a labyrinthine path

A letter to the 'Lamplighters'

Dear Cohasset Lamplighters:

Just a note to wish you well this year, and every year.

I'm looking forward to reading your page in the Mariner...I am told it is to be sometime soon, now. I'm going to miss working with you, miss watching this "new crop" of you learn to write your first good headlines THAT FIT! I remember making Bill Kite rewrite a headline six times last year...he was ready to go with the second one he wrote, but I made him go over it until he got it right.

Don't let anyone ever tell you newspaper page makeup is easy. It isn't. And some of the best reporters in the world can't write headlines for their own articles...and many of them will never get the opportunity.

Do get involved in the Mariner, do learn how to use the headliner, how to handle an exacto knife. The first couple of months I used one I think I stabbed everyone on the staff (and myself) at least once. And do practice with the border tapes, the corners. The experience you will gain at the Mariner shop will be invaluable experience on your college newspapers, in perhaps a future profession as a reporter, advertising copywriter...or perhaps as publisher of your own newspaper.

Pasting up corners, stringing a line of tape, may not seem like very important stuff, now. But it's important for you to know how to display what you write, and how to display it well. A good headline can make or break an article. Surprise, surprise. Newspapers are promotional. They are business. No one in the world can make anyone read a bunch of dull facts strung together. Everyone will read an interesting story which is displayed well. And there is no corner in any newspaper in which display is not important.

Have fun at the Mariner this year. I'll be thinking of you and envying the Mariner staff the time they'll get to spend with you.

Sincerely,
Tanna Kasperowicz

The haunted house trip ...

through a darkness punctuated by flashes of unearthly light that revealed ghouls, gorillas, ghosts and gremlins. We saw mad surgeons, assisted by Igors, remove what were obviously real organs from living creatures. Well, they looked like real organs. Breida slipped on what was clearly a pool of human blood and fell into a bathtub with a dead body. A murderer who was conveniently lurking nearby helped her out. At one point something grabbed my ankle. I screamed. Loudly. Someone thrust a handful of wriggling snakes into my face. I was too terrified to scream. We passed by a creature who was stirring a cauldron filled with unspeakable things. Someone offered us unspeakable cups filled with unspeakable liquid. It was unspeakable. Finally we exited through the back door. Fresh air never felt so good.

Breida and Skipper tugged at my jacket. "Can we go in again?" they begged.

Larry kicked at a rock. "That wasn't gross," he muttered. "The little kids didn't even barf."

I smiled at the children of the night. I said to them what I say to you, gentle reader. HAPPY HALLOWEEN.

Commemorating the Pope Memorial Church

By J.A. Marshall

On November 15, 1881, Charles Linder Pope was born to Abby and Albert Pope of Cohasset. The boy was fated to live only 18 years, for on April 21, 1898, he tragically drowned.

Wanting to do something special for his son, Albert Pope agreed with a Congregational Minister of the era, the Reverend Cecil Harper, that a living monument, a church, be built as a memorial.

The Pope Memorial Church was constructed in 1900 of Quincy granite, and was dedicated on July 8, 1900. At the time of dedication Colonel and Mrs. Pope placed coins as well as a portrait of Charles Linder Pope in the cornerstone of the building. Mr. Harper remained as the Church's first pastor until his death in 1914. Eighty years after its construction, in July 1980, the South Shore Hellenic Church and Cultural Association re-dedicated this lovely Gothic-style edifice as a Greek Orthodox Church.

Now, Sunday, November 15, 100 years after Charles Pope's birth, a memorial service will be held for him in the Pope Memorial Church, which is now officially named Church of the Nativity and Assumption of the Most Holy Virgin. The service will begin at the Church at 10 a.m.

On this same date, what better way to celebrate a 100th Birthday, as well as a love of a family for a young son, than with a family party! The Second Annual Family "Fall Fling" Dinner and Dance will be held Sunday, November 15, at Dreamwold, 74 Branch St. Scituate. Cocktails will be served from 5 to 6 p.m. with hot hors d'oeuvres. A roast beef dinner will be served by Chef Paul, South Shore Catering, at 6 p.m. Music will be provided by Ta Dilina; there will be both Greek and American dancing. Donation: $25 for a family including children; $20 for a couple; $10 for a single. For ticket information please contact "Fall Fling" Co-Chairperson, Mrs. Demosthenes Syrmopoulos at 383-9071.

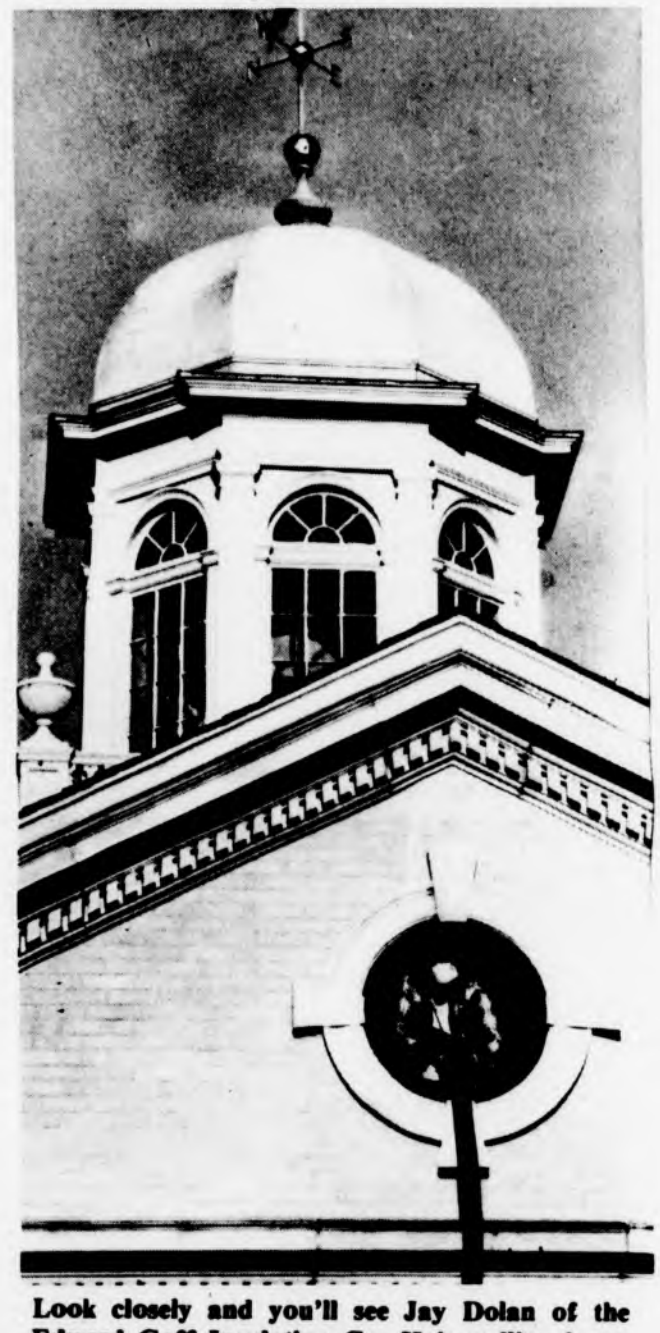
change the length of time the present dump can be used.

But we can't say anything that will make a difference. As Barbara Kearn pointed out this week, almost all of the money involved in capping the dump is money the state would force the town to spend if the dump were closed today. Only a small amount of the total is for the cap that will allow a small expansion.

Oh, the town might be able to delay the inevitable through stalling tactics. But is that wise when prices keep rising so rapidly?

It's time to bow to the inevitable. It's also time to make sure the town is ready five years from now when the dump closes forever. A committee is working on plans. The various ideas deserve some comment from the public now.



Look closely and you'll see Jay Dolan of the Edward Goff Insulation Co. He's pulling hoses through the clock hole at the Pratt Library.

Board of Health amends engineering contract

The board of health is amending its contract with the engineering company developing plans for the dump.

Town Accountant William Signorelli pointed out the contract specifies the plans will not cost more than $20,000. Town meeting appropriated $15,000 last spring for the plans. He says the amount specified should be the lower figure.

Arthur Clark, selectmen's executive secretary, went to the board this week asking for a change in the contract.

"That's why we gave it to town counsel to look over before we signed it," Marilyn Sweeney, member of the board of health commented.

"Did he see this?" Clark asked.

"Of course he did," Barbara Kearn, another health board member answered.

Still the contract will be changed. Any changes in the plan necessitated by state action will mean town meeting will be asked for more planning money.

Fifty students and parents of the music department attended a fine production of the musical "Oliver" at Eastern Nazarene College in Quincy on Oct. 15.

All costs were assumed by the students. On Oct. 30 several Cohasset High School musicians will audition for the S.E. District Music Festival at Silver Lake.

The next meeting of the Cohasset Junior High School Communications Council will be held on Wednesday, Nov. 4, at 9:30 a.m. in Room 100 at the high school.

Last year, a group of parents concerned about the state of the arts in the schools formed FACTS - the Fine Arts Committee for the three schools. The council will devote a part of its meeting to a discussion of the arts and to various organizations which now exist in other towns and have been effective in supporting and initiating art programs. A member of FACTS who is also a member of the council will lead the discussion. Parents with an interest in the arts programs are invited to attend.

Corbett receives 'Choke-Saver' award

Ninth grade student Peter Corbett of South Main Street was one of 47 Massachusetts residents honored last Thursday when he received a "Choke-Saver" medal from Blue Cross/Blue Shield for saving a fellow student in the junior high school cafeteria last December.

Peter was familiar with the Heimlich maneuver to help choking victims because he had seen a film on the procedure in his physical education class about a month before.

Peter was eating lunch last Dec. 22 at the junior high, when a classmate began to choke on a hot dog. "He caught my attention by banging on the table, and I saw he had his hand on his throat and couldn't breath."

He wasn't scared, he said. Giving the "hug of life" was just an automatic response.

He was honored at the second annual choke-savers award dinner at the Lantana Restaurant in Randolph last week, and received a medal "that makes the Olympics medals look plain," says his very proud mother.

Dr. Henry Heimlich, the Cincinnati thoracic surgeon who created the method credited with saving thousands of lives all over the world, was on hand to congratulate the winners.

For the past three years, Heimlich maneuver training sessions have been conducted for restaurant employees, civic and community groups by Blue Cross and Blue Shield as part of the "Health thyself" program. Thousands of Massachusetts residents have received instruction in the world-famous Heimlich rescue method.

Dr. Heimlich has cited Blue Cross and Blue Shield for sponsoring the leading program of its kind in the nation.

Serving as master of ceremonies for the presentations was Ted O'Brien, Channel 7 television personality. Prominent civic, sports and media figures were among the special guests awarding the choke-saver medals.

'Table Manners' coming

The Cohasset Dramatic Club's fall play, "Table Manners," will be presented on Nov. 19, 20, and 21 on the historic Cohasset Town Hall stage.

Directing is Valerie Lester and Production Manager is George Hamacher. Cast members and production crews are hard at work, the former in rehearsals, and the latter in transforming the Town Hall stage into a Victorian, English country cottage.

The Set Designer, Wayne Miessner, a veteran of many Club productions, and volunteers are working to put together a carefully planned stage setting that, when completed, will convince the audience that they are indeed looking at events occurring in a typical English dining room. Set construction is a vital part of every Dramatic Club presentation. For a few weekend afternoons before each play, the Town Hall auditorium becomes a beehive of activity, resounding with the sound of saws and hammers; crew members shouting directions to one another, and an occasional loudly proclaimed line from one or another past Club play. Production workers sometimes become extemporary actors. A recent busy Saturday afternoon saw Production Manager Hamacher and Set Desinger Miessner laboring with the volunteer crew to carry large muslin-covered frames called 'flats' from the Town Hall cellar to the stage. When combined in a pre-planned manner, these flats become the walls of the "Table Manners" English cottage.

Workers on the set Saturday included, Burk and Scott Ketcham, David Barrett, John Kinchla, Lisa and Fred Koed, Julia Jordon, Jane A. Marshall, and David Wadsworth. Other production workers for "Table Manners" will include Eleanor Whitney and Sydney Bubbers, Properties; Claire Berman and Carlene Laney, Makeup; Judy Holmes, Costumes; Clark Young, Lighting; Sylvia Brest, Hospitality; Donna Williams, Program Design; Wayne Barcomb, Box office; Katy Mieesne, Poster Design; and Burk Ketcham, Town Hall Sign. Stage Manager is Alice Duffy; Stage Secretary, Julia Jordan. Publicity work has been done by David Wadsworth and Jane A. Marshall. For each Dramatic Club presentation, a small army of people assemble behind the scenes to do the many production requirements necessary for the successful presentation of a play. "Table Manners" is no exception to the rule, and the production crew is at its peak of activity as the dates of the performance draw near.

League to meet on health care

The Hingham and Cohasset Leagues of Women Voters will present a joint meeting on health care Thursday, Oct. 29 at the Unitarian Parish House, Cohasset, at 9 a.m.

Issues to be discussed will include: the development of health care here and abroad, the current delivery system in the Unites States; and the costs of Medicare and Medicaid.

The cost factor, which has doubled every five years, has now become a serious problem in a time of shrinking dollars and large cuts in federal and state spending.

Everyone needs and uses health care; everyone pays the bills in taxes, premiums, lower wages to cover fringe benefits and increased prices to cover employer's costs. The League's aim is an informed citizenry that can make responsible decisions affecting all of us in this area.

The meeting will be conducted by Sandy Baker, Liz Waltoff, Sherrill Barnes, and Jan Colby from Hingham and by Doris McNulty, Marie Caristi, Janine Broadhurst, and Ellie Waal from Cohasset.

Meg Haviland, alias Helen Ketcham, is selling books

By Carlene Laney

Meg Haviland, dressed in a violet pants suit, autographed copies of her Gothic novel "Mistress of Wynds" Saturday at the Hingham Square Book Shop until they sold out.

The buyers all had a word or two for Meg. Some went away with several copies of her first published book.

Another shipment was scheduled to arrive at the shop today.

Meg sat in a director's chair provided by the shop. On her signing table, the owners provided a large bowl of fresh fruit. It looked like a scene an artist would enjoy. The author, making her first public appearance as a literary celebrity, looked familiar.

Meg, in day to day life, is Helen Ketcham of Cohasset. With the rate of sale of her Gothic, it may be hard to find copies on the book shelves, but the local shops promise to keep ordering it.

The story is written in three parts starting in London where a golden vision of love begins.

"Sheltered, pampered and protected, Elizabeth Knowlton was born to wealth and privilege. How cruelly her father's death swept it all away! Homeless, destitute, she had no future until the day she was summoned to Wynds.

"Wynds — the bewitching estate on the storm swept moors. Once again Elizabeth was swathed in luxury. But how to explain the strange malady that gripped her shadowy mistress? How to resist her dashing vibrant master? Without warning Elizabeth felt herself possessed by a dream of illicit love...driven to perform brazen acts of lust and hatred...compelled to discover Lord Robert's darkest secret and become the...Mistress of Wynds."

Helen found her pseudonym from her middle name of Margaret and her father's and son Chris' middle name, Haviland.

She is already into a second book which is an historical novel set in the antebellum south.

She chose to write a Gothic novel because it's a popular form of relaxation reading.

She researched the book by reading other authors extensively and studying the Victorian period. It took about a year to gather the needed information and formulate the book, then two months of concentrated effort writing while she was alone in the Berkshires.

Although she enjoyed drafting the "Mistress of Wynds" her favorite style is comedy, which is easy to see because of her delightful sense of the absurd.

Her scope to date has been drama, a musical and a spoof but the first written piece she's pushed was "Mistress of Wynds," published by Dell Publications with no revisions. She had seen the proofs of last summer but "nothing touches the thrill of seeing your book in print," Helen said.

Helen, who moved to Cohasset in 1964, is a well known personality in this area where she has been a creative force in the Cohasset Dramatic Club.

She has directed, acted, and written two original plays. One of which was "Town Meeting 1770" that was written and performed for the Cohasset Bicentennial, many of the characters being portrayed by descendants still living in town.

Helen was delighted by how well the play was received by the townspeople. She was fairly new to the area at the time. Her second play, "Wagon's Ho," was penned in 1976 and is a musical spoof on the air stream trailer caravans. The men all wore R.V. (recreational vehicle) hats with visors with arms coming out of the sides and a mirror attached. The music was picked from shows such as "Oklahoma," and "My Fair Lady," but the title song "Wagon's Ho" was written by Hal Janks, then bandmaster at the high school, with words by Helen. She feels she ironed out all the kinks of producing amateur theater in this play.

Helen, who graduated from Wellesley College, started writing when her children were small and was not happy with the selection of children's books available. She began with a children's fantasy. Helen's own fantasy is that Steven Speilberg will call asking to buy the movie rights to "Mistress of Wynds."

"Mistress of Wynds," though it includes romance and suspense, veers from the normal composite of Gothic. Helen wouldn't say just how, and the book has been sold out in the area so I couldn't get a copy to reveal this secret. But, not to despair, there's another new shipment coming in this week to the Hingham Square Book Store.

Board of Health approves septic system

The board of health approved a septic system expansion this week for the house at Jerusalem and Howe Roads.

The approval of the system eliminates one allegation in criminal proceedings against the owner, Mary Fairmen.

Building Inspector James Litchfield took Mrs. Fairmen to court over the creation of an apartment in her house on Jerusalem Road. Zoning allows one apartment in that particular area. The complaint involved lack of building permits and health board approval.

Atty. Richard Rogalin, representing Mrs. Fairmen, pointed out that the change in use was bringing the house from a five bedroom home to a three bedroom two family unit.

Gingerbread workshop

Registrations are now being accepted for a special gingerbread workshop to be held Tuesday, Nov. 10, from 10 a.m. to noon at the center.

Always one of the center's most popular workshops, students will be helped with their own special creations. The cost of the program is $4.

To register, call 383-0088, weekdays, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Fire Facts

Halloween is a special day of the year for children and adults. The opportunity to celebrate with costumes and treats delights most everyone. But all too often these festive times are marred by tragedy, many times fire related. Unfortunately, children account for a large portion of fire related deaths and injuries.

Here are a few precautions to observe during Halloween festivities:

• Don't use loose fitting and combustible costumes. Costumes which fit well and are made of a flame retardant material will lessen the danger of catching fire.

• Don't use candles or any other open flames to illuminate jack-o-lanterns.

• Don't use combustible decorations in places of assembly for Halloween parties. Cornstalks and paper decorations are easily ignited.

• Know the building where Halloween festivities are to be held. Plan two exits out of the building in the event one becomes blocked.

• Avoid panic in the event of a fire emergency inside a crowded building.

• Observe "No Smoking" signs posted in buildings where parties are to be held.

Fire is an unwelcome and uninvited guest during Halloween festivites. By observing a few precautions, a fire tragedy will not become a part of your Halloween celebration.

UNICEF challenge to trick or treaters

Kermit the Frog, star of Jim Henson's Muppet characters and chairman of the 1981 National UNICEF Day campaign, has issued a challenge to Cohasset area residents and to all Americans to make this year's National UNICEF Day the "most successful ever" by contributing generously to the United Nations Children's Fund.

Responding to this challenge will be the children of the First Parish in Cohasset, who will be collecting funds in their neighborhoods for UNICEF on Halloween, Oct. 31.

The children will then return to the Unitarian Parish House where their collection boxes will be their ticket of admission to a Halloween Party scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m.

Proceeds from the collection will be sent to the U.S. Committee for UNICEF and will benefit the neediest children of Africa, Asia, and Latin America.

UNICEF, the United Nations Children's Fund, provides equipment, training, and supplies for primary health care, improved nutrition, and safe, clean water supplies for children and their families throughout the developing world.

Debra Krupczak wins Merit Scholarship

Debra Mahony Krupczak of Cohasset has been awarded a four-year Merit Scholarship to the University of Massachusetts/Boston.

Debra graduated from Chelsea High School in 1973 and attended Bunker Hill Community College where she received an Associate's Degree in Business Administration. She is currently employed as an accounting technician for the Department of Defense in Boston.

Debra, who lives in Cohasset with her husband Paul, admits it was difficult to make the transition from full-time worker to full-time student. "I'd been used to working days and going to school part-time nights," she says. "Now I've had to completely reverse myself — full-time at school and part-time at work." The Merit Scholarship has helped her with the financial adjustments she's had to make. Debra is enrolled in the college of Management at UMass and will major in accounting. Her career plans may involve continued work at the Defense Department as contract auditor, or working as a CPA.

United Way has final push toward goal

Cohasset's 1981 United Way drive is gearing for the final push toward the goal of completion before Thanksgiving, and taking encouragement from the fact that one of the town's "favorite sons" is general campaign chairman heading the total effort throughout Massachusetts Bay.

John Larkin Thompson, a prominent Cohasset resident and president of Blue Shield of Massachusetts, has taken on the assignment of leading an army of United Way campaign workers who have set their sights on raising a record $26 million for the many agencies which the United Way helps to support.

Visiting recently with Robert P. Magner, vice president of Cohasset Savings Bank who is United Way Community Chairman in Cohasset, Thompson reported that the overall campaign is going well, with many of the larger Boston firms reporting substantial increases in contributions this year. Recent changes in the income tax laws, he said, are helping the cause.

"Cohasset did very well by the United Way last year and we're counting on townspeople to do even better this year," the campaign chairman said. "It is certainly a worthwhile cause and the funds are much needed."

Under Magner's leadership last year, Cohasset was cited as being the most improved among suburban communities and the chairman's aim is to improve further on the town's record. Contributions may be sent to him at Cohasset Savings Bank, 13 Elm Street.

Cohasset leaders of the United Way, Robert P. Magner, vice president of Cohasset Savings Bank, left, heads the United Way campaign in Cohasset this year, while John Larkin Thompson, president of Blue Shield of Massachusetts, leads the total United Way Campaign throughout Massachusetts Bay as general campaign chairman.

Homecoming ...

The Skippers went into the half with a 14-0 lead.

The Homecoming ceremonies took place during the half-time break. Skipper co-captain and halfback Joe McNeill was selected as King by the senior class. The influential senior class also voted on the Homecoming Queen. The four candidates for Queen, Laura Hines, Holly Grant, Michelle Shea, and Maria Curelli all paraded onto the field in shining convertibles. Heather Corea, last year's Queen slowly opened the envelope and declared the winner...Holly Grant. The King and Queen were later officially crowned at the Homecoming dance that evening.

The Skippers hung tough throughout the rest of the game. In the third quarter Joe Becker squirmed through the Norwell defense for a 25 yard gain, setting up another Cohasset touchdown. Q.B. Kevin Dooley rolled in from the one yard line and then completed the conversion to give Cohasset a twenty-two to zip lead.

Norwell managed to squeak into the end zone in the fourth quarter to ruin the Skippers shutout but it was clear who the victor was that day.

Fall sports program set for Nov. 12

The Cohasset fall Sports Banquet will be held Tuesday, Nov. 12 at 7 p.m. in the High School cafeteria.

This annual event, sponsored by the Booster Club, recognizes the efforts of all students who have participated in a fall sport.

All parents are encouraged to accompany their son or daughter to this formal wind-up of the fall season. Parent's tickets are $4 each.

CHS soccer girls deserve a cheer

The Girls' varsity soccer team is receiving very little recognition this year but are doing an absolutely fantastic job. Three years ago the girls' varsity soccer team was formed and in their virgin season they did not win one game. In their second year they came up with two victories. Right now the Skippers are in the latter half of their third season and have already won four games and also have four ties. Now that's improvement.

Coach Fallon has done a great job with this team. In fact, except for Duxbury, no team has scored more than two goals against them. That's defense to be proud of.

Thursday, the Skippers improved their record to 4-5-4 with a 2-2 tie against second place powerhouse Rockland. The freshman scoring sensation Sarah Seavey scored as did hustling sophomore Kim Wittet. Seniors Sue Dalrymple, Angela O'Brien, Christine Barrett and Mary O'Brien all did a fine job on defense and kept the ball in Rockland territory most of the time. The Skippers next home game will be Thursday afternoon on Milliken field.

Sports shorts ...

Cross country

The Boys' Cross Country team inched by Rockland Friday 28-29. Gutsy Chris McNabb came in second place, Mike Ellis placed 4th and Jaimie Replogle grabbed 6th place. Paul Johnson was not too far behind and clinched seventh place. Mike Birman sprinted in to get the tenth position.

All this gave the Skippers just enough for a one point victory. This is the second win for the 2-5 cross country team. The league meets are in early November. The Skippers are keying on these meets and you can bet they will make a good showing.

Booster Club meets

The Cohasset Boosters Club will hold its next meeting Wednesday, Nov. 4 at 8 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Merle Brown.

The Boosters Club is organized to support all athletic teams in the High School. Anyone interested in attending should call 383-1625.

Field hockey

The Girls' Field Hockey team had a slow start this season but now they seem to be tearing up the league. On Wednesday they fought for their fourth straight victory against Abington, three to nothing. Sally Cook scored on a penalty shot. Karen Froio drove one by the Green Wave goalie as did Mia Graham. Abington scored twice in the ensuing moments but the tough Skipper defense including Anne Bear, Brenda Whitlow and Chris Kakcher shut down the Abington offense and clinched a Skipper victory.

The Field Hockey team will try to keep its winning streak alive on Tuesday and Thursday of this week.

Gridiron dance

The Cohasset Gridiron Club will hold its annual scholarship dinner dance Friday, Nov. 20, at the Cove, Rte. 3A in Hingham. Cocktails at the cash bar will start at 7 o'clock.

By popular demand, the Fiesta Italian Dinner will be provided by the famous Celebrations, Inc. of Cohasset at 8 o'clock. Also back by popular demand will be the Nick Lamberti Group of Boston, to provide the music. There will be dancing until midnight.

Tickets are $25 per couple and can be purchased from any Gridiron member or by calling 383-1621 or 383-6322. Tickets must be reserved and paid for in advance by Nov. 15. Tickets are limited so reserve now.

Milk losing its favor at CHS

Cohasset school children are drinking considerably less milk at school lately. The price of milk quadrupled this year (five cents to 20 cents), while the average consumption of half pints has decreased by almost half of last year's amount.

Patricia Wunschel, food service director, submitted a lunch program report to the school committee Monday which showed a sharp decrease in milk sales at all three schools.

This year, for the month of September, 14,450 cartons of milk were sold to students compared to last September when 27,545 milks were purchased at five cents.

"It's a shame, said Wunschel, "The one thing that kids really do need is milk while they are still in the growing bones and teeth stage."

Selectmen, Chief Piepenbrink huddle over fire protection budget

The town — now ready to sell two out of three fire stations — is wondering what to do about fire protection and ambulance coverage.

Should fire department services be reduced?

Should the town put up more money to continue paying fire overtime?

This week members of the board of selectmen and advisory committee are sitting down with Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink to talk it over.

Town meeting budgeted $18,155 for fire department overtime which is used to pay men called in to replace others out sick or injured.

According to the town accountant's office, as of last week's payroll, $15,222.91 of the overtime account had been spent. Last year there was about $30,000 allocated for overtime.

The full fire department consists of a work force of 26, including the chief. That's two less than last year. Officials are hinting there may be more layoffs.

The chief has said he will not call men back when others are out sick if the town fails to provide additional funds.

The special meeting, after the Mariner's press time, may end with some changes in fire department policy.

Chief Piepenbrink wasn't available for comment on his plans Tuesday (he was busy fighting a fire at the Cohasset Heights dump), but he's already said publically that if the town won't allow him the extra money needed to pay overtime staffing, men out sick or injured will not be replaced.

The overtime budget was cut almost in half in the budget approved by the advisory committee and voted by town meeting last spring.

But that money has run out more quickly than even past spending would have indicated.

The Chief went before selectmen two weeks ago and explained that most of the money was eaten up by firefighters out a day here or there.

Henry Ainslie, chairman of the board of selectmen, said he and the other board members hope to question the chief on whether all possible alternatives have been considered before making a decision on fire operation.

Ainslie said he wished the discussion could have been held before the overtime budget was used up.

"If this had been anticipated, it would have been better to distibute the cutbacks over a longer period of time — if that's the way we're going to go," Ainslie said.

Selectmen cut town hall use fees

Selectmen are cutting the fee for use of town hall by members of the Cohasset Dramatic Club to half what other organizations will pay.

Club members are still not sure the reduction will be enough. But the members of the board of directors of the club won't meet to discuss the fee until after Thanksgiving, according to Florence Kelley, club president.

"It's still quite a lot of money," she said.

The fee will not interfere with the production of "Table Manners" later this month. That production has been rehearsed over the past two months in the homes of club members, rather than at town hall because of the high cost of renting the auditorium.

The selectmen raised the fee from $25 to $30 for use of the hall to cope with increasing energy costs and overall budget reductions. The big difference for the dramatic club is that in the past, they only paid the $25 fee for performance nights. They used the hall without charge during rehearsals and set construction.

Mrs. Kelley had gone to the board three weeks ago with a request that a set fee be established for her group. She hoped the club might be able to pay several hundred dollars instead of the thousands the $30 fee would mean over the course of a year.

Mrs. Kelley said that she won't be able to meet with her directors until after the holiday because the members are so busy with the current production.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club was founded in 1921. In its early days there was only one production a year. It is the oldest dramatic club in the area with continuous performances.

And should the South Shore Art Center move out of Cohasset when it locates larger quarters, it will be the only arts organization in town.

"I think it's a reasonable figure. They use it more than any other group," said Selectman Rocky Laugelle.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur, who worked with figures regarding estimated usage, said, "It's a happy medium — that's what it is."

The $15 fee is only for the Cohasset Dramatic Club, other groups using town hall will be charged $30 per day/night.

Cohasset's Jonathan deLima shines in 'Mame'

By Patricia Desmond

Anyone who missed Jonathan deLima in "Mame" has one more weekend to catch the show.

Jonathan has the juvenile lead in the Hingham Civic Music Theatre's version of the famed Broadway musical. And he is truly marvelous in the role of young Patrick Dennis.

There were quite a few weepy ladies in the auditorium at Hingham High School when the young Patrick (our Jonathan) hung his head with pale regret while his Auntie Mame planned her long honeymoon with a Southern gentleman.

There were a few times on opening night when I wished the young star had a microphone. One nine-year-old voice against the sound of a full and well-tuned orchestra is not a fair game. But Jonathan picked up the problem from behind the spotlight, and his later numbers carried better.

His mother, Sarah deLima, is quite obviously proud of the fourth grade student. She pointed out after the performance that he hasn't missed a day of school despite late evening rehearsals.

Jonathan's first major role was at the age of seven when he played Michael in the Cohasset Swim Team's production of "Mary Poppins."

He has also appeared in "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory" put on by the Swim Team this year. He played in "Oliver" and "As You Like It," as well.

But his mother says this was his first part in a production of this significance.

"He'd never danced before anywhere," she said. "He'd never sung with an orchestra. And his part called for him to sing against other players."

Jonathan, who attends the Deer Hill School, came to the part through his mother. Sarah was on the selection committee for the auditions. She is a member of the board of directors of the theatre. She wasn't trying out herself this season because of a commitment in Cohasset.

"There were two nights of auditions and after the first night we realized we had no young Patrick. We were all trying to think of someone for the part. You could have knocked me over with a feather when Jonathan won it.

Jonathan, the son of Richard and Sarah deLima, is one of four children and the only boy. The children are 10, 9, 5 and 3.

Usually playing a part in a theatrical production means sacrifices on the part of childhood stars.

And last week Jonathan's 9th birthday fell on one of the nights of dress rehearsal.

Did that stop the celebration?

No, the child had his cake on the set. It was made by Sharon Petti, who played Mame.

Cohasset's week

Fuel oil contract

Selectmen awarded the fuel oil delivery contract on Wednesday night to Nightingale Oil of Braintree at $1.10 per gallon of oil. Nightingale Oil was low bidder with a $20 per hour oil burner service charge which was equal to other bidders.

Cable committee increased

Selectmen decided last Wednesday night that the Cable Advisory Committee will have seven members.

Chairman Henry Ainslie and selectman Rocky Laugelle favored the smaller five-member committee. But Selectman Mary Jane McArthur convinced her fellow members that a seven-member committee would be more productive.

"There is a lot of work to be done," said McArthur, "I'm interested in seven people to sweat out the work load. These people who have sent in applications are very busy people."

Selectmen will review some 16 applications on Wednesday, Nov. 18.

Correction

Selectmen approved payment of $3,433 to Brett Donham and Tadhg Sweeney Architects of Boston two meetings ago for services involved in the heating job at town hall.

Last week the Mariner reported incorrectly that payment was approved for Daniel Cotton. Cotton is on the committee overseeing the work. We apologize for the error.

No Cohasset entrance

Several months ago we told you that Cohasset was being considered as one of the possibilities for a second entrance to Wompatuck State Park.

Well, the danger is past.

The latest word from the state is that Cohasset is out of the running. Norwell is still being looked at, much to the chagrin of officials there. Hinghamites are pushing hard to open up a second access to the park to relieve the traffic congestion on Route 228.

Park officials seem concerned, according to members of the park advisory council, that the state may have trouble keeping the park in operation since untilization of the huge tract is relatively low.

More to come on that story soon.

Margin Court bids

Selectmen opened bids for the reconstruction of Margin Court last Wednesday night.

The three lowest bidders were: Wayne Sawchuck Co. of Cohasset, $9,190 completed in 14 days; Sealund Co. of Marshfield, $10,800, completed in 45 days; and Iaria Brothers of Hingham, $11,925 (or $9,925 if road was closed for six days).

Strong appointed

Rita Strong was appointed recently to the personnel board. She was given a three year term on the board by the town's appointing agency, the Troika.

S. Burk Ketcham was appointed to the government study committee to replace William Weeks, the new town moderator.

Second course planned

A second course incardio-pulmonary resuscitation has been scheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 18 and Thursday, Nov. 19 from 7 to 11 p.m. at the Cohasset Community Center.

Class size will be limited. Course fee is $4.

To register, call the center weekdays, from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. at 383-0088.

New CCC directors

The board of directors of the Community Center of Cohasset recently welcomed three new members.

They are: James Kuhn who will take over the responsibilities of the Ways and Means Committee; and Janice Batts and Nancy Kinchla who will co-chair the Program committee.

All three have long been active in community and center activities and their ideas and experience will be an important contribution to the board.

McKinnon hours

State Sen. Allan McKinnon or a member of his staff will be available to constituents in Cohasset Town Hall Wednesday, Nov. 18, at 8 p.m.

If this is an inconvenient time, call his office at 722-1646 and a staff member will be glad to arrange another time for an appointment.

Named to S.S staff

Dr. Donna B. Greenberg, M.D., an Internist with offices at 25 Parking Way, has been appointed to the associate provisional staff of the South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

She is a graduate of Cornell University and received her medical degree from the University of Rochester. Dr. Greenberg completed her internship and residency in internal medicine at Boston City Hospital, followed by a fellowship in psychiatry at Mass. General Hospital.

She is an instructor at the Harvard Medical School, and is certified by the American Board of Internal Medicine.

Jonathan shines in 'Mame' ...

And then there was Halloween night. When other nine year olds were out trick and treating, Jonathan was on stage. But a number of cast members brought him candied treats anyway.

The young boy was one of the surprising bright lights in the musical. He seems to have a precious natural talent for drama.

Cohasset's Bruce Cameron played the happy-go-lucky wealthy Southerner who took Mame from the edge of poverty with his proposal.

(Although even in her apparent dire straits it was hard to imagine a poor woman with a butler and governess — acting ability to the contrary.)

Anyway Cameron comes to the production with a background steeped in community theatre. He was in fine voice, full of the composure, assurance and charm multi-money can bring to a suitor. His Beauregard Burnside was a wonderful portrait in gallantry.

Wayne Barcomb was as bigotted in a good-humored way as Mr. Upson of Connecticut should be. He probably had a few of the audience drooling for a honey-flavored daquiri.

To be expected, Gooch, played by Susie Lawler was the perfect dullard, Mame, played by Sharon Petti was her buoyant opposite, Brad Barton was a hilarious Ito, the list of credits and applause could go on for pages.

The dancers, under the direction of Donna Luther, were particularly fine. When the entire chorus did their line kicks in the "Mame" number, they just about brought down the house.

As always, the orchestra, under the direction of Salvatore Bartolotti, was superb.

Congratulations to Cynthis Kellem, the director, and everyone else who helped put the production together.

[The play is on Friday, Nov. 6, Nov. 7 and Nov. 8 at 8 p.m. at Hingham High School.]

Wunschel expressed concern about the 13,095 decrease in milk consumption for this September.

No one knows whether the students are pocketing the price of milk.

The decrease represents an average drop of milk consumption by 3,274 cartons per week.

Though school enrollment is down this year, the daily average attendance level has decreased by only 65 students. Total average daily attendance at all three schools for the month of September was 1,441.

At the Osgood School, children purchased 4,299 cartons of milk in September of 1980 compared to 2,753 milks for September 1981.

Deer Hill School milk consumption for this past September is down by 2,303 half pints of milk in comparison to September 1980.

At the Junior/Senior High School, milk sales have been cut in half. For September 1980, students bought 17,728 milks while only 8,482 milks were purchased in September 1981.

Lunch program is making a profit

By Donna Cogliano

According to Pat Wunschel, director of food services, the school lunch program is surviving more than adequately. In fact, she told school committee members last Monday night, "Financially, we are ahead of ourselves."

In September school lunch prices went up 15 cents for the new 80 cent cost. The rise of milk and lunch costs were due to reductions in government reimbursements.

The price may come down if the profitable trend continues.

So far, she has not dipped into the $2,100 appropriated from the school budget for the lunch program. "We are fairly alive and well," she said.

Minus all supply and labor costs the lunch program has profited $266.09 for September and $203.90 for October.

Wunschel said that the high school program is carrying the rest of the schools. Popularity of the new lunch a-la-carte, at the high school, has been one contributing factor to the program's success.

School Committee vice-chairman Jack Langmaid said that he does not want to see the lunch program make a profit. Wunschel assured the vice-chairman that lunch prices would be reduced if a profit there was a continuation of substantial profits.

Wunschel told Langmaid she is not ready to reduce lunch prices. "I don't think we are ready for that yet," she said.

Superintendent Eugene Crowell cautioned the committee, "At this point in time, since the history of the account is only two months old...We don't know what we will face in the winter months...I would advise the board to wait and look at this perhaps, at the first of the year."

Lunch sales for September 1981 were down 36 percent from last year. Off 448 students, who received free lunches last year, only 135 students get them this year.

School Board suspends soccer coach

Alvaro Camano, who used to play soccer professionally with the defunct Tea Men, was suspended by school committee action last week.

Camano was hired about a month ago as J.V. soccer coach.

Reports among the students indicate the young man who also played soccer professionally in his native Argentina was extremely well liked by the members of his team.

The school committee's three to two vote involves the last three games of the season. School Committee members Martha Gjesteby and Diana Kornet were opposed to the action.

The charge was that the young man was not working amicably with the head coach, Jon Anderson.

The problems between Anderson and Camano led to words some students described as "swears" during a soccer practice several weeks ago.

The varsity soccer team is having what a sports commentator called its worst season ever. Anderson is new at coaching the team.

The junior varsity team is doing well.

Clark Chatterton, athletic director, had favored Camano's appointment as varsity soccer coach, according to the young man. That report was confirmed. But the usual practice is to give a coaching position to a faculty member.

Players say the argument on the field began with a college player, one of three brought in by Coach Anderson to help with practice, and a member of Camano's junior varsity squad.

The argument ended with words between the college player and Camano.

Curran named Century III leader

Sean P. Curran, a senior at Cohasset High School, has been named the top Century III Leader in a competition at the school, according to Principal Richard Streeter.

The 17-year-old student is now eligible to compete with other local winners from around the state for one of two $1,500 scholarships and an all-expense-paid trip to the national Century III Leaders Conference, slated for March 5-8, 1982, in Colonial Williamsburg, Va. State winners will compete for the national winner's prize of an additional $10,000 scholarship.

The Century III Leaders program is designed to bring together and recognize student leaders who show both strong leadership abilities and an interest in the future of America.

Sean was judged on the basis of leadership skills, school and community involvement, and a current events examination. He also wrote a short essay on a particular issue which challenges America in its third century.

Runners-up in the competition at Cohasset High School were Stephen Bowen, Diarmuid O'Connell and Lance Trainor.

This is the seventh year of the Century III Leaders program, which awards a total of $218,500 in scholarships to 204 young leaders. Century III is sponsored and administered by the National Association of Secondary School Principals, and funded by the Shell Oil Company.

The Williamsburg meeting will be highlighted by major speakers and seminars, along with discussions among students and leaders from the worlds of business, education, and government. Speakers at past conferences have included newsmen Harry Reasoner, Howard K. Smith, and Tom Brokaw; philosopher and futurist Buckminster Fuller; and the librarian of Congress, Daniel Boorstin.

Sean is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Curran of 128 Doane Street.

Art Center has openings for Mexican trip

The South Shore Art Center still has room for more students and artists in its Mexican trip, Outdoor Painting in San Miguel De Allende with Rosalind Farbush, Feb. 15 through Feb. 19, 1982. Participants must enroll now to secure air and hotel reservations.

Students and artists may combine basking in the Mexican sun with the Drawing and Painting Workshop which will take place in the mornings from 9:30 to 12:30. Afternoons will be free to explore San Miguel de Allende with its spectacular setting in the Sierra Madre Mountains overlooking the Caja River Valley.

Instruction will be an intensive study of form, paint handling techniques, color and values in a medium of the student's choice. Critiques will be given and assignments will be required of credit students (credit is through Massachusetts College of Art Continuing Education).

San Miguel de Allende is very well known to artists all over the world as a truly beautiful art colony. The City was founded in 1542 and is noted for its Spanish Colonial Architecture, moderate climate and the special light quality so important to the painters.

Travel and lodging are the responsibility of the student but reservations may be made through the Center.

Ms. Farbush, who has just received the Grumbacher Award at the Copley Society in Boston, October 1981 and First Prize in Acrylics at the Plymouth Art Show, September 1981, is a graduate of the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, where she teaches as well as at the South Shore Art Center.

☐Boston University law student Susan Sturdy of 270 Jerusalem Road, recently received the 1981 American Jurisprudence Award for academic excellence in legal evidence and labor law. The award is sponsored by the Lawyers Cooperative Publishing Company of Rochester, N.Y.

☐Lisa Fichtner of Cohasset, a 1980 graduate of Boston College, will be a member of the dance ensemble in "Camelot" at the university's new $4.2-million Theater Arts Center from Oct. 28 to Nov. 7.

Actor-singer Gordon MacRae will star as King Arthur in the Lerner and Loewe musical which will open the 30,000-square-foot performing center on the Boston side of the campus. It will be the first all-new playhouse built in Boston since 1925, when the Metropolitan Theater opened downtown.

Fichtner, with a degree in English, is the daughter of Herm and JoAnn Fichtner of Cohasset. Her mother, JoAnn, is the choreographer for the performance.

☐Mr. and Mrs. Kevin Curran of 68 Spring Street announce the birth of their son, Jason Matthew, Oct. 25. Jason was welcomed by his three-year-old sister, Amy. Grandparents are Mrs. Connie Garofola and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Curran.

☐Miss Lisa Fichtner has just been promoted to media buyer for Giordini and Russel, a Newton advertising firm. A 1976 graduate of Cohasset High School and 1980 graduate of Boston College, Miss Fichtner, who was an English major, will be involved with purchasing space for advertising.

In addition to her recent promotion, she has been busy preparing for a trip to Rome in January during which she will sing with the Boston College Chorale.

☐Roberta and Bob Raffa attended the recent grand opening and dedication of the Boston College Theatre Arts Center. A black tie affair, the Raffas viewed the inaugural performance of "Camelot," featuring Gordon MacRae, followed by a Camelot Banquet and Ball.

Peering from the ceder cabin at the Osgood School are Sarah Atherton, Priscilla Goff, Michael Cogill and David Leahy, all of whom made the paper twice this week.

☐"Preppy" is the only way to describe the log cabin which has recently been decorated for the kindergarten class at the Joseph Osgood School.

"It's a preppy little house and the children love it," says Kindergarten teacher Christine Collins. Of course, the wallpaper is covered with alligators, the carpeting is green and the curtains are tied back with gay pink ribbons. Volunteer decorators Judy Powell and Donna Cogill have succeeded in creating a very special place for Donna's son Michael and his classmates.

Right now, the cabin is decorated with Indian corn and pumpkins. The decorations will change with the seasons and, Mrs. Collins explained, will provide an excellent way for teaching the children about the seasons, time being a difficult concept for them to deal with, at that age. With its special childsize furniture which includes a rocking chair, it's also a perfect place just to go and curl up with a good book.

☐Ellen Hanlon has just signed a two year modeling contract with the Hart Modeling Agency. She is a student at Fisher Junior College and is the daughter of Kay and George Hanlon of Beechwood Street.

☐About 100 people, most of whom were from Cohasset, attended a recent brunch at the Cohasset Gold Club which was held by the Cohasset Republican Town Committee.

Among the speakers were: Dr. Mildred Jefferson, candidate for Senator; and gubernatorial candidates state Rep. Andrew Card, Attorney Guy Carbone, John Lakian, House Republican Leader Bill Robinson, Boston City Council member John Sears, and Sandy Spaulding representing his father, Josiah; and Leon Lombardi, candidate for lieutenant governor.

Also attending were state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, State Committeewoman Polly Logan of Hingham and State Committeeman Thomas Barry of Duxbury.

A flag donated by Congresswoman Margaret Heckler which has flown over the Capitol building was the door prize and was won by Mrs. Jack Conway. Mr. Burt Pratt won a silver inaugural medallion of George Bush which was donated by Mrs. Logan.

☐Linda O'Loughlin appears to have acquired her father's interest in "show biz." Despite being "very scared" on opening night and having to manage as many as five costume changes, Linda, an eighth grader, is enjoying her premier performance in the Hingham Civic Theatre's production of "Mame." Many of her friends and neighbors are looking forward to seeing her this weekend as the performance continues.

☐Danny and Cheryl Nardo wanted to make a special contribution to the school's health education program so they gave up a day of business and opened up their salon, Reflections, to students. The Nardo's spent their time talking about hair and nail care and their importance for good health.

☐Barbara Bliss of Cohasset is the new president of the Friends of the South Shore Conservatory of Music in Hingham. Anne Durant, also of Cohasset, is vice president of the group.

Cohasset Village Fair coming Dec. 5

Cohasset's 1981 Village Fair, coming Saturday, Dec. 5, will welcome a fifth local church to the sponsoring group and will introduce many new features and locations in its 41st edition.

Joining the four village churches, which for the last two years have sponsored the event as a joint fund-raising effort, will be the Greek Orthodox congregation now worshipping in the Pope Memorial Church in North Cohasset.

Originally a joint effort of the Second Congregational, First Parish Unitarian and St. Stephen's Episcopal churches that ring the historic Cohasset Common, the Village Fair two years ago welcomed St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church to the group.

"We're delighted to have the new Greek Orthodox congregation as full partners in this big project," said General Co-Chairmen Mrs. Paul Walton, Sr., and Mrs. John C. Campbell.

"They are coming with new ideas and energy that are most welcome and we know they will contribute very substantially. This joint working together of five denominations is perhaps unique and we are certain that it will bring about a better understanding of our common purpose."

A major change this year will be the location of the Village Fair dinner in the Cohasset High School cafeteria at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 5. Noting that, in contrast to the practice of the past few years, wine will not be served, the co-chairman stated.

"As representatives of five churches in our town, the Village Fair Committee fully supports the School Committee's efforts to discourage the use of liquor by our school children and can quite understand that there should be no exception to the policy that it not be served at any occasions on school property."

This year the dinner plans aim to attract a larger group of townspeople than in the past when space was limited. A catered dinner with special added touches and features provided by the dinner committee is planned.

There will also be many changes of location of the familiar features of the Fair, some designed to provide more space in the previously crowded Town Hall or to take advantage of better locations elsewhere.

A major addition made possible by the participation of the Greek Orthodox Church will be a concert of Christmas music to be presented in that church Sunday, Dec. 6, featuring the exceptionally fine organ there.

A central committee, made up of representatives from each of the churches plus a secretary and treasurer, set overall plans for the Fair and have been working together for several months.

Members are Mrs. John Bradley and Mrs. Kevin Leary from St. Anthony's; Mrs. Robin Lawrence, Second Congregational; Mrs. Richard Avery and Mrs. John Spencer, St. Stephen's; Mrs. Demosthenes Syrmopoulos and Mrs. John Sedell, Greek Orthodox; and Mrs. C. Lewis Long and Mrs. David Terry, Unitarian. Mrs. Willfred Cooney is secretary and Mrs. Hubert Vanderlugt is treasurer.

Bus hikes

The state of public transportation here is a blot on the face of anyone remotely responsible.

We are in favor of public transportation run at a profit by private enterprise. We think capitalism works far better than the MBTA.

But the case of the Plymouth and Brockton bus line is almost enough to make us — or anyone in the realm of sanity — split at the concept of mass transit.

P&B seems to continuously cut routes, oversell bus seats and charge more for less. We've heard nothing but complaints from the regular riders — we've even heard complaints from the people who take an occasional trek to Boston by the bus system.

Now P&B wants another rate hike (that's hardly new — news will be when P&B stops asking for rate hikes) and at the same time wants the state to get out of the vanpool business.

It's a certainty P&B will lose some riders as the van pools take off. What we say to that is: wonderful, maybe that will help a system that's grown accustomed to monopoly realize that there are ways to attract passengers besides poor service.

The reason people continue to take the P&B into Boston is that it is decidedly cheaper than driving into the city. Also it's the only way for one-car families and the unlicensed.

The fact that it is cheaper to ride 50 to the motor coach, with a paid chauffeur, otherwise known as a bus driver, into a city where parking costs $4 a day and up shouldn't come as a shock.

P&B at its most wasteful should be easy competition for the OPEC ministers of inflation.

The fact that more buses aren't zooming into the city, full of traffic weary commuters, is what should surprise us.

We chalk it up to dismal service. Buses that don't provide for flexible schedules or comfort.

This is not to be read as an indictment of P&B. In the years before the oil premium, they did well to remain alive. Few suburban commuters considered taking the bus when it cost $2 or $3 a day to drive in relative comfort and with total flexibility.

That was a time when the state Department of Public Utilities was justified — if not wise — in demanding that bus service be operated by monopoly players.

After all the DPU was there to regulate rates and keep the profit margin within bounds.

Times have changed. The price of a bus trip to Boston leaps in geometric proportion, and there's probably no escape from that reality.

But this is the hour for the DPU to get out of the regulatory business for the bus industry. Let P&B set whatever rates they feel the market will bear. And let anyone else interested operate an independent bus service.

How does the Mariner Bus and Reading Matter Company sound?

Maybe we — or some other public spirited agent of the age of entrepreneurs — could get you all into the city on phased-out school buses, running every 15 minutes at rush hour for a few dimes less than the P&B.

Wants action on apt. occupancy

Letters

October 28, 1981

Board of Selectmen
Town of Cohasset
Cohasset, Mass. 02025
Dear Sirs and Madam:

I am respectfully requesting the Town of Cohasset to proceed with the enforcement of its regulations with regard to the Mary Fairman illegal apartment occupancy issue at 714 Jerusalem Road.

It was required before occupancy commenced that Mrs. Fairman obtain a release from the Board of Health before our building inspector could issue a Certificate of Occupancy. To date the only thing that has occurred is the Board of Health has approved a set of plans for a new leaching area to be added to Mrs. Fairman's existing cesspool. There is no new system yet installed and no release from the Board of Health.

Mrs. Fairman's lawyer, Richard Rogalin, refused to give a date that construction would commence and Mrs. Fairman also did not give a construction date to the Board of Health. The Board of Health does not require any applicant to give a construction date. In any case, there is no guarantee Mrs. Fairman will install a new leaching area. And, even if she does, there is still a real possibility that she will be unable to satisfy the Board of Health and get a release ...

The plans originally submitted by Neil Murphy, Mrs. Fairman's engineer, called for a field to be placed within the range of the setback requirement from two open surface drains. At Monday evening's hearing (Oct. 26), Mr. Murphy submitted amended plans moving the field but he stated he wasn't sure if that would be the dimensions as he would have to do another test pit to determine if he would encounter more ledge. The area between the existing cesspool and the new leaching field is separated by ledge and Mr. Murphy has stated it will be necessary to pipe the cesspool overflow around the ledge. Since he stated with the original plan that "he had no place else" to go, the amended site could be a real problem.

Mrs. Fairman could choose not to construct a new leaching field or a tentative commencement date might be given to the Clerk-Magistrate next Tuesday in hope of getting a dismissal of the Town's complaint.

In any case there is no guarantee Mrs. Fairman will install a new leaching area and an illegal tenancy occupancy will continue to exist. I believe the Town must press to have Mrs. Fairman's apartment vacated. The Board of Health believes this to be an issue to be handled by Mr. Litchfield.

For Mr. Litchfield's part in this matter, he had sent a letter to Mrs. Fairman advising her a release would be necessary from the Board of Health before a conversion to a two-family could commence. On June 22, 1981, at least.

I believe this town must pursue this matter for its own integrity and also to insure Mrs. Fairman does in fact update her cesspool. Thank you.

Diane C. Sullivan

Dismissal of soccer coach prompts ....

To the Editor:

I must express my intense displeasure and astonishment at the recent School Committee decision to suspend Mr. Alvaro Camano, the Cohasset J.V. Soccer Coach.

It is indeed a rare opportunity for any town to have a man of Alvaro's skill and experience to serve its youth as their soccer coach. To squander this rare chance by refusing to accept Alvaro's concession to serve as an assistant for the remainder of the season is incredibly unyielding and rude.

To bring a young Argentinian of Al's skills and integrity into our school system and to tread on his sensibilities and honor with manufactured petty charges is an example of Cohasset hospitality I chose never to witness again. I hope that the ill concealed vindictiveness displayed by the school administration and staff and the majority of the board never rears its ugly head again.

All, believe me, the people, the young boys and girls and their parents, who have been touched by your contribution to Cohasset Soccer will be forever ashamed by your humiliating treatment by our school system.

Al we knew you were a great soccer player and coach, but now after having witnessed your decorum at the board's hearing we understand what a man you are.

F. Charles DeSantis
Forest Avenue

.....astonishment and shame

To the Editor:

Last Monday, Oct. 26, the School Committee held a special meeting to hear Superintendent Crowell's recommendation that J.V. soccer coach, Alvaro Camano, be dismissed on the grounds of insubordination.

A week has passed to reflect upon that meeting and the events that led up to it, yet I am no closer to understanding the outcome which was, despite all evidence contrary to the charge, Al's dismissal.

Unfortunately, I have no difficulty identifying my emotion resulting from that decision, which is one of total shame; shame for our school system, shame for our community, shame for our country. This 'informal' hearing was an incredible travesty of justice.

I think about the Al that I have known for the past year, and about the impact he has had on our town, and I would like to say thank you. Thank you for the numerous hours spent giving soccer clinics, running the Recreation Department soccer program, coaching the girls' and boys' J.V. team at the High School.

Thank you for giving unstintedly of yourself without regard for compensation. Thank you for your warmth and friendliness, and your high personal standards. Above all, thank you, Al, for showing our children the real meaning of honor.

No longer uncommitted...

By Paul Steven Stone

We can say his mood was "uncommitted." The unexpected resurgence of the sun when more rain had been predicted had caught him off guard. And so the weight of his world descended more slowly this morning. But the law of gravity would not be completely denied...

His wife and older daughter were doing their exercises when he innocently came upstairs to get a book. Often he saw himself as a passer-by in these early morning rituals, and like a businessman hurrying to his office he usually took note of the strange scenes he passed but did his best not to break his stride.

"I'll need you to stay upstairs while I take a shower with the girls," his wife uttered in half breaths, lying on her back, her legs poised inches off the rug in an exercise designed either to strengthen her stomach muscles or to deny him free passage.

We could examine a brief verbal skirmish that ensued, but the ego of the male gender is already a half-full bucket with too many holes. Suffice it to say that reason prevailed in the particular conflict of views, and our passer-by found himself five minutes hence sitting in the bathroom contemplating with divided mind a steam-shrouded book and a slow-bleeding wound to his disrupted routine.

We can still say that his mood was uncommitted, neither high yet nor low, though a betting man would have noted his look of resignation, the moisture on his forehead, the heaviness of his movements, and given you a clear favorite in this two-horse race.

After a few minutes it became clear that his youngest daughter would not want to leave the shower as had been feared, so his presence loomed less as a necessity and more as a luxury for his wife. It is on such microscopic pins of reasoning that the wheel of emotion often spins, and his thoughts turned more and more from the book in his hand to a series of questions that like the steam from the shower seemed to transform space into substance, light into fog.

"What are you doing, sitting here like a movie extra waiting for his cue? And look at what you're sitting on — what's that tell you about your place in the order of things?"

Through the transparent shower curtain he could see muted fleshtone images in assorted sizes; the innocence of such an assembly only amplified by the laughter, the gentle teasing, the joy in all three voices. It was a delight not easily resisted; not even by one sitting on the other side of the curtain, and the oddsmakers would have been quick to note the subtle shift in muscle tension surrounding his mouth and eyes.

He saw himself as from afar, an ironic sort of figure huddled with his book in the corner of a steamy bathroom. Circumstances had joined with his slightly irascible nature to place him on this side of the shower curtain while his wife and two daughters were on the other. There they were enjoying life while he sat like Hamlet on his throne brooding over what should have been.

In a moment the decision was made. The idea had no sooner come to mind than he embraced it with abandon. He put down his book and began shedding his clothes as if they were chains that could no longer bind him.

"I think Daddy's coming in the shower," his wife happily announced to her midget-sized partners.

Seconds later there were four figures to be seen through the clouded shower curtain, four forms that by some magic power in the universe had been fused into a single, laughing unity. While on the other side of the curtain, there was no one left to notice the change.

At this point we can say that his mood was no longer uncommitted.

Fire protection budget ...

He wants to know if there is any way the shifts can be covered differently.

The motion for the special meeting on the fire department operation was made at last week's regular meeting by Selectman Mary Jane McArthur.

"I don't think we're going to solve it in 10 minutes," she said.

The special meeting meant she will be spending the evening of her birthday, Nov. 3, working on town business.

Arthur Clark, the selectmen's executive secretary, said the board and advisory committee members have to decide whether the town will come up with the extra money needed to keep fire department operation at the current level.

"If there isn't any more money, the alternative is to cut men," Clark said.

The central fire house, now the town's only working fire station, is manned by a crew of five on a shift. Town meeting last year cut the staff by two on the department. The reductions were not implemented by lay-offs but through retirements.

Meanwhile, in separate votes, just minutes apart last Wednesday, Selectmen decided to go through the preliminaries in offering the Beechwood firehouse and North Cohasset station for sale.

The Beechwood fire station, which was closed last fall because of its poor condition, would have to be removed from its location on park property if it were sold.

The North Cohasset station closed in March in an effort to conserve overtime money. North station would be offered to a buyer with its lot included.

Clark said that according to town bylaws, the town will go through a formal bidding process before it decides who it will sell the station to.

Even though selectmen will be accepting sealed bids within the next few weeks on a date to be named, the board must go to town meeting to obtain authorization to sell the two stations.

After a bid-opening date is set, prospective buyers will have two or three weeks to file their bids. "You have to give them time to go down and look it over and talk about it," said Clark.

Clark thinks the town will have little trouble selling the North Cohasset station because it is in a business district. "I know several people now are interested in it," he said.

Selectmen discussed the possible sale of each station individually.

"First of all do we want to sell it (No. Station)? It's nothing but trouble if we keep it," said Rocky Laugelle.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur favored to sell. "I'm opposed to seeing another town department operate in a separate building." In addition, McArthur doesn't want to see the Beechwood firehouse kept solely for the purpose of storage.

McArthur motioned to sell both stations which resulted in two unanimous "yes" votes. Selectmen also agreed to let Peter Laugelle, Supt. of the Tree and Park department, use the Beechwood station for storage of maintenance equipment until he is instructed to move out.

No decision has been made on what to do with extra fire trucks.

By Joan Pinkham

I know of no law proclaiming that we have to eat meat every day. Which is a very good thing considering the price and the unappetizing fact that the livestock and poultry we buy are treated with such chemicals as insecticides, antibiotics, hormones, tranquilizers, preservatives and tenderizers. That is one of the reasons why this Weight Watcher casserole was not only good to taste, but good for those of us who lunched on Donna Poole's

BROCCOLI RICE QUICHE

2 c. cooked rice
3 1/2 oz. grated Swiss cheese, divided
4 medium eggs
1/2 tsp. salt
4 oz. onion, diced
1 pkg. instant chicken broth & seasoning mix
1 c. cooked, frozen, chopped broccoli
1/2 oz. grated Parmesan cheese
1/2 c. skim milk
Dash of nutmeg and cayenne pepper

In bowl combine rice, 2 oz. Swiss cheese, 1 egg and salt. Press mixture firmly and evenly over bottom and sides of 9'' pie plate which has been oiled. Set aside. In small, non-stick skillet combine onion and broth mix. Cook until onion is tender. Spread evenly over rice crust. Top with broccoli and Parmesan. In small bowl beat remaining 3 eggs with milk, nutmeg and cayenne. Pour over broccoli. Bake at 365 for 20 min. Top with remaining Swiss cheese and bake 20 min. longer. Let stand 15 min. before cutting.

So many of us are like sheep, willingly led by the ads, thinking we can weather life's windstorms with the aid of a crunchy candy bar, or that we'll be slim and alluring with a can of lite beer in one hand. Consider the baked bean. Come Saturday night, many a New Englander takes down a can of beans from the shelf to serve with that night's frankfurters. The price you have paid is high because canned beans are already sauced and seasoned. With few exception, EDTA, an antioxidant which preserves color, has been added, so be sure to check each label. If you make your own oven baked beans (all New England cookbooks have the recipe), you can freeze the leftovers, or make this nutritious

BEAN LOAF

2 c. ground cooked beans
1/4 c. fresh bread crumbs, wheat germ or combination of two
1 egg
2 T tomato juice
2 T catsup
1/4 c. chopped onion
1 1/2 tsp. salt, 1/4 tsp. pepper
1 T oil

Combine ingredients, using oil to grease loaf pan or mold. Bake in 350 oven 45 min. Vary by adding any, or all of the following: 1/4 to 1/2 c. grated cheese, 1/4 c. chopped olives, 1/4 c. chopped nuts, 1/2 c. sauteed mushrooms. Serves 4.

Who do you suppose decreed that breakfast must be limited to cereal, eggs and bread? Perhaps they didn't realize how simple it is to make up this batter the night before and refrigerate leftovers for a few days for these

WHOLE WHEAT PANCAKES

3/4 c. whole wheat flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
1 T raw sugar or honey
1 c. milk [or water plus 4 T dry milk powder]
1 egg
1 1/2 T oil

Combine dry ingredients. Combine liquid ingredients and add to dry ingredients only until moistened. Any lumps will cook out. Brush a skillet with thin covering of oil and heat until a few drops of water sprinkled on the surface dance about. Spoon batter onto hot skillet. When bubbles appear on the surface, turn and brown pancakes on other side. Yield: 10 to 12 pancakes. Note: You can freeze cooked pancakes by placing a sheet of waxed paper between each, then wrapping the package in freezer paper or foil. At breakfast time remove as many from the pile as you need and pop in the toaster to restore them. Can be stored in freezer three to four months.

Theater has a history in town hall

By David Wadsworth

The Cohasset Dramatic Club opens its 1981-82 season with Alan Ayckbourn's 1973 English Comedy, "Table Manners." As it has been for the last 60 continuous seasons, the site for the performances will be Cohasset's venerable Town Hall stage.

The Dramatic Club's first presentation at the Town Hall was playwright James Montgomery's comedy called "Nothing But the Truth," performed in 1921.

Since then, many outstanding plays have been produced by the Club; including "You Can't Take It With You" (1941), "Blithe Spirit" (1951), "The Glass Menagerie" (1954), "Dial 'M' for Murder" (1957), "The Night of the Iguana" (1971), and "Arsenic and Old Lace" (1978).

Following renovation of the Town Hall during the 1920's, which saw the building of the present auditorium and stage, both amateur and professional theatrical groups began using the carefully architected new facility. Burtram Pratt, in his definitive, "Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset, Volume 2," describes the activities of the professional summer theatrical group called the South Shore Players, which began staging plays in the Town Hall on July 10, 1933. This group, having association with the drama department of Yale University and with the Civic Theater of Indianapolis, drew to Cohasset many leading actors and actresses from Broadway.

The late Humphrey Bogart was a resident actor in Cohasset during the 1934 summer season, and performed on the Town Hall stage. Cohasset residents having considerable theatrical talent appeared in the Town Hall along with renowned professionals.

In 1939, the eminent American playwright, Thornton Wilder, appeared at the Town Hall in his own play, "Our Town." The South Shore Players stayed in Cohasset for well more than a decade under the leadership of Alexander Dean, then his widow, Virginia Dixon Dean and Frederick Burleigh, an associate. Meanwhile, the Cohasset Dramatic Club, an amateur organization drawing upon the talents of local residents, attracted audiences for its presentations during the fall, winter, and spring seasons. On March 28, 1932, it hosted a performance of three, one act plays done by the Dramatic Club itself, along with the North River Players and the Hingham Players' Club. Each club presented a single, one-act play, and Cohasset's contribution was "The Clod" by Lewis Beach. Cohasset's cast members were Helen Barker, Philip L. Towle, Paul Blackmur, James W. Doyle, and Minot A. Browne, Jr. These plays were intended to mark the beginning of annual competition for the Lawrence Barrett Dramatic Trophy, sponsored by Mrs. Henry T. Bourne in honor of her grandfather, the late Lawrence Barrett, one of the outstanding figures of the American stage in the last century, and a Cohasset resident. The audience received ballots to vote for the best performance of the evening.

In more recent years, the Dramatic Club has sponsored benefit performances for, among others, the Cohasset Historical Society. Two of the benefits have been "The Pleasure of His Company," on May 16, 1974, and "Butterflies Are Free," a comedy by Leonard Gershe presented on May 15, 1975.

The Cohasset Dramtic Club is the oldest continuous operation theatrical organization on the South Shore. It deserves a home in Cohasset on the Town Hall stage, where the community's rich theatrical history still exists. The Dramatic Club is a large part of the cultural and artistic heritage of its native Town. Its hardworking members need the support of everyone who wants to see the theater arts survive in Cohasset.

Dinner and lecture

An illustrated lecture on the trade that opened China to the West and filled 19th century homes with Oriental art and furniture will be the feature of the annual dinner meeting of the Cohasset Historical Society. The dinner will be held in Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House Thursday evening, Nov. 19.

Catered dinner

A catered dinner will be served at 6:30 followed by a brief business meeting and the lecture. Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker at 383-0773.

The speaker will be Mrs. Ellen Woolf of Cohasset, a lecturer, guide and curatorial assistant at the China Trade Museum in Milton. Mrs. Woolf has been associated with the Museum for the past five years and has spoken to groups throughout eastern Massachusetts. She holds a B.A. degree from Stanford and a Master's degree from New York University and taught history and art history at the senior high school level for 12 years.

Whale beached on Jerusalem Road

"There's a whale on Jerusalem Road," an excited voice reported to the Mariner Thursday morning.

"On the road, really, can traffic pass by?" the reporter said not understanding the situation at all.

The body of the whale lingered on the rocky coast for two days. Stormy seas and the rocks of the Cohasset shore kept the Coast Guard from making a quick attempt to move the gigantic carcass.

Friday it was pulled out to sea by a Coast Guard craft that wasn't as large as the remains. But it floated back to shore, landing this time in nearby Scituate on Egypt Beach.

Sunday the patrol craft pulled the body out again. The second time it was towed 22 miles out to sea, well beyond the shipping lanes.

Spectators watched from the shore throughout the blustery weather that had pushed the body onto the coastline. Officials of the New England Aquarium declared the body to be a 40-foot adult fin whale, which is common in these waters.

The remains couldn't be studied to determine what had caused the death of the mammal. But an official of theAquarium said the whale had died sometime before washing up on the beach.

Coast Guardsmen are accustomed to dealing with whale bodies floating out at sea.

"Whales die every day," one of the young Guardsmen at the Scituate rescue station commented.

When larger Coast Guard boats come upon whale bodies at sea, they shoot them full of ammunition so they will sink to the bottom of the ocean.

The large mass is a hazard to navigation.

But the 44-foot craft out of Scituate didn't have that option in handling the beached whale. The guns aboard a boat of that size are M-16's and .45's, according to one of the Guardsmen.

Weapons of that size would not provide ammunition with enough weight to sink a 50-foot whale.

"We doubt it will float back in a third time," the Guardsman said. "We took it quite a way out. Far enough to keep clear of small craft."

Spooktacular Happenings at Community Center

The Great Pumpkin Lady, usually known as Joanne Sheppard and the Community Center's Wonderful Witch, Wanda, Janice Batts, both agree that last Saturday's Halloween Happening was a huge success.

Many colorful and attractively decorated pumpkins were entered into the pumpkin contest including pirates, football players and even a Santa Claus. And it was great fun to watch the children in their fantastic costumes as they paraded around the common.

Afterwards, there were treats for all, thanks to the Donut Tree and McDonalds.

Gas leak located

Prior to Monday's school committee meeting in the High School's Home Economics room, Supt. Eugene Crowell and Business Manager John Raftery sniffed out a gas leak from the adjoining cooking room.

Approximately 30 minutes after the meeting commenced, a gas company worker responded to Raftery's call and shut off the gas. The problem was located and a plumber will correct it.

Sports banquet

The Cohasset fall sports banquet will be held on Thursday, Nov. 12, at 7 p.m. in the high school cafeteria.

This annual event sponsored by the Boosters Club, recognizes the efforts of all students who have participated in a fall sport.

All parents are encouraged to accompany their son or daughter to this formal wind-up of the fall season. Parents' tickets are $4 each.

Gridiron dinner dance

The Cohasset Gridiron Scholarship Dinner Dance which will be held Friday, Nov. 20 has been changed to St. Francis Cabrini Parish Center, Hood Road, Scituate. The evening will begin with cocktails at the cash bar, at 7 p.m., with dinner being served at 8.

The Celebrations Ltd. of Cohasset, will, by popular demand, cater the Italian Fiesta Dinner. Also, back again from last year by popular demand, the Nick Lamberti Group from Boston will provide the music for dancing.

Tickets will not be sold at the door. All tickets must be reserved and paid for in advance by Nov. 15. There are a limited number of tickets, which are selling quickly, so reserve now by contacting any member of the Gridiron Club or call 383-1621, 383-6322 in the evening.

The dinner dance is held each year by the Gridiron Club as a fundraiser for their scholarship program. Each year the club gives out at least $2500 in scholarships. This is a great cause; order your tickets now, help the Fund and have some fun at the same time.

Smokeout festivities

Michael Gill, health coordinator, will conduct the Great American Smokeout festivities on November 13 and 16 at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools respectively.

The program will feature films and talks. Posters, buttons, pledge cards, and iron-ons will be given to the children.

A date has not yet been set for a similar day at the High School.

Early release day

Thursday, Nov. 12, will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Junior/Senior High School, 12:20 p.m.; Deer Hill School, 12:45 p.m., and the Joseph Osgood School, 12:55 p.m.

Lunch will be served in all of the schools.

This early release day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee. The program at the elementary level will be devoted to the incorporation of library science programs into the regular classroom curriculum. At the Junior/Senior High School, teachers will review and discuss the proposed alcohol and drug policy.

Custodians praised

Several reports praising the school custodial services were presented to the school committee on Monday night.

School administrators wrote of the custodians' high visibility, morale, motivation, and overall excellent performance.

A request was made by Holly Grant, of the Student Advisory Council, for improvements in the girls' locker room at the high school.

Grant said paper products are not always available during the day and that no one used the showers because they are dingy with tiles missing, and no curtains.

Supt. Eugene Crowell was concerned about Grant's comments.

Boosters meet

The Cohasset Boosters Club will meet Wednesday, Nov. 4 at 8 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Merle Brown, 546 Beechwood St.

The Boosters Club supports all athletic teams in the high school. Anyone interested in attending the meeting should call 383-1625.

Ms. Kaye Hult, center, new Church School Dir. and Student Minister at the Second Cong. Church, is welcomed by Mrs. Stephen Perry of the church's Christian Ed. Comm. and Rev. John Benbow.

Craft show

The North River Chapter of the New England Home for Little Wanderers will present its annual craft show and sale at Scituate High School Nov. 21 and 22.

Over 50 spaces will be available for crafters displaying their own handcrafted work. Quality rather than quantity is the aim of the judging committee. Only handcrafted work will be accepted. Like crafts will be limited so that there will be a large variety of work.

Co-chairing the show for this year are Susanna Piers of Scituate and Marsha Silvia of Cohasset. All of the members in the chapter of Friends will be working in some capacity on the show. New members are needed to keep the life and workings of the group active, involved and generating new ideas.

The next meeting is Nov. 17 in Marshfield. Anyone interested in joining the group or participating in the craft show can call 545-1034 or 383-9395 for applications.

Holiday Shoppe

The South Shore Art Center Gallery welcomes the public to the opening of its first Holiday Shoppe, Sunday, Nov. 8 from 5 to 7 p.m.

This special gift shop consists of gifts under $100 (such as specially designed wrapping paper, gift cards, Christmas ornaments, T-shirts and "Art" buttons, to name a few) which have all been designed and donated by the gallery artists.

The Holiday Shoppe is under the direction of Linda Summers, Gallery Coordinator, of Cohasset and her committee: Dorie Weintraub, Syma, Marion Bush and Thompson Hughes all of Hingham.

This shop will be open Monday through Friday from noon to 4 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 to 1 through Dec. 23.

For further information, call the Center at 383-9548.

Newcomers Xmas Fair

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club will hold a Christmas Fair Saturday, Nov. 14, from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the GAR Hall in Scituate.

Each member is being asked to donate a craft item of some sort, or a homemade baked good with the value of the item to be no less than $5. (More than one item would be greatly appreciated, of course.)

A few suggestions of things to bring are: Christmas ornaments, stocking stuffers, hors d'oeuvres, and pies that can be frozen. This plan of having members contribute items is a new one and is meant to encourage all of the club's members to get involved and enjoy a festive pre-holiday gathering. Cider and doughnuts will be sold for refreshments.

This fair will replace the regular monthly meeting. Information regarding where to drop off your donation can be obtained by calling Anne Mullen at 545-5723. The public is most welcome to attend, especially newcomers to the area. The GAR Hall is located on Country Way, just south of Ronnie Shone's.

C.G. Aux. seeks members

The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary is looking for experienced boaters who would be interested in becoming members of the Auxiliary and assisting in its various programs.

Membership in the Coast Guard Auxiliary offers an exciting opportunity to help boatmen while improving your own boating skills. As the volunteer, civilian arm of the Coast Guard, Auziliarists patrol marine events and regattas and assist boatmen in distress. In addition, many Auxiliarists are active in the Auxiliary's Courtesy Motorboat Examination program, or in advanced membership training and teaching safe-boating to the public.

Auxiliary membership is open to men and women who are United States citizens and at least 17 years old and who own a 25 percent interest in a boat, aircraft or amateur radio station, or who have other qualifications which would prove valuable to Auxiliary programs.

To learn more about the Auxiliary and its mission, interested boaters are invited to attend a coffee hour at Point Allerton Coast Guard Station in Hull Sunday evening, Nov. 15, at 7 p.m. For additional information, call 545-4956 or 326-4715.

Street Hockey registration

The Recreation Dept. will conduct registration for the Street Hockey League, for girls and boys between the ages of 6 (Dec. 1, 1981) and 12 (no older than 12 by Dec. 1, 1981), Saturday morning, Nov. 14, from 8 to 10:30, at Town Hall.

The fee will be $6 per person and a 50 percent discount will be offered to second and subsequent children registering from the same family. There will be an additional charge later of about $2.60 for team shirts.

The program will be held Saturday afternoons, at the Cohasset High School gym. Times of games will depend on the division of players assignments.

Bob Beggan will be the Recreation Dept. Coordinator this year and will be assisted by Jack Langmaid and Mr. Jim Gallagher. Play is scheduled to begin Saturday, Dec. 12.

Please make every attempt to register on time as late registrations will be accepted on a space available basis only.

Deer Hill student poetry ...

The Unicorn

Unicorn, Unicorn, where did you get your uni-horn?
A seashell stuck in my head and has stayed.
Unicorn, Unicorn, why are you so enchanting?
I weave a spell around you so that I may be beautiful.

Unicorn, Unicorn, where did you get your velvety skin?
A drapery fell on my body and therefore has stuck.
Unicorn, Unicorn, why are you mythical?
Because I fade in your memory when you.....

Unicorn, Unicorn, why are you going?
Because you don't believe in me.
Unicorn, Unicorn, I believe in you.
Child, child, but I don't believe in you.

Mr. Sadness lives in a shack. The windows are always shut.
Mr. Sadness has a droopy wife.
Mr. Sadness has a water bed full of tears.
He has black hair, he's 35 years old, he has wrinkled skin.
He has no friends because he always cries.
His father is hanging his arms over and head down.

Metamorphoses stories

Once upon a time a giant snake was chasing me so I didn't just stand there I booked it! Then I was behind a hollow tree and he passed me and I was thinking of what to do so I said to myself, Ask dad to help. So I said to my dad, "HELP Dad!" So all of a sudden I saw the snake was coming back so I said, "Hurry Up." All of a sudden I turned into a river and the snake tried to jump it and he fell in and drowned. Then my dad started to cry. A drop of his tears fell on me and I changed back to a boy.

I was walking down a path and 3 legs were chasing me because they wanted a body. But the legs did not know I was magic and my friend was too. I tried to make him a body but my powers died. I was screaming for help but the 3 legs caught up to me. I was just about to fall when I turned around and said "Hip hop turn into a chair," and then my friend came. I said, "I am glad you heard me scream or else I would have died." He may be the chair you are sitting in today.

For Joanne Fichtner the excitement never leaves

This choreographer loves her work

By Laura Doherty

The hours may be difficult and the demands, many, but there is no doubt that choreographer Joanne Fichtner loves her work.

And, right now, she'll tell you — "The excitement never leaves." Joanne has just finished her 13th show which just happened to be "Camelot" with Gordon MacRae. "It was my first time working with someone like Gordon MacRae," she recalls, "but he really makes you feel very comfortable."

Joanne describes how the well-known actor and star of Carousel would run through his dance every night. "And, every time, he'd pass me in the hall," she laughs, "he'd say, 'Come on, Joanne, let's do the dance.' " Evidently, the pleasure he took in the dance was communicated to the audience because they loved it and each night would burst into applause when he finished.

Working in the new Boston College Theatre Arts Center was a special treat for Joanne who was tremendously impressed by it. "Camelot" was the inaugural performance for the grand opening of the center and, as such, was extensively covered by the media.

Joanne was also impressed with the young people she was working with whom she describes as "probably as professional as any you'd meet." Evidence of this dedication was when one dancer fell and injured himself but still managed to recover himself in such a way that the audience thought the fall was part of the act.

Every dance in "Camelot" is different and, as is her custom, Joanne did a lot of research before working out the choreography. For instance, for one of the numbers, a Maypole dance, she first had to find out why people would be doing that sort of a dance in the time of King Arthur.

The choreography is always worked out before auditions, "so I know what I'm looking for," she explains. For the Maypole number, Joanne set up one in her back yard, this summer, which soon became a star attraction for the neighborhood children. The weaving and braiding of the streamers had to be carefully planned so that the dancers wouldn't end up with a bundle of knots.

From her own experience, Joanne wants the dancers to feel as confident as possible when they audition. "I want them to feel that they have done the best they can," she says, "although I pretty much know after the first four steps."

Although Joanne enjoys working with young people and seeing them learn to do something they've never done before, she underlines the importance of professionalism and discipline. If any dancer is late more than once, they're out. "They have to have fun with you but they also have to respect you," she adds.

Joanne has been dancing in shows since she was 12. In Philadelphia, she danced for the Lee Henderson Dancers and studied privately with Walter Keenan. She has long been involved in community theatre and is well known in Cohasset, for such shows as "How To Succeed" and "Pajama Game."

When she first applied to do "Cabaret" at Boston College, four years ago, she was hired on the spot. "They wanted someone who could relate to young people," says Joanne who feels her previous work experience was a definite advantage.

Talking to Joanne, it's evident that she's very happy with the decision she made a few years ago that "it was high time to do the things I want to do." She's also grateful for her family's support. Her husband, Herm, she explains, "knows the type of work I want to do and how it has to be done." Her daughter Lisa, also, loves the theatre and was one of the dancers in "Camelot." And Mike, who is a student at B.C. would often stop by to say "Hi" to his Mom during her rehearsals.

Cohasset residents will have the opportunity to view Joanne's work, this coming Spring, in the senior class play, "Li'l Abner" with Beth Goff, directing, and Helen Ketcham, assisting.

Gingerbread workshop

Registrations are still being accepted at the Cohasset Community Center for a special gingerbread workshop which will be held Tuesday, Nov. 10, from 10 a.m. to noon.

Students will be helped to make their own creations in the program which costs $4.

Come and learn how to make an attractive pine cone wreath for your door for the holidays Wednesday, Nov. 18, from 10 a.m. to noon. A wire and frame will be provided and students should bring cones, decorations and wire clippers (if possible). The cost of the program is $5.

Special holiday treats will be taught in a candy workshop on Thursday, Nov. 19, from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Panorama eggs, marzipan, lollipops and gumdrop flowers will be included in the program which will cost $6.

The program committee is now completing plans for a special bus trip to the Search for Alexander exhibit at the Musuem of Fine Arts Tuesday, Dec. 1 from 9 to 5 p.m. The $16 fee includes admission to the museum and lunch at the new restaurant.

Information on these programs may be obtained by calling 383-0088, weekdays, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Shrimp pate from the Junior League

"Presenting Boston: A Cookbook by the Junior League of Boston, Inc." was featured at the recent meeting of the South Shore Area of the Junior League at the home of Jan Pyle of Cohasset. Sue Park of Boston demonstrated the making of Shrimp Pate, Salmon Stuffed Cherry Tomatoes and Domino Bread. These hors d'oeuvres are both unusual and delicious, and add a festive touch to holiday entertaining.

The Shrimp Pate was chosen for its subtle flavor and ease of prepartation. While this recipe serves 16 to 20 people, preparation time is only ten minutes. The recipe is as follows:

SHRIMP PATE

2 oz. flat anchovy fillets
1 lb. shrimp cooked
1/4 cup butter, softened
1/4 cup white wine
4 drops Tabasco
1/2 Tbsp. capers
Salt and pepper to taste

Wash and dry anchovies; place in a blender with remaining ingredients. Blend until a smooth paste is formed. Adjust seasonings; chill thoroughly and serve on unsalted crackers.

A luncheon of Portuguese Fish Chowder, Black Mushroom Soup and Spinach and Bacon Salad was served following the demonstration. Dessert included Lemon Loves, Trilly Bars and Cheese Bee's Knees. All of these recipes are included in the Cookbook.

"Presenting Boston" is available in local bookstores and gift shops. In addition, copies may be purchased by mailing $8.95, $.45 tax and $1.25 postage to the Junior League of Boston, Inc. 117 Newbury Street, Boston, Ma., 02116.

The Cookbook has been a very successful fund raising project for the Junior League. Proceeds support local League projects including Museum Without Walls and Kids on the Block. Museum Without Walls acquaints local teachers with Children's Museum material available in special kits for use in the classroom. League volunteers bring six large "Kids on the Block" puppets to local schools to demonstrate the difficulties that face the handicapped child. The "Kids" were warmly received by classes in Hingham and Cohasset last year and will be available to visit in Hingham, Cohasset, Hanover and Norwell in February and March 1982.

Members of the Cookbook Committee living in local towns include Chairman Suzy Cummings, Nancy Bartlett, Anne Vanderweil, Judy Coutu, Sylvia Hawe and Deborah Britten of Hingham, and Anne Moore and Estey Manning of Cohasset.

Selectmen endorse legislation to protect impounded dogs

By Donna Cogliano

Selectmen endorsed a resolution last week which prohibits pound animals from being sold or given away for experimentation.

In effect, the resolution opposes the state's pound seizure law which since 1957 has allowed state-licensed research institutions to go to public pounds and seize, at a nominal cost, any animal held over the mandatory 10 day waiting period (7 days in Suffolk County).

Selectmen acted on the request of Mary Jane Schwartz, of Nichols Road, who is on the board of directors of the New England Anti-Vivisection Society in Boston. Schwartz said it was not just her organization lobbying for legislative change but many groups.

Originally Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray thought that a portion of the bill might advance for a House vote. After a conversation with Chairman Rep. Charles Flaherty of Cambridge on Monday Murray predicted that the bill will die in committee.

Specifically, the proposed bill, H.1245 is before the Committee on Counties and will be voted on once it is presented to the House.

Besides repealing the pound seizure law, the bill would amend dog laws. These changes in the dog laws involve what would happen to unwanted pets held in public custody. The bill states that unclaimed pets can only be re-united with owners, adopted, or euthanized.

Rep. Murray said she supports the bill but would like to see a few changes and additions to the bill. She would like to see a better check on research laboratories so that the state could close a lab down for performing surgery without anesthesia on animals or not allow them to buy dogs in public custody.

Murray, who has two dogs, a cat, and a horse in the family, said, "I do not approve of animals suffering."

She said she knows of one laboratory that

Hugos not sold

Reports that Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant is in the process of being sold to the John Roy family of Jerusalem road are incorrect, a family spokesman said Tuesday.

The story is wrong, the spokesman said, referring to a front-page report in the Monday night edition of the Patriot Ledger.

The well-known restaurant is owned by the estate of the late John Carzis and has been on the block for several months as was reported recently in the Mariner. This summer, the estate sold Kimball's By-the-Sea Motel and two apartment buildings across the street to the Roy Corporation for $1.4 million. The corporation is owned by the John Roy family.

The family has had an option on the restaurant but has no plans to exercise that option.

300 honor Mary Jeanette Murray

By Patricia Desmond

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray accepted the Old Colony Boy Scouts' designation as "Distinguished Citizen" while more than 300 friends and political helpmates watched the start of next year's campaign.

The Boy Scout dinner to honor the representative from Cohasset, Hingham and Hull brought more Democrats than Republicans to the Lantana. But then there are more elected Democrats in the area.

Just two days before a small caucus of Democrats had gotten together at the Hingham town hall to announce their official candidate for Rep. Murray's chair would be Joan Oates, member of the Hingham planning board.

Rep. Murray, a Republican, will be making a formal announcement sometime next year but she hasn't given a thought to getting out of political life.

At the testimonial there were too many tributes to be printed. The overwhelming tone of the night was praise for the representative for the time and service she has given.

There were a few Eagle Scouts in the crowded room. There were more white-haired members of senior citizens groups.

President Ronald Reagan sent a special commendation. WJDA's Herb Fontaine read the presidential message.

Insects and fire stations are T.M. fare

Mosquitos, gypsy moths, sale of the two unmanned fire stations, capping the dump...these are the issues voters will face at the special town meeting called for 7:30 p.m., Monday, Dec. 14, at the high school.

Selectmen voted last week to hold the meeting. The warrant closes at 4:30 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 12.

There is some question whether the sale of the fire stations will be on this warrant or held until the annual town meeting. Selectmen were to make a decision at their meeting tonight (Wednesday).

A total of 11 articles were discussed as possibilities for the warrant at the selectmen's meeting last week. They are:

1. Money for landfill area.
2. Purchase of Penn. railroad property.
3. Spraying for gypsy moths in the spring.
4. $15,000 for Blue Cross/Blue Shield.
5. Unpaid bills.

Buyers interested in fire stations

There's plenty of interest in purchasing the town's abandoned fire stations and from one of our unscientific polls done at Cushing Plaza there's good community support for the thought.

Arthur Clark, selectmen's executive secretary, said he's had eight or ten inquiries about the North Cohasset fire station.

Those expressions of interest have come from business people.

"Of course, we've got to make up our mind what we're going to do about the sewerage problem there," Clark added.

It seems the cesspool by the station is inadequate and there is no nearby sewer line that could be tied into.

Clark said there has been one of two inquiries about the Beechwood fire station. That building would have to be moved by the new owner. It is now located on park land near the end of Beechwood Street. The neighborhood is residential.

The North Cohasset station on the other hand is on property zoned for business use.

But back to our poll: twelve shoppers at Cushing Plaza were stopped by our inquiring reporter.

The question was: should the town sell off the Beechwood and North Cohasset fire stations? That's a question that will come up at the special town meeting, Monday, Dec. 14 at the high school.

The people polled were all from Cohasset. The five people stopped by the Mariner who came from Scituate and Hingham were politely told that the survey underway was for Cohasset residents only.

The answer was overwhelmingly in favor of disposal of the two stations.

In fact, one resident from the Beechwood part of town thought the old building down her way should be moved off the site as soon as possible.

However she said she would want to see another fire station built in its place, one the fire chief would be interested in operating.

NAME THIS PUP and win a prize! It's a Golden Retriever he, and he's the latest member of the Mariner staff. Obviously the name should be newspaper oriented. Prizes will be $40 for first, $25 for second, $10 for third with two-year subscriptions for honorable mention. Deadline on entries are those with postmarks of Nov. 18. Mail entries to Pup Contest, Mariner Newspapers, P.O. Box 682, Marshfield, MA 02050.

Cohasset's week

Parking ban

The all night parking ban begins Sunday, Nov. 15.

Police Chief John DeBassio asked the Mariner to remind our readers that the ban covers all town roads and continues until March 15.

Police officers will be ticketing to enforce the ban and the minimum ticket in town is now $10.

The ban is to keep the streets clear of impediments during the cold weather months.

Town bylaw prohibits the parking on any town way for more than an hour between the hours of 2 and 6 a.m. Some parts of town where off-street parking is scarce are historically susceptible to parking tickets over the winter months.

"We wanted to give the people warning," the chief said.

Margin Court contract

Selectmen awarded the contract for reconstruction of Margin Court to the low bidder, Wayne Sawchuck Co. of Cohasset. The $9,190 project is to be completed in 14 days.

Tree climber appointed

Robert Mortenson of Rockland was appointed tree climber by selectmen last Wednesday night. Mortenson was recommended by Peter Laugelle of the Tree and Park Department.

No occupancy permit

Though plans for a septic system were approved by the Board of Health on Oct 16, Mary Fairman of 714 Jerusalem Road should not be issued an occupancy permit until the new septic system is installed and approved by the Board of Health, said Assistant Town Counsel John K. Kirby.

Last Wednesday selectmen confirmed Kirby's recommendation and instructed Building Inspector James Litchfield not to issue an occupancy permit to Fairman.

Loss of pay

When Daylight Savings Time ended, the clock at the police station moved back an hour and the men on the graveyard shift lost the hour's pay.

The midnight shift that unusual evening worked a nine hour shift for eight hours pay. They came on at midnight, just as they are supposed to do, and finished at 8 a.m., nine hours after the start of the shift.

The town's refusal to pay the three men on the shift one hour overtime is the basis for a grievance filed this week by the police union.

Police Chief John DeBassio expects to resolve the situation long before it reaches the arbitration stage. In fact the chief said he hopes to have the problem resolved before it comes up at a selectmen's meeting.

Arthur Clark, selectmen's secretary, pointed out that the men working the midnight shift are not docked for an hour in the spring when Day Light Saving Time begins.

"We feel one wipes the other out," Clark said.

This is the way the matter has been handled for years, he added.

The chief says that if he does end up paying overtime for the night Daylight Savings Time ended, the men working April get seven hours' pay for the night the clocks move ahead.

"It's really just a bookkeeping headache," the chief said.

School payment

Selectmen voted, 3-0, to authorize payment of $4,326 due to S.S. Regional School District.

Constable request

Selectmen took under advisement, Thomas J. Kelley's request for constable. Kelley is of Weymouth.

Supports bottle bill

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, in a letter to selectmen, said that she supports the bottle bill and would vote to override the Governor's veto, if necessary.

Street lights off

Quite a few street lights in town are off.

But Arthur Clark, selectmen's secretary, says many of the unlit lights are supposed to be on. Recently selectmen voted to have Eastern Edison dim several thousand street lights. The lights extinguished by vote of the board are supposed to have yellow and black tape fastened to the pole.

Clark said the electric company used to have someone called a spotter working for them. The spotter would check on whether lights were actually on.

Since street lights are not metered, the town pays for the electricity whether or not the lamp has been destroyed by vandals or just worn out with time.

"Now we're supposed to call Edison and tell them if a light is out," Clark said.

He is checking into the problem.

Insects and fire stations are T.M. fare ...

6. Joining the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project.

7. Accept legislation regarding the collection of parking fees.

8. Printing of bylaws.

9. Dispose of North Cohasset and Beechwood fire stations.

10. To adopt a fee schedule, town clerk.

11. An article for principal payment for police and fire station which was due on July 1, 1981. $10,000 plus $155 interest fee, totaling $10,155.

No one knows exactly what the plans for the Cedar Street dump will cost. The state is insisting the town place six feet of gravel-like fill over the landfill as well as a six inch clay cap. Some expansion of the present operation will be allowed — all on town-owned land — if the town fills the lower land to six feet above the water table.

Cost for the fill will be worked out by consultants to the board of health. The figure won't be known until sometime next week.

Kevin O'Brien, health agent, met with state officials last week and received an initial approval of the concept.

"Some details about the kind of fill are being worked out," O'Brien added.

Buyers interested in fire stations ...

"We did what we could to make them put men down there," she said, matter of factly. "It doesn't do us any good to have an engine in the old station if they won't drive it to a fire."

Only two people opposed the idea. Neither would allow identification to be printed along with the opinion.

One man thought the town might be rushing too fast in dumping the properties.

"This 2½ thing is making everyone come up with ways to raise money aside from the tax rate and ways to cut back. But what they aren't thinking about is the overall picture," he said.

His view of that overall picture is that development in town will force the expansion of services, whether the town realizes it or not.

"Especially in Beechwood, they will need town services. They keep developing the area," he said.

The other person opposed to the sale was a woman concerned also about the lack of planning for other town needs.

"The town keeps asking for money to buy this or that. A garage or a sewer plant. If they want to sell these things they should make sure there are no other uses."

Two of the people polled were not aware the fire chief had closed down two stations.

By Joan Pinkham

We all like a little recognition, so perhaps I should be flattered to think my name is fast becoming a household word, if only in the world of catalogues. Through no doing of mine, a number of somebodies "out there" have decided I want their Christmas catalogue...many so certain, that I'm getting second and third copies from them. My first impulse last August was to add it to the welter of junk mail in our post office wastebasket, for it's really annoying to be asked to think Christmas before it's even Labor Day. Now, however, I've developed quite a love affair with my foot-high pile of catalogues and feel that for those of us who have neither the time nor inclination to do the malls, shopping by mail is a great convenience. So now, I'm already thinking Christmas thoughts and here is a recipe from Jan Rush for a little neighborly gift, called

DAIQUIRI LIQUEUR

4 limes
3 c. light rum
1½ c. superfine granulated sugar

Pare very thinly the bright-colored rinds from the limes (no white). Blot peel on paper toweling to remove any excess oil. Put peel in a 4 cup screw-top jar. Add 2 c. rum. Close jar. Store in a cool, dark place for two days or until rum has absorbed the flavor and color of the peel. Remove peel. Add sugar. Shake til sugar dissolves. Add remaining 1 c. of rum and stir. Store in cool, dark place at least one week. Makes two pints.

Catalogues and magazines with pictures of dreamy kitchens with everything in its proper niche leave me wondering if they provide a "catch-all" drawer. Who could function without the comfort of knowing they have the drawer to resort to when they lose a favorite recipe, need an elastic band or toothpick to test the cake in the oven. I also have a "catch-all" folder in my desk and today I found a note from Carollee Ferris asking for the address of Leona Woodring Smith who wrote: "The Forgotten Art of Flower Cookery." It's: Mrs. Harry K. Smith, St. Johns, Penn. 18247...from Libby Long comes a cooking hint, suggesting that we add overripe fruit to pancake batter, rather than throwing it away. Just add that old banana, pear, etc. to the batter and mix it all in the blender...Ginny Whitmore has been good enough to send along their favorite lobster bisque recipe in answer to a request from Gloria Petrocelli. Ginny writes: "I've even made it with just the shells, as we'd eaten all the meat!" From "Peter Hunt's Cape Cod Cookbook," here is

1 5 lb. lobster, boiled (or 2 2½ lb.)
2 chicken bouillon cubes
1 onion, sliced
4 celery stalks with leaves
1/4 tsp. nutmeg
1/4 tsp. salt
Parsley and paprika

Remove meat from lobster. Dice and set aside. Crush claws and shells. Place in saucepan. Add 2½ c. water, bouillon, onion, celery, bay leaf, cloves and pepper. Simmer ½ hour and strain. In another pan, melt butter. Stir in flour slowly. Add milk, heavy cream, nutmeg and salt. When sauce is smooth and boiling, add slowly the strained stock and lobster meat. Simmer for 10 min. Garnish with parsley and paprika. Serves 8 to 10. Ginny notes that she substitutes milk for calorie-laden cream

A real drawback to catalogue browsing is the temptation to order one of everything just for me, but I'll never regret ordering my Kitchen Aid mixer with attachments which includes a food chopper, so handy for recipes like this

CRANBERRY FROSTY PIE

1 8" baked pie shell, cooled
1½ c. cranberry orange relish
1 pint softened vanilla ice cream

Fold relish into softened ice cream. Pour into shell and freeze. Decorate with whipped cream and fresh cranberries.

RELISH: Put through coarse blade of food chopper 4 c. uncooked cranberries and 2 oranges (seeds removed) including rind. Stir in 2 c. sugar and chill. Makes about 2 pints. Serve remaining relish with meat or poultry for a salad.

1 bayleaf
2 whole cloves
8 whole peppercorns
4 T butter
4 T flour
3 c. milk
1 c. heavy cream

Historical Society exhibit

An exhibit of Chinese objects of art and other items brought back by 19th century traders and now part of the China Trade Museum in Milton, will be on display as a feature of the annual dinner meeting of the Cohasset Historical Society to be held in Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House, Thursday evening, Nov. 19.

A catered baked ham dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m. The public is invited and reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Carroll Pratt, 383-1672, or Mrs. E. Lawrence Parker, 383-0773.

The exhibit will be brought to the meeting by Mrs. Ellen Woolf of Cohasset, who will present an illustrated lecture on "The Old China Trade" following the dinner. Mrs. Woolf is a lecturer, guide and curatorial assistant at the Museum, with which she has been associated for the past five years, and has spoken to many groups throughout eastern Massachusetts.

experiments on animals without anesthesia.

Murray would like to have the waiting day period of seven to ten days extended. "A lot of people, throughout the Commonwealth do not know where to turn when they lose an animal. The animal is sitting in a pound and people don't realize that they should be calling every pound on the South Shore. Seven days doesn't give you much time to find your animal," said Murray.

Pound owners and those who run municipal pounds should be required to advertise before resorting to the sale of an animal to a laboratory said Murray.

Murray, who serves on the Committee on Counties, hopes that the committee will be able to get out at least part of the bill by December. The bill was introduced last February.

Schwartz said that pets do not make good laboratory experimental animals because their background is unknown and stress would substantially alter their body chemistry.

Many say that the medical community wants pound seizure. "We know that this isn't true," said Schwartz a nurse in the emergency ward at South Shore Hospital.

"We have so many friends who have animals and love animals. So many doctors do care. They don't want to see unnecessary waste and unnecessary suffering," said Schwartz.

Once the public is educated about what goes on, they won't believe it happens said Schwartz. Massachusetts is one of six states left still operating under the pound seizure law she said.

In 1980, about 30 eastern Massachusetts cities and towns sold pets to research facilities. Among them were Canton, Quincy, Randolph, Stoughton, Sharon, Hanover, Foxboro, Norwood and Woburn.

Schwartz said that medical research would not be wiped out with the new bill. "But, enough is enough...it's out of control. They have got too many animals and pets are not good under stress. They die quickly and the tests are useless."

"Scientists from England and Germany have respect for their animals," said Schwartz. Under their government ruling they have to go through a lot of red tape to experiment, she said.

Recently, at a special town meeting in Marshfield, townspeople voted unanimously to repeal the pound seizure law. Animal Control Officer Norma Haskins of Marshfield has submitted a separate piece of legislation which might get approval for their town before the state law is changed.

Haskins said that Marshfield has not sold an animal to a laboratory for the past eight years, although she has received several written requests from possible buyers.

"Life is too precious to be mistreated or wasted...cruelty at any level is wrong," said Schwartz. She hopes that the bill won't get lost in the shuffle.

Johnny Appleseed's, Inc. coming to plaza

Johnny Appleseed's, Inc., has signed a lease for a new store on Beechwood Street, at Cohasset's Cushing Plaza, according to Hollis French, president of the Beverly-based retail clothing company and Zaven A. Dadekian, Cushing Plaza's owner.

The 3,000-square-foot Cohasset store is Appleseed's first to open on the South Shore of Boston. The store will be opening in November.

Like its other four stores, Appleseed's Cohasset store will carry many well-established lines of women's clothing, including David Brooks, Robert Scott and Gordon of Philadelphia. A complete selection of men's clothing will also be available. In addition to apparel, the store will offer a variety of giftware appropriate for all types of occasions.

Appleseed's started out in the clothing business 35 years ago as a mail-order company.

Its growing retail business already includes stores in Beverly, Concord, Marblehead and Westwood, and will continue to expand to other locations around the Boston area.

Oates is a state rep. candidate

Joan Oates is running for state representative with the backing of a caucus of local Democrats.

She will face opposition from a candidate from Hull in the primary, according to Bob Burns, Hull planning board member and husband of one of the people rumored to be thinking about the race.

Bob would not say whether his wife, Hull selectman Nancy Burns, would be running.

"There will be a strong candidate out of Hull," he said. For him that will be a one-issue race. He believes Hull needs a representative who will be pro-casino.

Oates, Hingham planning board member, was selected overwhelmingly by the caucus of registered Democrats from Hingham, Hull and Cohasset at a meeting attended by 47 eligible voters. Independents were not allowed to vote — a place was set aside for them to watch the process.

Oates received 80 percent of the votes.

After the caucus, Donna McGee of Cohasset said that other candidates interviewed in the screening process set up by the people who put the caucus together had indicated they would support Oates.

"Do unto others as ye would have them do unto you" is what she strives to accomplish in servicing customers. She thinks her success proves the value of this philosophy.

Then, too, she feels she has been very positively influenced by her office manager, Muriel Desmond, during her three years with the Cohasset office of Jack Conway, Realtor. "She has really helped me a lot," Jordan said.

Jordan recently joined forces with the nationally acclaimed Cohasset sculptor, Dennis Kowal, to run a sculpture exhibit and open house at 505 Jerusalem Road which attracted several hundred people.

The boats are 36 foot long racing machines. Called a "round Robin," the crews raced in a different boat for each race.

☐"There was something to do all the time," says Sixty Plus Club president Mary Donovan of a recent trip to The Concord in New York state.

What seemed to impress Mary most of all was the efficient way the hotel staff served the 3,000 guests. There was always plenty of food and a wide choice at mealtimes which took place in a dining area as big as the Stop & Shop, she continues. There were also a variety of mini courses available on subjects ranging from line dancing to flower arranging. One room which Mary found especially intriguing provided a ticker tape report on the stock market. "I suppose that made it possible for some of the guests to find out whether they could stay another night," she laughed.

☐Congratulations to Rita Strong on her recent appointment to the Personnel Committee — Rita is the first woman to be appointed to this position. She notes that she is looking forward to her work which she anticipates will be very interesting in view of Proposition 2½. With a degree in marketing from the University of Toledo, Rita describes the most important part of her past work experience as "dealing with people."

☐Last week's whale watch turned out to be pretty expensive for some residents. In their excitement, they left their cars in a restricted area along Jerusalem Road and so received the inevitable parking ticket. In addition to his ticket, at least one resident also had a doctor's bill and a prescription to pay for as a result of a cold he caught that day. "All in all, that was one expensive whale," he muttered.

The pound bill

The selectmen in their wisdom last week endorsed a bill before the legislature outlawing the sale of pound animals to research labs.

Now is the time to be heard, if this bill is to get through the legislature this year. According to one legislator the bill is destined to die a quick death in the House Committee on Counties.

A lingering and painful death is what the bill is designed to avoid for our four-footed friends who have been lost or abandoned.

It seems extraordinarily unjust that a dog should be sold off to some purveyor of torture when his (or her) only crime is that his (or her) owner failed to keep him (or her) properly tied up.

Now this does not mean we favor unleashed havoc on the byways of town.

What it does mean is that we believe in kindness and justice. The bill to prevent pound dogs from being sold for animal research is one based in kindness and justice.

It's the animal owner, not the stray pet, that deserves to be punished for the transgression.

The selectmen in agreeing to a resolution favoring in the bill showed a spirit of humanitarianism.

By the way, dogs found wandering lose in Cohasset are not sold for research at this time. The dogs are taken to the Shishone Kennel in Marshfield, where they may be claimed upon payment of fees.

Marshfield hasn't allowed a dog to be sold for research in eight years. In fact town meeting there just voted to repeal the state's pound seizure law.

Rattenbury article

Tanna Kasperowicz, former editor of the Cohasset Mariner, called the office this week with news that she is pushing for a petition article in the warrant of the Dec. 14 special town meeting.

The article would insist that Yvette Rattenbury be rehired by the police department and given her back pay.

We back Tanna's effort. As we have pointed out in the past, Mrs. Rattenbury was hired by the town after officials were told the police union would grieve the institution of a civilian dispatcher. She was hired as a clerk/dispatcher.

The police union won before the state Labor Relations Board, gaining the right to bargain for the position. We wonder why the town wasn't better informed on collective bargaining laws.

(We also wonder why officials seem to forget to post meetings these days. The meeting with Mrs. Rattenbury when she was told of the decision to terminate her position was unposted. So was a recent meeting of the Troika unposted.)

Anyway the point is the police union was willing to go along with Mrs. Rattenbury's position in so far as her clerical duties were concerned. The police chief seemed to need a clerical position with the department.

CHS girls' soccer succeeds

Letters

To the Editor:

The girls' varsity soccer team had a great season. Though many various injuries have occurred, we seemed to have been able to pull through.

Most of the credit goes to the girls, who worked intensely and aggressively in pulling out a 4-8-4 record (which was quite an improvement over last year's 1-13-2). We'd like to thank the many faithful parents who came to cheer us on, but in the future we'd like to see a lot more parents get involved, to make us more of a whole. A team with values and goals but who want to have fun through all the hard work, so maybe we can accomplish something. That something being a will, tolerance, and a team that works together, which makes us better people and prepares us for a more important game ... the game of life.

All in all it has been tremendous and I'd like to especially thank our coach, Bill Fallon. He's been with us for two years and we've had a lot of fun. (We would like to see him out there next year if possible.) He's not a person to dislike, or be rude or obnoxious towards because of the work and pain he puts us through, but we should help and respect him and even thank him because he is the cause of what we are today — people of character — through a lot of hard work and discipline. He has created a spirit and will and determination which has begun to thrive in us. He has taught us the hardship of losing and the benefit of winning. He is with us all the way and sometimes I feel sorry for him. He has to put up with us and that takes guts.

So thank you, fellow players, faithful parents, ball boys, managers, and last, but not least, of all Bill Fallon, our coach for making our season a season!

Thank you,
Carla Lucas

Shuttle bus needs more drivers

To the Editor:

The Town of Cohasset is fortunate indeed to have a bus to drive our Senior Citizens to Doctors' appointments, shopping and other errands, and in addition, three trips to shopping plazas, two to the Braintree Mall and one to Hanover Mall each month. Also the Shuttle Bus is available to drive older people to church each Sunday of the year. We would hate to lose this service for lack of drivers. There is always a need for new drivers, especially during the Holiday Season. We ask that a driver give one day a month, either 8 a.m to noon or 1 to 3 p.m. If anyone is interested in volunteering, please call Ray Remick, 383-1035, or the Social Service League office, 383-0771.

Please help us keep this unique service flourishing in Cohasset.

The Social Service League

Candidate Oates expresses her views

Joan Oates, candidate for state representative, won support of a caucus of Democrats after distributing her views on local issues.

1. What do you consider your most significant contribution to the Community?

My most significant contribution to the community has been my role in the change of operation of the Planning Board. We adopted a policy of a rotating chairmanship and have divided the members into subcommittees responsible for the various functions of the Board. With the hiring of a full time planning aide we have been able to cope with an increase in subdivisions, recommendations for zoning changes and have been studying long range plans for the benefit of the community, such as the revitalization of the shipyard.

2. In your opinion what are the five most important issues facing this legislative district? Please list these issues in order of priority. Describe how you would address each issue if you were the district's representative.

1. Proposition 2½ — greater effect in coming years as the towns are unable to raise their budgets o to compensate for inflation and growth. I would work for a state budget that gave increased local aid.

2. The state budget — we are all affected by it, particularly Hull. Obviously needs much greater attention by the Legislature.

3. Hull's problems. There is a division between the three communities as evidenced by the casino gambling issue. I would seek sources of help for them and attempt cooperation on an area basis with the other two towns, possibly through an issue such as solid waste.

4. Transportation. The commuter boat, bus service, the MBTA. I would have to find out what can be done to improve service and work to do it.

5. Solid waste. Problems coming for all three towns. Again, this would take investigation, deciding what good solutions are, and how one could be implemented.

3. The Democratic State Committee is considering a requirement that all candidates for state office endorsed by Massachusetts Democrats adhere to the platform adopted by the issues convention in Springfield last spring. How do you feel about this?

I have not seen a copy of it.

Do you feel that you could give a statement of general support to the platform adopted by the Democrats on April 11, 1981?

4. How do you think a group such as ours can help you in your candidacy for state representative?

By providing contracts, expertise and people to work on a campaign.

If you were the nominee selected by this group,

300 honor Rep. Murray ...

Charles Langenhagen of Hingham, district advancement chairman for the Old Colony Boy Scouts, pointed out that scouting teaches the love of parents, respect for religion, values that schools and our society has drifted away from.

He talked about what scouting today means in terms of physical challenge to older boys who do white water in the Penobscot, or canoe along the Wompanoag Trail or backpack through a New Mexican desert.

"The boys are taught leadership," Langenhagen said. "They are taught how to behave in competition. They are taught community service."

He pointed out that many trees and utility poles in Hingham have been equipped with light reflectors thanks to one scout project.

Then there were the commendations from the House and Senate.

Lillian Murray took the podium and smiled over at her mother.

"Well, Mom, it's our turn to get you back," she began with humor and she told about time after time when her mother volunteered to take her camping, when other parents wouldn't volunteer.

"And do you remember Camping at Four Winds. We went for the weekend and we knew it was a little windy. But it wasn't until Sunday morning when one of the mothers came to pick up one of the girls that we knew we had had a hurricane."

She had more than one joke about her mother who stood by her through five horses, guinea pigs, turtles and other animals.

One joke is that Rep. Murray is working on a book, "The State Rep.'s Guide to Cooking and You Don't Need an Oven."

It was unclear whether the crack about the Murray family not having an oven for three years was true, or just one of those jabs usually taken at the honored guest at a testimonial.

It seemed her attack on her mother's sense of direction had some basis in reality.

When it was Rep. Murray's turn to speak, she laughed and said something about all the parents whose children she took camping finding out now that she can't read a compass.

She described her own politics as "middle of the road, if anything a little conservative."

In the audience, Dr. Mildred Jefferson, who will run as a Republican candidate for U.S. Senate against Ted Kennedy, applauded the representative loudly.

Dr. Jefferson, a prominent name in the Pro Life movement, said she has known Rep. Murray for six years and respected her work.

The representative made a point during her brief talk to thank her husband, Phil, "for being here."

She leaned toward him at the head table and added, "He just told me, somebody had to drive me. I have to admit I need a map once I leave Quincy."

Rep. Murray was given gifts of various sorts during the evening. Warren Noble presented her with a charcoal portrait of herself.

John Yunits, president of the Old Colony Council, gave the main award, the placque for "Distinguished Citizen."

Rep. Murray

The audience was filled with faces known in the area. Polly Logan, Ralph Tedeschi, Rep. Elizabeth Metayer, D-Braintree, Sheriff Clifford Marshall, Arthur Clark and other Cohasset politicians, Nancy O'Toole were just a few of the hundreds at the dinner.

A brief look at Rep. Murray

Presently, she is serving her third term in the House of Representatives.

Mary Jeanette has served in many special commissions and study groups which included the Commission to study Reorganization of Higher Education in Massachusetts, the committee to study Gerontology, Children in Need of Services (Child Abuse), and Transportation of Liquified Natural Gas, etc.

The kids had it their way

By Suzanne Diaz

Desperation leads one to do strange things. The thought of being absent from my kitchen for one whole meal sends me into a dreamy, submissive state, in which I will agree to anything. So when he and they said let's go to Burger King, my head sort of nodded itself. All I had to do was collect the baby's bib and bottle, and we were off.

Filing in and finding an empty booth and rolling a high chair into position was fine. So was taking the cling-wrap off the high chair tray and extracting the useless (but well-meant) paper bib, the towelettes in foil and the paper glove hand puppet therefrom. My husband is an experienced parent. He no longer asks anyone under 30 what they want. He merely brings it all over on two trays in the good old "like it or lump it" approach. This works well. However, we still are not quite experienced enough not to buy hamburgers for the younger children. (Somebody always winds up eating them anyway.)

Once everyone gets to work on his or her meal, I start wondering if I really belong there (or anywhere). The baby takes the top bun off her hamburger, eyes it with disdain, and pitches it onto the floor. From there it is retrieved, now inedible, and placed in the middle of the table. Baby now takes a few dutiful bites out of her naked hamburger, then lays it aside and settles down to her real loves, French fries and coke.

The three-year-old doesn't even pretend to notice his hamburger. He unwraps it, lays it neatly on its bed of paper, and leaves it there, while making sure there is a straw in his coke. He then requests the first in a long line of paper napkins. This is spread out and used as a receptacle for the catsup, which he squeezes out in a little puddle on the napkin and uses it to dip his French fries in. Since napkins, like good relationships, are fragile, the catsup soon soaks through to the table and necessitates a cleanup and a whole new cycle with more napkins and tearing open the catsup containers with my teeth.

Meanwhile the older kids are managing quite well, except one must remove all the tomatoes and pickles from her Whopper, and for the other, there is never quite enough to eat.

Halfway through the meal, I foolhardily glance around the table, taking in the dirty faces, the endless bags of French fries, the paper, the pickles, the catsup, the straws, and I come to a realization. I know that years of dining in elegant rooms with white tablecloths and flowers and muted music in the background, could not make me forget about this.

Then there are the cards. Burger King, for its own mysterious reasons, has been handing out fistfuls of prize cards, some worth a free coke, others a hamburger or a bag of French fries. The aim of all collectors is to get a combination of two cards, usually including an ace and a jack or ten, which yields a prize of $250,000. Having a sizeable collection from previous visits, my family got down to business. My husband had received only four cards with an order of over $11. So my daughter went back and asked for more cards. She produced several aces and a card worth a small bag of French fries.

My son then sought a different waitress and requested more cards. However, he too could only come up with a free coke and more aces, plus a couple of sixes. Now all eyes turned to (or on) me. "It's your turn Mom, go ask for more cards."

Even my husband was grinning evilly at me (from the exit door). Since we now had an endless assortment of aces, French fries, cokes, sixes and two's, I thought it highly unlikely that I would get a jack, a ten, or even a Whopper, but I got myself over to the service counter and requested "my cards." Perhaps out of pity for the look on my face, the waitress handed me eight cards. Scratching furiously, we unearthed six more aces, a two, a free coke, and dirty thumbnails.

As usual, I made a point of sidling out with the baby held high so my face wouldn't be seen. Then they might not notice who it was whose table looked as though Attila the Hun with a hoard of barbarians had eaten there, and walked off with all their prize cards.

All in all, it still beats staying home and cooking yourself.

Oates candidacy ...

what support would you expect?

People to help organize a campaign. This group would be particularly helpful in providing contacts in the three towns, arranging coffees and other functions, helping with publicity and funding.

How would you expand your support?

By going door to door in all three communities, attending all functions possible to meet people and talk about issues, good publicity for whatever I was doing, and through campaign workers.

5. Would you file a bill on behalf of a constituent even if you were personally opposed to the intent of the legislation?

Yes, I have signed many plans as Chairman or Clerk of the Planning Board that I did not like, but it was my responsibility to do so.

'Thank you for getting Mr. Hyde'

By Karin Bartow

The four week poet-in-residence program at the Deer Hill School was concluded last Saturday morning with a writing workshop led by poet Lewis Hyde. Thirty students from all three grades attended the three hour session at the school.

During the fourth week of the program, Hyde took each of the three core groups (12 students from each grade level) to the Osgood School to meet the younger students. Hyde told each Osgood group a fairy tale and introduced the core group students and described the lessons that produced the poems that each student read.

Hyde told one group of second graders, "When it gets cold and snowy, you're going to have a poet named Kathi Aguero visit your school." Aguero will begin her four week residency on Jan. 11 and will join Hyde at the completion of her residency for a community poetry reading.

The residency programs were initiated by the two schools' Communications Councils last year. Administered and funded by the Artists Foundation of Boston, the program's goal is to place an artist in a school setting where students learn respect for, and take seriously, the arts and the professional artist. Children, or students through their teachers, are taught to write poetry, to think creatively, and express their imaginations.

Lewis Hyde

During the four weeks that Hyde worked at the Deer Hill School, he visited every class twice for a class period of poetry instruction in addition to his work with the three core groups that met three times a week each; he also visited the first, second, and third grades at the Osgood School, conducted the Saturday morning workshop, and consulted throughout the month with teachers about teaching techniques and lesson ideas for writing poetry.' On Poet Hyde's last day in school, he was deluged with poems of thanks and farewell. Messages of good-bye filled the chalk boards in his room.

Thank you letters to the Communications Council from a fifth grade class sum up the feelings of students about this program. They wrote, "Thank you for arranging for Mr. Hyde to come to Deer Hill School. I think he is a very good poet. I think it was worthwhile for him to come here....I really enjoyed Mr. Hyde. He taught us to write our dreams down. Even though I didn't get to work in his poetry group, I'm still glad he came....Thank you very much for getting us Mr. Hyde. He is a good storyteller and what he teaches us now might help when we get older....He changed the way I look at poetry. I would have signed up for the poetry club, but I was busy. I would have enjoyed it....Thanks a lot, parents of the Communications Council, for bringing Lewis Hyde the poet to Deer Hill School. I think he was nice and I wish I were in his poetry group....I hope we have another person like him soon....Everyone at the Deer Hill is happy with him here....I enjoyed him very much. He was nice, kind, and friendly....Thank you for letting Mr. Hyde come to the Deer Hill. Two of our people are in the group....Thank you for the poet at our school and all the other nice things you do for us. For all the time you spend on making us smarter and happier."

The Deer Hill Communications Council and its Artist-in-Residence Committee wishes to extend their sincere thanks to ALL the parents who helped inaugurate this program; to parents and students who successfully ran the car wash and helped with Osgood visits and the workshop; to the American Legion and Cohasset Rotary for their financial support; to Barbara Conte whose special artistic talent gave such a warm welcome to Lewis Hyde, and all the other helpful assistance she gave the program; to Joann Magoun for all her planning, coordination, and support; to Joanne Mitchell of the Paul Pratt Library for her interest and the compilation of poetry materials list; to Principal Kenneth Ekberg and Superintendent Eugene Crowell for their belief in the value of the arts and commitment to this program; to the Deer Hill teachers and staff for their enthusiasm and involvement in the poetry residency; and most special thanks to Lewis Hyde for this dedicated professionalism, warmth, humor, and enormous talent.

A book of poems representing all students will be organized and printed in the near future.

Things To Do Around Cohasset

See the four-foot high dollhouse at Mr. Conte's museum,
Eat Susie-Q's from the Curtis Compact,
Ride bike to the stone spring house in Wompatuck,
See ice age rock on its point in Wheelwright Park,
Pick blueberries and apples and pears,
Stay home and read Judy Blume book about Blubber and Laurie,
Playing four-hand touch in Gallagher's back yard,
Go to the paper store and buy whoppers,
Go splash in rain puddles with sneakers on,
Watch "Happy Days" at 6:00 o'clock,
Catch snakes and build forts by the tracks,
Go to Paul Pratt Library and get a book for a report,
Stay in bed until 11:30 thinking about things,
Ask Mother if we can have a puppy when the bird goes upstairs,
Go to Strawberry Parfait and get a $2.50 Hot Fudge Sundae,
Deliver the Patriot Ledger, get up early on Saturday,
Go to Children's Museum and buy a bag of potato chips.

Fire Facts

Americans facing an energy shortage are turning to alternate sources to heat their homes. One of the alternate heating sources is the fireplace. Either wood or man-made logs are being used as a heat source. This supplementary heat measure can be good, but introduces the danger of fire into our homes. To use fireplaces safely, consider these precautions:

• Do not use flammable liquids to start the fire.

• Keep a metal screen in front of your fireplace. Flying embers can start fires.

• Don't use excessive amounts of paper to build roaring fires in fireplaces. It is possible to ignite soot in the chimney by overbuilding the fire.

• Never burn charcoal in your fireplace, or in a charcoal broiler or hibachi unit inside. Burning charcoal gives off deadly amounts of carbon monoxide.

• Be sure no flammable materials hang down from or decorate your mantel. A spark hitting them from your fireplace fire could ignite these materials and cause a fire.

• When you go to bed, be sure your fireplace fire is out. Never close your damper with hot ashes in the fireplace. A closed damper can help hot ashes build up heat to a point where a fire could flare up and ignite the room while you are asleep.

• Follow the directions on the package if you use man-made logs. Never break apart a man-made log to quicken the fire.

• If your fireplace hasn't been used for some time, have it and the chimney checked. Chimneys should be checked for cleanliness before the heating season starts.

When temperatures inside are kept down, a crackling fire in the fireplace is a cozy and cheery way to keep warm. But these fires, if not carefully tended, could cause tragedy.

Mental health services to receive funding

"Community mental health services will receive a specific proportion of the Alcohol, Drug and Mental Health Block Grant funding from the federal government," said Dr. Sheila Baler, Executive Director of Coastal Community Counseling Center at a recent breakfast sponsored by the Center's Board of Directors.

"There is an uncertainty as to the disbursement of these funds, however, due to the fact that the community mental health allotment will be at most 75 percent of all the federal community health funds which had been awarded to Massachusetts prior to the budget cuts by President Reagan," she said.

"We have embarked on an active public information program to inform not only the public but our legislators of the importance of community mental health services and of the need for adequate funding."

Reminding the legislators present at the breakfast of their increasing importance as the distributors of federal funds under the block grant process, Dr. Baler and Board President, Dan MacIntyre, described the Center's programs and services offered to the legislators' home communities of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth.

The Center operates six service sites within these towns. Services include a 24 hour Emergency Service for those in a crisis situation; treatment and preventive services to children, families, and the community at large; a Day Treatment Center, Social Club, and After-care programs for the chronically mentally ill.

Describing the growth of the Center's programs as "dramatic," Dr. Baler emphasized that the increase in percentage of services has exceeded the increase in budget.

CONTEST WINNER

The most recent winner in the library Braintwister contest is junior, Paul Dormitzer. Paul answered the question of when women were first allowed to vote in Massachusetts.

Most people are unaware that women property owners were allowed to vote in colonial times. Paul uncovered this little known fact in "The Commonwealth History of Massachusetts." Students have really been stumped by six portraits of famous colonial Americans that now hang on the Braintwister board.

A clue was posted today so perhaps someone will soon identify these historic mystery men. The winner will receive a gift certificate to the Strawberry Parfait.

Kowal exhibits Bauhaus design contemporary home

By Bruce McLain

"High technology will open up New England to the future, and consequently, greater integration with the world at large," predicts Cohasset resident and nationally acclaimed sculptor Dennis Kowal.

Kowal recently held a one man exhibit of his work in acrylic and steel at an outstanding example of high technology, a Bauhaus design Contemporary home in concrete and glass, located at 505 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset. The exhibit, co-hosted by Shifi Jorden of the Cohasset office of Jack Conway Realtor, who has the property listed for sale, was such an overwhelming success that they decided to hold another on Nov. 15.

The oceanfront home created quite a stir when it was built three years ago, and Kowal, as an artist, attempted to explain why.

"Because of the environment, New England architecture was traditionally small and enclosed with small rooms, small windows and lots of doors to close off rooms. This was thrifty in its time, when homes were heated in frigid New England winters solely by inefficient fireplaces. However, because of today's technology, people are no longer tied to this lifestyle, but over the years, it has molded the thinking and the attitudes of the people in the area.

The house at Jerusalem Road is not a new 1980's concept in living, but is part of the Bauhaus tradition of high technology which began in the 1920s and is experiencing a rebirth because it is in perfect tune with today's lifestyles and needs.

Preconceived ideas about architecture and what fits where get in the way of today's lifestyle. Many individuals who would not give a second thought to using a Cuisinart or satellite communications, which are products of high technology, would never consider architecture in the same light, and should try to examine the reasons for this attitude. This type of home has been built all over the country, predominately in more progressive areas such as California, because the design makes excellent use of current technology; is highly energy efficient; open to the environment and consequently, more condusive to a healthier state of mind," according to the sculptor.

"The world is constantly changing and certain concepts have a place in time and history," Kowal continues. "New England living as it was has passed its zenith which is in no way threatening to the quaintness and charm of New England as we know it. It is exciting to me to know that we can have the best of both worlds here, where traditional homes, a constant reminder of our heritage, can stand side by side with the products of high technology, our key to the future."

The second sculpture exhibit and open house will take place at 505 Jerusalem Road, Sunday, Nov. 15, 1 to 5 p.m. Wine and cheese will be served.

News Item

(This poem was sent to the Mariner by a resident who requested anonymity.)

" 'It's a preppy little house...' for the kindergarten class at Joseph Osgood School."

Pink and green, green and pink
Cohasset has lost its marbles, me thinks!
Will affronts to my senses never end?
Why must kindergarteners be subjected to trends?

Heaven knows it's bad enough
That stores and ads push this stuff,
Encouraging our kids to be "TOO CUTE."
I'd hope the schools wouldn't give a hoot!

Why can't they concentrate instead
On urging little ones to keep their heads
And be themselves and toss right back
That "Preppy Ghost" of pink and black.

Green and pink, pink and green
Such utter nonsense I've seldom seen.
I'd like to jump the nearest freighter
Shouting "See you later, alligator!"

60 Plus to meet

The Cohasset 60 Plus Club will meet Thursday, Nov. 19 at the Unitarian Parish House.

The social hour is at 12 o'clock. At 1 p.m. Captain Tyrone Martin will give a talk; a title might be, "The Rest of the Story," discussing aspects of the U.S.S. Constitution's history, which have not been widely publicized.

Captain Martin's 26 years in the navy as a surface warfare or intelligence officer included a variety of commands.

The last four years as captain of the U.S.S. Constitution, he guided the old frigate through its latest restoration, and led the Tall Ships into Boston in 1976.

Since his retirement in 1978, Captain Martin has been writing a narrative history of Old Ironsides, entitled "Most Fortunate Ship." He was awarded a George Washington Honor Medal by the Freedom's Foundation at Valley Forge, for this narrative.

He lives in Cohasset with his wife and family.

Co-op 5 sponsors brunch

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will be the host town for a brunch sponsored by Co-op 5, an association of South Shore Democratic Town Committees consisting of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield and Scituate.

The brunch will be held on Sunday, Nov. 15 at 10:30 a.m. at Kimball's by the Sea.

Guest speaker will be John Kerry, candidate for Lieutenant Governor. Although he has never held elected office, John Kerry has become well known to Massachusetts citizens in the past seven years. A lawyer, Kerry was the First Assistant District Attorney of Middlesex County whose leadership was widely credited with developing the Middlesex DA's office into a modern, professional law enforcement outfit. One of the Navy's more decorated veterans of the Vietnam War, Kerry received national recognition as an eloquent advocate for veterans seeking to end that war. More recently, he has appeared often on Boston's Channel Five as a public affairs commentator.

Tickets for the event are $5 a person and may be obtained from local Town Committee Chairmen or call Donna McGee at 383-9114.

Christmas house tour

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset once again is presenting a Christmas House Tour Tuesday, Dec. 15, to meet an overwhelming public response in previous years.

The theme of the house tour "Cohasset Entertains" is the same as the club's cookbook which is in its fourth printing this year.

The house tour, "Cohasset Entertains," involves a number of homes in Cohasset decorated by members of the Garden Club reflecting the spirit of Christmas and the joy of entertaining and decorating the home for family and friends.

Bouillon and refreshments will be served from 10 a.m. to 12 noon. Tea from 2 to 4 p.m. Evening refreshments, wine and cheese, will be served from 7 to 9. All these plus our Boutique at the Congregational Church on the Common.

Please send your check and stamped return addressed envelope to: Community Garden Club of Cohasset, Box 502, Cohasset, MA 02025. Tickets are to be sold in advance only, and are $8 each.

Please call requesting tickets: 383-1981, 749-4720, 383-1467 or 383-9811.

Senior shuttle bus

The Senior Shuttle Bus is scheduled for Braintree Mall Wednesday, Nov. 18. Reservations may be made by calling the office one week prior (Nov. 12) at 383-0771 or 383-0821.

The first Wednesday of the month there is a trip to the Hanover Mall, at 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. There is no shuttle bus in the afternoon on the first Wednesday locally.

December Mall trips are Dec. 7 to Braintree Mall, Dec. 2 to Hanover Mall, and Dec. 16 to Braintree Mall.

Talent search

The Cohasset Community Center is in the process of arranging its next program schedule. In their efforts to offer a varied program, members of the program committee are always looking for new programs.

Proposals may also be submitted in writing to Program Coordinator, Laura Doherty, Cohasset Community Center, 3 North Main St. Information should include pertinent background information, equipment, materials or space needs and salary requirements.

Poster contest

The Cohasset Community Center, once again, will sponsor a special Thanksgiving Poster Contest for children in kindergarten through Grade 12.

The theme will be "What Thanksgiving Means to Me." All entries must be submitted between 3 p.m. and 5 p.m. Friday, Nov. 20 at the center. They will be on display throughout the town during the following week. A prize will be awarded to the best entry from each grade level.

Diabetes screening clinics

The Social Service League will be sponsoring two Diabetes Screening Clinics Wednesday, Nov. 18 from 2 to 4 p.m., and Thursday, Nov. 19, from 9 to 11 a.m. at 16 Highland Avenue. The test for diabetes takes only a few minutes.

It is suggested that you eat a hearty meal two hours before taking the blood sugar test. Do not drink (other than water), eat, smoke, chew gum, candy, cough drops, etc...following the meal until the blood sample is taken.

Living in island solitude

By Kim Noyes

As I watch the sumac turn glorious shades of red and maroon, I cannot help but wonder what my island looks like. I lived this summer on a 50 acre sumac-covered island in the Boston Harbor. Grape Island is part of the Boston Harbor Island State Park, Massachusetts' first urban park. Grape is nestled in Hingham Bay, close enough to civilization to hear an occasional car horn and see the sunset behind the Boston skyline, yet far enough away from the hustle and bustle of modern life to forget that a world exists apart from the island.

I was employed by the Environmental Intern Program, a Boston-based environmental network. EIP helps to place people in an environmental field of their interest. I was sponsored by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Management, who has hired resident island managers for the past seven summer seasons.

My duties as Island Manager were a combination of enforcing park rules and regulations, providing visitor information and interpretive services, and performing light maintenance. More accurately, I was a combination of Julie, the host on the T.V. serial Love Boat, a teacher, naturalist, policewoman, doctor, outhouse cleaner, trashperson, friend to many island regulars, and a host of other unexpected roles. Once I broke up a fight by tackling a 5'10" person. I am only 5'2".

Being an island manager meant that I lived on my island for 10 days at a time. Half of the time I was alone, the other half I shared the responsibility with my partner. "Beware of the unexpected" was the motto for I was on call 24 hours. The island and island visitors' well-being were my responsibility. I learned to sleep with my ear towards the dock. Many a Friday night I would hear the unwelcome sound of a motor at the dock. Donning my uniform and hat, which made my appearance look more foreboding, I'd stroll out to investigate. Generally, after explaining that "the island was closed after dark" a difficult task, my prospective visitors would leave. It is hard to be polite in a situation like that for leaving your sleeping bag and tent is not easy. Sometimes I solved the problem by sleeping on the dock. Unzipping my bag, a few steps down to the float along with some mumbled words and all was well. The next morning I hardly knew I'd gotten up. I don't mean to paint the wrong picture. I usually chose to sleep on the dock because it was a beautifully clear starlit night. Morning would break as I watched the sunrise over Slate Island. An early morning swim, a cup of coffee brewed over a campfire (or if I was feeling lazy brewed over the Coleman stove) and I was ready to start the day. If it was a sunny day I could while away the next few hours bird watching, writing, walking or a combination of the three. Soon enough visitors would arrive and the day would be filled with questions, conversations, and guided tours of the island. On the other hand if the morning spelled out fog or rain I knew I'd have the island to myself. The joy of being marooned on an island. The choices were infinite. My day would be filled with building a kitchen shelf, planning programs, discovering new wildflowers, doing the dishes in my handy Maytag — the harbor, and my favorite pasttime, beachcombing. What a treat to find a lobster buoy, mattress, or an old piece of cork. These prizes would inevitably find their way back to my campsite. So decorated was it with island treasures that Robinson Crusoe would have been impressed.

I feel lucky to have been able to make Grape Island my home for the summer. It's a beautiful place, covered with sumac (not the poisonous kind) and bayberry, dotted with trees and complete with a birch grove, marsh and rocky shore. A paradise which I hope you will take the pleasure to visit next summer. Ferry transportation is provided from Long Wharf in Boston and from Hewitt's Cove in Hingham. Three dollars will buy you a round-trip ticket and an island adventure. Camping is also available on Grape and some of the other islands in the Boston Harbor Island State Park. I won't be there to greet you, but I'm sure another smiling face will welcome you to their summer home.

Skippers excel in losing to Abington, 20-6

By Rob Tis

The Skipper football team lost to Abington on Saturday 20-6 but don't let the score mislead you. It was an extremely close game.

From the minute the Skippers took the field things looked bad. Each Abington player looked to be a few inches taller and thirty or forty pounds heavier than each Cohasset player. Aside from that the Skippers biggest man and the mainstay of the running game, Bob Donahue, was out with a shoulder separation suffered during last week's game.

The mere size did not seem to intimidate the Skippers. Throughout the first quarter the Skipper defense contained the Green Wave without any major problem. In its eight games, the Green Wave has allowed the league leading average of only six points scored against them per game. This defense held the Skippers scoreless in the first quarter but the second quarter was a different story. Cohasset took advantage of a 15 yard Abington punt and went to work on the Green Wave 38 yard line. Quarterback Kevin Dooley went to the air knowing the Abington defense was not conducive to first downs on the ground. Dooley hit Bob Meers for 19 yards to put the Skippers on the twenty yard line. On 3rd and 10 Dooley rolled to the right away from a strong rush and found a twenty yard TD play. The try for the extra point was wide to the left but the Skippers were up by six.

From here it was downhill for the Skippers. Abington followed the Skippers touchdown with an 83 yard drive for one of their own just before the half ended.

The Abington defense showed amazing stamina as they wouldn't let the Skippers do much at all. The Green Wave "D" only gave up 43 yards to the Skippers the whole day. Most of that fought for by Jack McNeil and Mark Gunville.

The Skipper defense didn't yield either keeping the score locked at six in the 3rd quarter. Abington did have some chances however including a 31 yard field goal that was only wide by inches.

Abington got possession on the Skipper 36 after a personal foul call and took it in to the end zone in four plays and scored the conversion to put them ahead 14-6.

After this Abington left the game up to their mighty defense. When they got possession they stalled as much as possible, then gave the ball up. This strategy as wimpy and overconfident as it seems worked because the Skippers could not penetrate the defense. The Skippers never gave up, though.

They kept on fighting until the very end of the fourth quarter when Kevin Dooley threw a desperation pass with six seconds left. It was intercepted and run in for the Abington TD as time expired.

The final score was Abington 20, Cohasset 6, but a game that the Skippers showed that they had an awful lot of guts.

Taking the dread out of 51——By Lois Martin

Word has reached me that a large group of people paid to see four male strippers in a restaurant outside Ellsworth, Maine recently.

Talk of the event preceded its arrival and there was a good deal said, but not a good word, about it amongst the area residents.

One older woman was so shocked by it that she had to sit down to catch her breath before telling her neighbors.

To my knowledge I don't know anyone who attended the strip show, though I have talked with people from Ellsworth...and one never knows. But I hear the stripping was well-attended and the topic of converstion more than made up for too short a summer.

PATCHES

Now never mind heading up to Maine. The Information Booth's closed down for the year and it'll take some doing to get the name of the restaurant out of me, though everyone in Hancock County would be able to tell you.

My reason for mentioning it here is that I use this permissive progress into Maine as the justification for something of the same nature here in this area.

Low as our supply is of restaurants that feature men in the nude, there's a high quantity of magazines, they say, which portray unclothed women. (Ahem, carefully I tiptoe into this revelation).

Well, several weeks ago there was this hue and cry (gossip), about this 51 year old woman who was featured, if you will, in a monthy publication. This magzine is seldom with the Family Circle and Mechanics Illustrated on the coffee table.

We women wouldn't ordinarlily know or care from one month to the next who bared herself in the middle of a publication. But this one was different. They said she was really something. We who work here where news is gathered, heard mention of it and, after sniffing our disapproval, declared we didn't believe it, that we could find the stretch marks, the sagging chin, the weakening muscles where no one else could.

After much debate amidst the female employee division, someone was inveigled to sally forth for the magazine in the little brown covering. That person had never bought anything like that before. She wouldn't have, I swear to you, had she not felt a challenge. So she went to the little store and requested the book, explaining in detail how she'd never done it before, why she was now and so forth. The man selling the goods earnestly testified this Vikki Lamotta was more beautiful than someone half as old as 51. The customer snatched the magazine and fled back to the office to form her own opinion.

There is in this land no tougher scrutiny, no stricter judgment than that imposed by a group of women (younger) on another woman (older and barer) who believes herself lovely.

We of many shapes and sizes placed the book on the production table and I recorded some of the comments about Vikki LaMotta from her female fellow Americans.

Here are the keen observations:

—She lost her old bathrobe.

—She doesn't look comfortable in that position.

—She does it with mirrors.

—No, she does it with suspenders and if they unclasp, everything falls down.

—She must have had a million face lifts and stuff.

—Silicone does wonders.

—She has nice teeth.

—She's all tan but no wrinkles.

—Didn't she ever have her appendix out or a hysterectomy or something?

—I never looked like that at 20.

You get the message. Still most of the judges surrendered to some (critical) acclaim.

Personally, I didn't think her body looked familiar. Probably my mirror's warped or something. But I thought she was a beautiful woman.

And I'll tell you something. I'm encouraged. Probably it's my youthfulness that's prohibited my looking like Vikki. Look what happens to you when you grow up to be a mature woman. I can't wait to be 51.

I'm developing new aspirations having seen her. Do you know there are communities that would have given her a discount on drycleaning as a senior citizen before they saw that magazine? Forget it now. She'll never get elderly benefits.

I am back to my former magazine buying habits now. But she made an impression on all of us. I suspect some of these people have secretly asked for a body stocking like the one Vikki had on.

But you can only tolerate so much permissiveness. None of us here is lobbying to bring those Maine strippers to town.

Charlotte Parsons, a photographer who lives in Scituate, made these pictures last year. The scene, Hofstra Farm in Hingham, is now the site of construction of high-priced condominiums.

The Mariner's "Art Page" is meant to be a vehicle of communicating for local artists, a way of helping them reach their audience, as well as a source of pleasure for our readers.

To that end we welcome material from local artists.

Paintings can be reproduced adequately, though with limitations created by our printing press. For more information on submissions contact Patricia Desmond, editor, at 837-5625, 545-3950 or 383-6731, all of which ring in the same office.

Memories

The old scene with its koda-color memories isn't there.
Did you steal it away
when you left me?
Did you have to pack up
the smell of your perfume,
the dandelions from your hair?
I couldn't even find the right frozen pizza
by myself.

Jack Conway has come a long, long way

By Bruce McLain

Like a modern day explorer, Jack Conway set a course on Columbus Day in 1957 to found what is today known as 'Conway Country'; a thriving, $150 million a year, 27-office real estate firm with 350 sales associates.

Conway was to find, as did Columbus, that his "New World" was full of surprises, a far cry from the "Old World" he left behind as a sports writer for the old Boston Record-American Sunday Advertiser.

As the saying goes, "You've come a long way, baby," from the two-man real estate office Jack opened with his brother, Eddie, in Hingham 24 years ago.

Now the engaging entrepreneur is sought after for real estate and public relations advice from everybody from the local hockey team director to politicians who want to push him as a candidate for Congress.

The Hingham office acted as Conway's catapult that launched his next office in Cohasset, where he lives. Then he began to build a base of offices that now cover from Boston in the North, West to Needham and down through the South Shore and Brockton to the tip of Cape Cod.

While constantly expanding his offices, Conway reinforced the foundation with a number of subsidiary companies that have made the company the envy of the industry and provide one-stop services to its many customers.

These companies include:

—The Jack Conway Insurance Agency, Inc. The company has three locations, home base is Rte. 53 in Hanover; the Cape Cod office at 705 West Main St., Hyannis; and the William Wade Agency at 80 Front St., Scituate. The agency offers personal and business protection.

—The Northern Mortgage Company, based at the Conway Country headquarters in Hanover, does a big VA and FHA business and was recently cited for its quick processing.

—The Conway Appraisal Bureau today has five staff members. The bureau specializes in residential appraisals but will accept commercial appraisals, too.

—The 'Conway Country' School of Real Estate, Inc. offers the basic fundamentals of real estate salesmanship in a 25-hour pre-licensing sales course.

In addition, the company has its own executive RELOcation division which is number one in Massachusetts in relocating transferees into the state. Managed by Chris McPherson and assistant Michelle Kjer, the division recently won the top prize for the "most profitable idea" of the year award given by RELO-Inter City Relocation Service of Chicago. The winning idea was the company's Project HOW (Home Ownership for Women) Seminars.

Conway's partner in the business is John Reardon of Scituate. The pair spend some $500,000 yearly in advertising. The trio heads Conway's Clover Advertising Agency.

Budget crunch will test school spending

By Patricia Desmond

There's a crisis brewing in the school system. A question of dollars and education.

Eugene Crowell, school superintendent, is looking for ways to cut the budget by several hundred thousand dollars just to offer the same program next year.

Crowell brought his problem to the school committee Monday with a detailed presentation, accompanied by overhead projections and extensive mathematical detail.

The school system budget for this year is $3.6 million. Based on a two-and-a-half percent increase, the coming budget would be $3.7 million or $77,766 more than this year. Should the town's higher valuation figure be used in computing the budget, another $74,000 could be added to the total.

But the advisory board is warning town departments they should base their new budget on the same formula used last year, plus two-and-a-half percent. The higher valuation figure will not be official until sometime after the first of the year.

Even if the higher figure is used and the school budget is allowed to go up $150,000, Crowell and the school committee members will have to look for ways to cut school programs and staff.

"It will cost $230,000 more next year just to meet our obligations under the contracts," Crowell said.

Last year the school committee cut $180,000 from the budget.

Busing costs were cut, some teachers were let go, few materials were replaced.

"A lot of people, my staff included feel 2½ is over," Crowell said. "A lot feel we did rather well last year. We lost $180,000 and 31 staff positions are now out of the schools."

He said he has put together an impact study showing what the school system gave up. He could not be reached Tuesday for questions on the charts. His secretary said he would not be available to answer questions until Friday, so the chart is printed as is.

Crowell plans to put together a draft of the coming year's budget by Dec. 14.

He sees a possibility of cutting two elementary school teachers without having great impact on the system. One would go from Deer Hill and one from Osgood schools.

"I will fight to keep the staff and programs at the high school as they are," Crowell said. He feels the high school level suffered more under the reductions last year.

Next year's projected enrollment is 1401, or 68 less than the current figure. The projections have been accurate to date. He said the projection was about four off for this year's enrollment figure.

Library cuts may prompt changes

Losing your library card will cost you 25 cents in the future. Renewing materials may be a little more difficult.

Overdue fines are up from two to five cents a day. The maximum overdue fine per book is up to $5 from $1.

Some materials will be loaned out for one week only (magazines, primarily) and there will be longer waiting lists for the more popular books.

These are the changes the Paul Pratt Memorial Library trustees approved last week.

Richard Hayes, chief librarian, says there will be more changes to come unless the town does more than provide a budget at this year's level.

Inflation is eating big chunks of the library's ability to pay for rising book and periodical prices. Inflation in the book and magazine market is above 18 percent.

Last year the library coped with the reduction in funds mandated by Proposition 2½ by closing down on Wednesdays.

Hayes doesn't know what will happen next year if the budget allows nothing for inflation.

He said he doubts volunteers can do any more for the library than they are already doing.

In October the number of volunteer hours came to 261. That is equal to one-third of the paid staff. Hayes said volunteers provide full coverage of the circulation desk and handle most of the office work. There are eight people who work regular volunteer hours in the library office.

"I'm getting a little discouraged being told to cope with cuts by recommending more volunteers. We're using just about the maximum possible," Hayes said.

He pointed out that the library trustees are thinking about dropping the museum pass program. The Friends of the Library pay $1,200 a year for passes to the Science, Fine Arts and Children's museums as well as for passes to New England Aquarium.

To spend or not to spend at T.M.

It looks like the Monday, Dec. 14 town meeting will make decisions on 13 articles. The warrant closed last week. The status of one requested article has been questioned by selectmen — they aren't sure it can be processed in time.

The petitioners for another article are now worried about the wording.

Meanwhile town officials say the tenor of this town meeting will give a large clue to the way next year's budget will go.

"We'll see whether the town will favor big money articles," said Eugene Crowell, school superintendent, earlier this week.

The town will be asked to spend money for services deemed worthwhile but not absolutely essential like the purchase of the Penn Central right of way and aerial spraying for elimination of the gypsy moths.

The decisions on the articles will give direction to the town officials who are now working on the budget for the coming year.

The articles include:

— Money to pay a variety of unpaid bills, including mounting legal fees in the town's fight to keep the Lowry Bells from having a tennis court.

— Higher fees for the town clerk.

— More money for employes at the dump. In the change a part-time position would be made full-time.

— Printing costs for the town bylaws and regulations, estimated at $6,500.

— Authorization to join the Plymouth County Mosquito Control project.

Fire Chief Piepenbrink to retire

By Donna Cogliano

Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink is planning to retire on March 31. He made public his intention last week in a letter to selectmen. He said his decision was made "after several months of consideration."

"Everybody's time comes," said Piepenbrink, "It's something I've been contemplating for a year now...since I was sick."

Piepenbrink, 56, became chief at age 29 which probably makes him the youngest-ever chief in the state. He joined the force at age 23 in 1948.

The biggest change Piepenbrink has witnessed in his 33 years of service to the town is the reduction in work hours of the firefighters. When he started with the department, he worked 84 hours per week (not a misprint).

"We didn't even know what time and a half was then...we never heard of it," he said. There was not overtime budget.

Over the years Piepenbrink said that the hours clocked per week were reduced from 84 to 70 to 56 to 48 to 42 to the current 40 hours per week.

Fewer pieces of fire equipment are in use today. Though we answer four times as many calls now, the chief said, the department runs two engines, a ladder truck, and an ambulance. In the past the department operated three engines, a ladder, plus a squad truck.

The town-wide budget cuts from Proposition 2½ have left Piepenbrink with fewer men and equipment. The Beechwood and North Cohasset stations have been closed. The staff of 28 men has dwindled to 24.

Through all the frustrations of budgeting along side of Prop. 2½, Piepenbrink contends that he will miss his work and association with the department and townspeople.

Piepenbrink is a 1943 graduate of Cohasset High School. He married Harriet (Hurd) of Maine in 1956 and they have a son, James C. 23 living with his wife in South Weymouth.

Selectmen accepted Piepenbrink's intentions to retire in a unanimous vote to "wish him well."

"We accept his intentions and wish him the very best for the future," said Chairman Henry Ainslie.

The next chief will be in a different position.

Town meeting voted last spring to eliminate the absolute authority of the chief over his department by rescinding its acceptance of that section of state law.

Cohasset's week

Fairman case to court

Selectmen voted unanimously last Wednesday night to take Mary Fairman to District Court, charging her with renting out the three bedroom apartment in her 714 Jerusalem Road home without the necessary occupancy permit.

"This is the only way we can resolve this issue and find out whether there are tenants or not, we have decided to take court action," said board Chairman Henry Ainslie.

Selectmen have chosen the court route on the advice of town counsel.

Present rental of the premises is in violation of a zoning by-law.

Building Inspector James Litchfield issued an occupancy permit to Fairman last June on the strength of verbal assurances from the town's health agent that a planned expansion of Fairman's cesspool would be approved by the Board of Health. Litchfield revoked the permit when such approval was not forthcoming.

Selectmen sent a letter to Fairman in the summer ordering her not to rent out the apartment without obtaining approval from the health board and occupancy permit from Litchfield.

Wompatuck complaints

Norwell selectmen sent a letter to the Cohasset board explaining their opposition to using Norwell's well fields as the site of an additional access road to Wompatuck State Park.

However, the Norwell board would support a study that would:

— Determine that there is a definite need for an additional access road to the Park, not merely a relieving of Hingham's traffic problems, which are caused by factors other than the Park.

— Fairly study all the towns involved for the best route with the least adverse effect on any of the four towns.

The letter also stated, "We join with you in seeking a fair and equitable solution to the problem, if a problem does indeed exist."

Another lean year

Town services face another lean year — despite the fact that projections would indicate the tax burden is well below the two-and-a-half percent mandate.

Arthur Clark, executive secretary to the selectman, said the town will have to put its next budget together using the same guess accepted last year as a base valuation.

That guess was $225 million. The assessors are nearing the end of a long revaluation process. Their figures show a valuation of $247 million — but the state has yet to certify the work and there is an appeal process available to those who feel they are valued improperly.

There could be some reductions due to abatements.

Later this week the town's top financial experts will talk with department heads about the coming budget.

Reports indicate that with the revaluation taxpayers with homes in the lower brackets will feel the change in the pocketbook. The problem is that the lower priced homes in town have appreciated more quickly than the most expensive homes.

Final figures aren't expected this year. The 1982 tax rate will probably be set in February.

Police overtime

Selectmen unanimously voted to pay three policemen for one overtime hour each for the night the clocks were set back to end daylight savings time. The police chief had denied the request and the matter came before the board last Wednesday night as a union grievance.

Selectmen discussed payment for police in the spring when the clocks will be set ahead one hour. They will further discuss the spring topic during negotiations.

Gasoline contract awarded

Selectmen awarded the gasoline delivery contract for the town to low bidder, Gulf Oil Co. of East Providence, R.I. With state tax included, unleaded gas will cost $1.224 per gallon while leaded gas will cost $1.184 per gallon.

Hugo's sale pending

Two brothers who own the Sheraton Commander in Cambridge want to buy Hugo's Lighthouse from the estate of John Carzis.

The sale is held up, pending a license transfer to Walter Guleserian of Belmont, president of Commander Properties, Inc.

Selectmen plan a hearing on the transfer Tuesday, Nov. 24, at 8:15 p.m.

Reportedly the sale price is in the $1.5 million range. Confirmation of the figure could not be obtained.

The restaurant would remain the same outside under the plans by the two brothers, Edward and Walter Guleserian.

Arthur Clark, selectmen's executive secretary, said the application for license transfer shows the two brothers as officers of the corporation. The other director listed is Charles Laverty, Clark said.

School committee policy

The school committee this week continued its ongoing policy of studying a few policies per meeting.

No real changes have yet been proposed or adopted.

The main thrust of the changes to date have been technical changes that make the underlying policies clear. For instance this week the school committee considered its policy on posting meetings and wrote into it the fact that the local newspapers would be sent notification. The three local papers are already sent notice of meetings. Actual adoption of that policy will be voted after the changes are posted for a month.

The committee also discussed its policy on tuition for students whose parents live outside the town.

The policy is that in the case of a pending sale of a home a student is allowed to attend Cohasset schools for 90 days, tuition free. If the sale does not go through, the parent is liable for tuition from the first day of attendance.

Selectmen's briefs

Selectmen voted last Wednesday night to award Golden Print Inc. of Quincy the contract for printing the warrant for the special town meeting on Monday, Dec. 14.

Selectmen granted a liquor license to the Cohasset Golf Club for February 13 for a wedding.

So long as Town Counsel approves, selectmen have decided to sell a Buffalo Roller and a Ford van to the Whitman Sales Outlet. The Buffalo Roller will be sold for $325 and the van will sell for $130. Both pieces are inoperative.

Selectmen approved a request to allow Cohasset Central Market to remain open on the two Sundays before Christmas. However, liquor can not be sold and must be kept covered.

Selectmen granted the Leukemia Society of America a license to conduct "tag day" on Saturday, December 12.

Cohasset Village Fair to be bigger & better

By O.F. Ingram

New treats for tots will mingle with the old favorite attractions for children at Cohasset's Village Fair, now in its 41st running and expanded by the addition of a fifth church sponsor and to be held on Saturday, Dec. 5, to usher in the holiday season in this South Shore town.

This year, too, the Fair will stretch out beyond the Cohasset Common area with the Village Fair Dinner in the Cohasset High School on Saturday evening, and a Christmas Music Concert in the Greek Orthodox Church in North Cohasset on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 6.

Perhaps topping the list of new attractions for youngsters will be the "Secret Room" in the vestry of the Congregational Church, where admission will be by the password "Santa Sent Me" and limited to those 12 and under. Inside, the children will be able to buy gifts for family members — mothers and fathers, brothers and sisters, aunts and uncles — all for less than $1 each.

"This is truly a secret room," explains Jane Marshall who has organized the novel project, "so we can't disclose in advance what we will have on sale, but they are all nice, clever, interesting things. And we will gift-wrap them in paper picked out by the children and label them all ready for the Christmas tree."

Also bound to appeal to children and at the same time set parents free to do their shopping, will be a film program and child-tending service on the second floor of the Unitarian Parish House.

Adults and responsible teen-agers will be on hand at the two showings of the films from 10 to 11 a.m. and 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. to provide supervision of children from ages 3 to 10. Mrs. Peter Bishop, who heads the group organizing the project, has been promised a number of exceptional films from the collection of the Boston Public Library, including filmed versions of a Bavarian church bell tower at Christmas, a boy's efforts to protect a beaver dam, a morning at the San Diego Zoo and the story of an old shoemaker and his elves. Admission will be 25 cents.

As always, a major drawing card for youngsters will be the appearance of Santa Claus on the Common. Barring unforeseen delays, the jolly, red-clad gentleman is expected to arrive about 11 a.m. to begin taking requests from children who come to his sleigh in its piney bower. Parents may purchase photos of the scene. Once again, Mrs. Donald F. Steele, who has arranged for Santa's visits for many years, is in charge of arrangements.

While the Secret Room offers children gifts for their families, the popular Children's Table in the Town Hall will offer gifts for children and will be a center of interest for mothers, grandmothers and aunts.

An industrious committee headed by Mrs. H. William Adams, III and Mrs. Richard Silvia, has been at work for months producing a stock of useful and novelty items. In addition to the usual articles of clothing, the well-stocked table will feature tu-tu's for budding ballet stars, a variety of hand puppets and a menagerie of colorful stuffed animals.

Young appetites will be satisfied by at least three popular fixtures of the Fair: the Snack Bar, where Philip Shockman and staff will be dealing in hot dogs and soft drinks; the popcorn machine operated by Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Hobson; and the Tacos Bar staffed by teen-agers of the Congregational Church under the direction of Mrs. James Seddon, serving this Mexican delicacy.

Still in the category of favorite attractions for children will be the balloon selling detachment headed by Peter O'Loughlin and Robert Ciciotte and the Grabs presided over by Mrs. Dennis Mulligan.

The expanded Fair this year is made possible by the addition of the Panagia Greek Orthodox congregation in the Pope Memorial Church to the sponsoring group of St. Anthony's Catholic, Second Congregational, First Parish Unitarian and St. Stephen's Episcopal Churches. This is believed now to be a unique ecumenical effort.

Chairman of the Fair's Central Committee is Mrs. Paul Walton, Sr. with Mrs. John C. Campbell as Co-Chairman. Mrs. Wilfred Cooney is secretary and Mrs. Hubert Vanderlugt is treasurer.

Budget constraints prompt library change..

Hayes said the trustees will be voting soon on whether to ask the Friends to spend the money on books instead. The book budget was cut by $6,000 this year.

The trustees, under Chairman David Chittim, will vote on the passes after the financial picture for the coming year is clear.

The town is planning to use the same base figure as last year in figuring budgets, although the assessors have nearly finished the revaluation process and have found valuations far higher than the one used in the formula last year.

That figure won't be official until sometime after the first of the year.

Chittim told the trustees last week that the town accountant has said the best they can expect is a two-and-a-half percent increase over the present budget.

Hayes said he expects people will eventually rally and save the library.

"But it takes several years to see the effects of the cuts. You will see your skilled staff going, book collections thinning, subscriptions dropped before anyone will notice.

"I don't see a groundswell happening now but I think eventually it will happen.

Hayes said people are making a choice.

"There's a lot of money out there. People have money to pay for Starcase but not for a good, free public library.

"Our society doesn't have any trouble keeping the package stores open nights and weekends. But not the library."

Special town meeting...

— An appropriation of $60,000 to attempt to eradicate gypsy moths. Town meeting appropriations would come too late for next season.

— Purchase of the Penn Central right of way which consists of nearly 30 acres for $140,000.

— Acceptance of state law allowing the town to collect its own parking tickets.

— The final payment on the Elm Street police and fire stations. The $10,000 was due last July.

— Enlargement of the Woodside Cemetery by using land already owned by the town.

— Instructing the selectmen to rehire Yvette Rattenbury, who was terminated because town officials wouldn't agree to limiting her position in the police department to a clerk. The wording of the article is in question by the petitioners.

— An eminent domain land taking on the property of Dorothy Meehan of Forest Notch to provide the town with a way to repair a broken drainage pipe. Selectmen are unsure whether this can be processed in time for the meeting.

Piepenbrink...

The next chief will not be under civil service. The position was placed under selectmen at last April's town meeting. Piepenbrink was not affected by the change.

A selection committee will be appointed in the near future to begin the process of choosing a new fire chief.

around town

☐It had been one of those weeks when everything seemed determined to go wrong, reports Marie McCarthy, and so, it was with understandable trepidation that she noticed a crowd gathering in front of her house.

What else could possibly happen, she asked herself. Curious, nonetheless, she finally joined the onlookers, each one of whom was intently staring at her back yard.

Following their gaze, Marie soon discovered the reason for such interest. Her yard had been taken over by a family of racoons — seven of them occupying seven different trees. Relieved, Marie reports that she was unable to determine why they had chosen her yard, her trees and why, in the day time. She thought, maybe something had scared them. But, then, maybe they too had had one of those weeks.

☐Looks like Cohasset's entire scouting population took advantage of last week's day off from school to visit the Whole Earth Exhibition at Commonwealth Pier. It was fun watching the Brownies as they took part in the various folk dance exhibitions.

Mrs. Smullen's Girl Scout troop made the rounds of the various craft tables and, of course, everyone enjoyed sampling the delicious food specialties of the different countries.

☐Judy Volungis is excited about the many different items that are now being made for her boutique table during the Community Garden Club's House tour Tuesday, Dec. 15.

Handpainted ceramic cats, lace angels and other hand crafted Christmas decorations are among the many items which will be available that day. "There will be lots of goodies," says Judy who notes that many baked goods will be made from recipes from the garden club's very own cookbook, "Cohasset Entertains."

☐Cohasset is not a large town, but, nevertheless, one could spend a goodly amount of time learning its history, both written and unwritten. For instance, I wonder how many readers, besides Arthur Clark, have heard about Horse Hang Hill. Let us know and if you're right, we'll print your answer in this column next week.

☐Registrations are now being accepted for a special fabric frame workshop with Mary Struzziero at the Community Center of Cohasset.

A great project for sewer and nonsewer, alike, the workshop will be held Thursday, Dec. 3, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at a cost of $6.

All materials will be provided for completion of two tree ornaments in a workshop on Christmas ornaments from Blown eggs scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 3, from 9 to 11:30 a.m. at the center. The cost of the program is $6.

Children in Kindergarten through grade 12 are invited to submit their entries in the center's Thanksgiving poster contest. The theme will be "What Thanksgiving Means to Me." Posters may be brought to the center Friday, Nov. 20, between 3 p.m. and 5 p.m.

For further information, call 383-0088, weekdays, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

☐Airman Sharline Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Green of 39 Ash Street, has been assigned to Lowry Air Force Base, Colo., after completing Air Force basic training. She is a 1977 graduate of Cohasset High School.

☐Janet L. Bibby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Bibby Jr. of West Bridgewater, has been promoted in the U.S. Air Force to the rank of airman first class.

She is a precision measuring equipment specialist at Dover Air Force Base, Del., with the 436th Avionics Maintenance Squadron.

Her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Royce, reside at 282 Forest Ave., Cohasset.

AFS is strong in Cohasset

Letters

To the Editor:

Teacher burnout? Parent apathy? Not in Cohasset's American Field Service Program. Several Cohasset parents and a Cohasset High School teacher have volunteered their time and energy to setting up a new AFS chapter for Cohasset.

They have made it possible for two students, one from Finland and another from Japan, to live with Cohasset families this year and to attend our high school. They have also been working very hard to enable five Cohasset students to join the AFS Americans Abroad program for next year.

These dedicated people have spread information about the program, conducted meetings for students and parents, thoroughly interviewed applicants at school and at home, processed lengthy applications, and written recommendations.

Their work continues in their hospitality to the visiting students, in fund-raising activities, and in various support services for the AFS program.

As a parent of one of the applicants, I am grateful for the opportunities that the AFS chapter has made available to Cohasset students. For their enthusiasm, commitment, and fine work, I would like to thank all the people involved, including Barbara and Alex Spooner, who initiated the new chapter, Jane Goedecke, Brenda and Jim Urmson, Nancy Sandell, Diana Kornet, Joanne Rossi, Elizabeth O'Connell, and Cohasset High School teacher George Fortin. I wish them well-deserved success in their program.

The Rattenbury T.M. article

Honorable Board of Selectmen
Cohasset, MA
RE: Petitioners' Article: Yvette Rattenbury

On the afternoon of November 12, well before the closing of the Special Town Meeting Warrant, approximately 133 registered voters of the Town delivered a petition to your Board requesting the same to be placed on the Dec. 14 Special Town Meeting Warrant.

It has since that time come to the attention of several petitioners that the article submitted to you may in fact be improperly worded, and that should Town Counsel find that to be the case, no action could in fact be taken on the same by Special Town Meeting.

Because so many voters of the Town signed petitioners' article, I would personally like to request that Selectmen write their own article, to be placed before petitioners' article on the Special Warrant, asking Special Town Meeting to vote to change the position in the Cohasset Police Department from clerk/dispatcher to clerk/typist. Whether affirmative or negative action on any article inserted by Selectmen is taken will make disposition of the requested (by petitioners') article a mere formality.

It is sincerely thought that Selectmen will approve the substance of this request which if voted affirmatively, will clear up Annual Town Meeting 81's intentions with regard to Mrs. Rattenbury's duties within the Cohasset Police Department.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,
Tanna Kasperowicz

Good for poetry

To the Editor:

The Mariner's support of the Poet-in-Residence Program at the Deer Hill School (and coming to the Joseph Osgood School on January 11) throughout the Fall has been important to the success of this first residency.

Everyone involved in this project appreciates your interest in the arts and poetry, and joins me in thanking you.

'The right to die: Would you choose Anne Capute for Your Nurse?'

By Edward Atkinson

This sermon was conceived in anger. Anger that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts would waste hundreds of thousands of dollars to place a person on trial for first degree murder who at worst was guilty of ignorance and bad judgment and at best performed an act of love and compassion. Anger, because although Nurse Anne Capute was obviously innocent, her well publicized trial may serve to frighten other physicians and nurses from the liberal use of medications.

In anger my first response to the trial of Anne Capute was to say give me a nurse like her any time. When the pain gets bad, I for one want out. But that really is a rash response to questions which are far more complex. I begin with the premise that each person has a right to decide what medical treatment to receive or to refuse such treatment. There are, however, a number of further issues to be considered. What if the person is too young to make these decisions, or is not competent of conscious at

Library help

The library is in jeopardy if the town's fiscal problems continue to cripple services.

Richard Hayes, chief librarian, sees more service cuts coming in the next year. Last year the library trustees implemented Proposition 2½ by closing down on Wednesdays.

What's next? Hayes isn't sure. He says volunteers are forming a substantial part of the library work force. In October volunteers gave 261 hours to the library. Hayes said that's equal to 30 percent of his staff time.

One thing already under consideration is abandonment of the free museum passes, provided by the friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Last week the board of trustees began consideration of a proposal to ask the friends to donate money for the book collection. The book collection suffered a $6,000 cut last year and inflation forces up the price of books and periodicals constantly.

It seems if the choice is between books and museum passes, the passes should probably be passed up.

But we wonder whether some alternative can't be found to finance both books and passes. Indeed, it seems the library has suffered enough loss. It would be a shame to see the library fall by the wayside as the town copes with Proposition 2½.

The fire station is down to one station and apparently still a target for cutbacks. There have even been wild rumors that one of the schools might close, if the trend isn't reversed.

Most of the people who picked Cohasset as a place to live, chose this community because of what seemed to be fine services and a pleasant atmosphere.

We think it's important to keep all those services alive.

Hayes says the real effect of the present reductions in the library budget will be felt about five years from now.

He's waiting for support to materialize for a higher budget. We support the idea. Like public education, public libraries are one of the cornerstones of democracy.

Be heard

This is the time for people in town to rise up and make their voices heard.

The town is beginning a budget process aimed at level funding just about every department. If there is an exception to the rule, we're sure we'll hear of it in time. But the basic truth in government this year is financial status quo.

Eugene Crowell, school superintendent, is concerned about what that will mean to a school system that must face inflationary factors. Wage increases have already been negotiated for the staff, at 7½ percent. Utilities are costing more, so are books and everything else.

Every other department in town is facing the same difficulty. Inflation plus level funding equals a reduction in services.

So the question comes: Is this what people want? Is Cohasset in the same brackett as the cities that now teeter on bankruptcy? Do the taxpayers demand services be cut back to trim the tax rate?

Let the town's leaders know.

Same leopard, same spots

By Paul Steven Stone

It was a day in late June, and I was following Phil Johnston around the State House, gathering observations for an article I would later write. Johnston and I were seated off to one side of the podium in the Massachusetts House chambers.

In front of us, standing at the lecturn that rests in the shadow of the Speaker's rostrum, one of Johnston's colleagues in the House was addressing the assembly. The subject of address was the "As Is" bill, which at that stage in the bill's history had been passed by both branches of the legislature but in different forms. The "As Is" bill, if you don't remember, exempted auto purchases for under $750 from the state's tough consumer protection laws. As a blatant piece of special interest, anti-consumer legislation it was ineffectually opposed by all pro-consumer groups as well as by the Commonwealth's own Secretary for Consumer Affairs.

The man at the lecturn was serving up a curious diet of convoluted logic for his colleagues to digest, and I found myself drawn to the event like a man awakened in the middle of the night by a vague unsettling odor.

According to the speaker, the "As Is" bill would be even more helpful to consumers and auto dealers alike if the buyer could quickly sign his name to a provision that absolved the dealer of any liability in the transaction. The Senate version of the bill, as if to mollify the outrage of consumer advocates, called for the buyer to write out in longhand that he understood he was buying the car "As Is." Citing the awkwardness of such an arrangement and the inconvenience to all concerned parties, the speaker was urging members of the House to support his motion to vote down the Senate's meddlesome essay requirement and to substitute, instead, a simple printed declamation that the buyer could sign with unblinking ease.

"This," he said, raising up a copy of his proposed contract like an object at auction, "is exactly what the contract will look like. You can see the size type we're talking about, the colors that will be used, and the layout." He went on to explain — and forgive me if I can't explain his explanation — that this improvement in the "As Is" bill would help keep Massachusetts consumers from going out of state to buy their low cost automobiles.

There was something so pathetic about the drama I was witnessing that I found myself feeling embarrassed for the man at the lecturn. It was as if he were standing naked in front of his peers and didn't know it.

Johnston was surprised by my reaction.

"He should be embarrassed," he said, "not you."

Perhaps that was true, but in any case I still felt embarrassed, as if the humanity that the speaker and I shared had been cloaked in the garb of a clown. The dignity of our surroundings, the high purpose to which this assembly had been called, all contributed to a feeling that this chamber should be filled with men and women of stature, whose ideals would always reach higher than their accomplishments.

And what was I witnessing in this hall of giants? Whose rights were being protected, what ideals were being pursued, what needs were being met that a respected member of this body would stand up like a carnival hawker and try to sell a document that had no rightful place in the Commonwealth's body of laws?

I had gone to Oz, and found in place of the wizard a pathetic figure hiding behind a curtain. Once outrage subsided, I was left with only embarrassment.

Outrage, however, is a creature quickly recalled to life, and I experienced its resurrection when in reading the Boston Globe's Op Ed page I came across an article penned by Representative Timothy Bassett, the same man whose fallacious logic had so aggrieved me back in June. He had a new cause to trumpet, the repeal of the state's "Blue Laws" which prohibit most retailers from operating on Sundays. In pursuing that cause he paraded past the reader a long train of arguments that quickly traveled towards the conclusion that the Blue Laws were a vestigal organ in the body politic, an obstruction to life, liberty and the pursuit of success.

My outrage arose not in response to Representative Bassett's stated objectives, but to the way he once again cloaked his singular purpose in the guise of widescale general beneficence. Here again he was championing the consumer, who might now be able to buy a "buyer beware" jalopy on a Sunday if Bassett had his way. Here again he was worried about financially pressed college students and urban youths who could work an extra day each week to save up for repairs on junkboxes they had purchased with a quick signature under a statement they had never read. Here once again was his concern for liberty and needless government interference; his fear that Massachusetts was falling behind its sister states. Here, in fact, was everything but the names and faces behind the special interest group that had this time pushed the button that sent him into action.

You only need to see a leopard on attack once for his spots to be etched indelibly in your memory. Ignore the fact that he's after different meat this time. It's his hunger you have to fear, and that will never change.

the time a decision must be made? Or what if a person is deeply depressed by the news of serious illness? Is that not a bad time to decide anything? Medical problems and treatments may be too difficult for the layperson to understand and make correct decisions. Don't we have to leave these decisions to the professionals? The answer in part to all of these problems is honest conversation well in advance of a time of crisis. Death and serious illness are not easy subjects to address, but many of the difficulties surrounding the death of Norma Leanues might have been avoided if communications between her and her family, her nurse, and her physician had been more open.

At the First Parish, for those who wish to fill them out, we have forms on file which record a person's instructions to be observed at the time of death and which include a section called "The Living Will" in which a person may state his or her wishes regarding medical care during a period of incapacity or unconsciousness. Although "The Living Will" is not legally binding, I suspect that had Norma Leanues filled out this form Anne Capute never would have come to trial. The choices can be ours if we have the courage to make them and express them to our family, clergy, physicians and lawyers.

I was going to call but...

By Suzanne Diaz

Open Letter To All My Good Friends Out There (You know who you are):

9:00 a.m., I was going to call you, but I had to dress the younger kids and that takes forever.

9:30 a.m., I was going to call you but I had to go to the store when we ran out of milk.

10:15 a.m., I was just picking up the receiver to call you, but the baby fell over backwards and the three-year-old had to be taken to the bathroom.

10:45 a.m., My hand was on the dial when I realized I hadn't heard or seen the three-year-old in 20 minutes so I had to go look for him.

11:15 a.m., I was all ready to call but then I got a call from the school nurse to pick up one of the older children.

12:00 p.m., I couldn't call because I was feeding everybody except myself.

12:30 p.m., Tried to call but was busy working out next week's CCD carpool schedule.

1:00 p.m., Meant to call you but "All My Children" was on and Erica was going to meet her secret admirer because Brandon's wife showed up in his hotel room, and Cliff Warner's trial is starting and Palmer Courtlandt caught Donna and Chuck in her dressing room at "The Chateau."

2:00 p.m., Was too upset by events on the preceding to be able to converse.

2:30 p.m., Thought about calling but the baby woke up from her nap, the three-year-old was bored and the man came to read the meter.

3:00 p.m., Couldn't call as I was bracing myself for the older kid's arrival from school.

3:30 p.m., Meant to call, but I was busy reading school notices and deciding if I could bake cakes for the book fair.

4:00 p.m., Did plan to call but had to take one of the kids to the library to research a project.

5:00 p.m., Started dinner, refereed several fights, realized decibel level was too high for phone call, mixed stiff drink and thought I would try later.

7:00 p.m., Put younger kids in bed, walked over to phone, but was waylaid by someone needing help with homework.

7:30 p.m., Had to run out to the store again for bread.

8:15 p.m., Settled down next to the phone but got long distance call instead.

9:00 p.m., I called and your line was busy! Could you drop by sometime?

Name the pup contest draws a flock of entries

By Lois Martin

You wouldn't believe it. Princess Di's baby won't get much more attention than our new Mariner pup has received. That sweet-faced wee Golden Retriever has been the cause for a lot of thinking caps donned during the last week, as hundreds and hundreds of residents suggested what we should name him.

Have we got the mail to prove it, from all ages from miles around, from people barely old enough to write, from entire families, from historians who backed up suggested names with historical fact! We got letters with 'paw prints,' which was also submitted as a name.

As you read the Mariner this week, the contest is over and probably the Post Office is relieved that it was a short one. But we are now beneath mounds of entries, having a swell time, hassling over favorites and stacking a separate pile for the name most frequently entered..."Scoop."

We wish we'd told you that if we settle on a name that was submitted by more than one person, we'll draw from a hatful of those entries. Because that's what we're going to do if we choose from an oft mentioned name. No sense trying to go by date because in the volume of mail it's possible the same name could have arrived at the same time.

Next week we'll tell you what this pup's name is, first, second and third place winners. And it'll be an all day job choosing one between the numbers and the judging staff of diversified minds...

Smudge	Snoop	Mariner's Man (M & M)	Lou Grant
Snickers	Mari-gold		Column Man

Meanwhile, we couldn't resist passing along some of the letters to you. Only a small animal could inspire the warm response that puppy got. (And the little fellow's getting response from the publisher/owner too who has been busy with newspapers in a different way since he got the puppy...putting the papers all over the floors.)

Here are some of the notes we've received:

"Hi! The name I have thought of for your precious pup would be "Salty," because it's a name that pertains to the sea and the name of your newspapers, the Mariner. P.S. Take good care of him, he's beautiful!" Sue Devitt, Green Harbor.

"I suggest the name "Skipper" because a skipper who is a master Mariner and an old sea dog is a great news source for interesting stories." Harry Skidmore, Marshfield.

"I'm entering your Pup Contest. I'm a 12 year old girl. I think the pup should be named "Headliner." He looks like he would make the headlines too. I would love to win first place especially. But you pick what you think is the best name." Stephanie Karle, Marshfield.

"The name for this delightful puppy should be "Smudge." The first thing I thought was: someone dropped a smudge of something and it developed into a puppy. Wish he were mine." Enid Billings, Scituate.

"Your new puppy is adorable. The very first name that came to me was "Snickers." Here are some other names I came up with: "Column Man," "Nineteen Pica Pup," "Paper Boy," "Sire Offset," "Pup Lisher," "Mariner's Man (M & M)," "Typo." Good luck with finding a name for him." Laura Albion, Hanover.

"If you want a good 'newspaper oriented' name for your pup, how about Massachsuetts Spy or Spy for short — after the newspaper published by Isaiah Thomas...Thomas, as you know, was the man who displayed the signal lanterns for Paul Revere. Also, as a member of the militia, he witnessed the events at Lexington and Concord, and, on May 3, 1775, wrote for his paper one of the first, best and most widely reprinted accounts of those events." Kathy Jarvis, Scituate.

OTHER NAMES

There are who-knows how many different names (we haven't counted them yet). Among them, "Snewsy," "Misprint," "Lou Grant," "Mr. Ed," "Inky," "Tip," "Flash," "Snoop," "Mari-Gold."

We've got enough good names to name a kennel full of Golden Retrievers. But we're limited to one. And you'll know it next week.

Our thanks for your participation and the prize-worthy suggestions.

1st Parish Christmas Concert Dec. 13

The third annual First Parish Christmas Concert by the Unicorn Singers under the direction of Margo Euler will be held Sunday, Dec. 13 at 4 p.m. in the Meeting House. The program will feature Ralph Vaughn Williams' "Hodie."

The proceeds from this year's concert will help DOVE, an organization dedicated to ending domestic violence, reduce a heavy mortgage on its recently purchased $100,000 shelter for Norfolk County and surrounding areas.

DOVE provides specialized, confidential services to battered women and injured children — victims of domestic violence. Victims are housed in temporary shelter, receive guidance through the 24 hour crisis hot line (471-1234), and get encouragement from support groups. Court and welfare advocates help them establish a non-violent life.

Members of the community who wish to become patrons of the concert will receive two tickets by mail for a gift of $25 or more. Tickets at $2.50 will go on sale to the public beginning Sunday, November 22. With limited seating in the Meeting House, patrons are encouraged to send their donations right away to The First Parish in Cohasset, Christmas Concert, 23 North Main St.

The First Parish's Christmas gift to the community is an opportunity for you to help them help DOVE ease the fear, pain, and heartache of domestic violence.

Concert Information: 383-1100, 383-6433...DOVE: 471-1234.

Haig testimony on foreign policy

By Rep. Gerry Studds

Recently the House Foreign Affairs Committee — on which I serve — met to receive testimony from Secretary of State Alexander Haig regarding current U.S. foreign policy.

I asked the Secretary three questions with respect to U.S. policy toward Central America. First, I asked him if the U.S. had any objection to unconditional face-to-face discussions between the government of El Salvador and the opposition groups in that country. His answer, essentially, was yes, we would object. The U.S. favors talks only about participation in the government-sponsored elections planned for next March, and would oppose talks aimed simply at putting a halt to violence, talks entered into without any preconditions.

My second question was prompted by rumors that the armed forces in Honduras might not be willing to permit the elections scheduled in that country for Nov. 29 to be held. I asked Secretary Haig whether the United States would re-examine its increasingly close ties to the Honduran military if that military should interfere with the elections. Secretary Haig replied, "No."

Finally, I made reference to the harsh criticism which the U.S. has directed toward Nicaragua's decision to increase the size of its military. I pointed out that Nicaragua has justified its action out of fear that the U.S. may seek to intervene in that country. I asked Secretary Haig whether he could provide an assurance that the United States would not directly or indirectly participate in or encourage action to over-throw or de-stabilize the existing Nicaraguan Government. Secretary Haig said he could provide no such assurance.

The refusal of our Secretary of State to publicly express strong U.S. support in these specific instances for principles of non-intervention, free elections, and non-violence strike me as incredible. There is an enormous amount of fear and uncertainty at present in all countries of Central America. Instead of seeking to stabilize the situation in the region, Secretary Haig has consciously chosen a course which maximizes feelings of insecurity and doubt about U.S. intentions. This approach tends to fuel regional unrest, and make far easier any attempt by others, including Fidel Castro, to extend their influence throughout the hemisphere.

I continue to believe that this Administration is misguided in its approach to Central America. Every time I hear Alexander Haig speak, my unease grows. I suspect, with great distress, that the United States intends to continue polarizing the situation in Central America until every country — and each group within every country — is forced to choose between Fidel Castro and Ronald Reagan. Such a policy — with its belligerent rhetoric and its support for forces of privilege and terror throughout the region — affords Mr. Castro an opportunity and a credibility he does not deserve. Not only do I believe that such a strategy is unfair to people of moderation and good will in Latin America, I suspect that it will produce for the U.S. only a very small number of allies, most of whom will provide us with exceedingly bad company, indeed. Our judgments about other governments ought to be consistent, and they should be based on principles which have the support of the American people. If such a pattern of consistency exists within U.S. policy toward Central America at the present time, the Secretary of State, for one, seems unwilling to share this fact with Congress or the American people.

Mariner launches subscription drive

The Cohasset Mariner will be running a subscription campaign from now until the end of the year.

Our hope is to begin the year 1982 with 2,000 subscribers. Publisher David Cutler concedes the goal is ambitious but then he always sets his goals on the high side.

A special subscription rate has been developed for this campaign — it's $7 a year. The rate applies to anyone renewing a subscription, taking the paper after a free trial or coming aboard for the first time.

While the Mariner is on sale at less than the regular price of $9 a year, these renewals and new subscriptions will also benefit the Cohasset Community Center. The Community Center will receive $3 for each subscription sold. The same donation drive is being offered by the other weekly in town.

Skippers drub Holbrook 32-7

By Rob Tis

The Skipper football team came together this week and totally blew out Holbrook, 32-7.

The Skippers' hard hitting defense deserves just as much credit as the offense for this victory. In the first half the defense's intense gang-tackling made Holbrook cough up the ball for three turnovers, two of them resulting in Skipper touchdowns.

The first score took place after the Skippers pounced on a fumble near midfield. The Skippers launched a mighty drive downfield, which was highlighted by a 12-yard Kamakazi rush by Mark Gunville for the touchdown.

The second Skipper score of the first half took place when the Skipper "D" popped the ball loose and recovered it on the 25. Jack McNiell, Bob Donahue and Gunville took handoffs from quarterback Kevin Dooley and moved the pigskin down to the two-yard line where Bob Donahue plunged into the end zone for the T.D. This made the score 12-0 as the half ended.

In the third quarter Jack McNiell broke through the Holbrook line for an amazing 25-yard run on a reverse trap. McNiell then made the drive complete, sprinting in from the two on the next play. On Holbrook's next possession Paul Buckley intercepted after a strong Skipper pass rush and Cohasset had possession once again. Jack McNiell took the honors once again this time snaring a pass from Kevin Dooley, taking a mean hit, and then leaping into the end zone for a super extra effort T.D. The Skippers coasted to victory from here allowing the Bulldogs one T.D. in the fourth quarter. The Skippers are now keying on the big Thanksgiving Day game against Duxbury.

The dog gets more attention

By Patricia Desmond

Dear Diary, she began in large, even strokes.

Today, Beloved bought another dog. I'm beginning to wonder if he still remembers my name. Diary,Dear, the mutt, I mean, the pure bred pest, doesn't even have a name yet but he gets more attention than the baby.

Her handwriting was drifting down on the right-hand side of each line, which any expert book will tell you is a sure indication of depression.

Outside the wind could be heard in the dimness. Inside the wind could be felt infiltrating the windows.

The pup, heretoafter referred to as The Pup, slept at her feet, leaning toward her. From time to time she would gently kick him away. From time to time he would snuggle back.

"Why aren't animals any brighter than this?" she said out loud, knowing Beloved was nearby.

"What are you talking about," he popped in the open doorway. "You should be so smart."

She closed the book and made a face.

If she weren't a mother, it would have certainly looked like she stuck her tongue out at his pseudo comeback. But she is, after all, Super Mom, so that couldn't have been her tongue out there. It must have been a shadow.

Beloved noticed The Pup at her slippered feet.

Beloved snuffled loudly and walked away.

"The dog follows me everywhere," he mumbled.

"Then why do you leave his little piles of dog smell all over?" Super Mom said, her voice just a bit too loud to sound friendly.

Now Super Mom had only herself to blame for the recurring odor that wafted through the household.

Afterall just three days before she and Beloved had been talking in the kitchen, sipping her too weak coffee and thinking about their respective diets.

Super Mom and Beloved often talked or thought about diets. He was into fads and she was into starvation. Of course neither of them followed the plan for more than 15 minutes.

Outside it was raining and Super Mom was thinking about making hot cocoa. Beloved was nibbling at three hour brownies. (Called three hour brownies for the length of their stay in the household.)

"People should make sure their dreams come true," Super Mom said, half conscious.

"Too many people put off their dreams until it's too late to enjoy them or even make them happen," she waxed more philosophically.

"What dreams are you hiding," Beloved asked with concern she might want to take a year off mothering or join a commune.

"Well, most of my dreams happen," she said. "I dreamed there would be a July, a Gosh, a Wren and a Mit. And then they came true. I dreamed I'd grow up sometime and I think it will happen soon. I dreamed I'd be able to work without having neurotic kids and you let me."

"You don't bring up things like that without a point," Beloved went on. "I really meant to get the dishes done yesterday. I just didn't have time until the news was over and by then I'd fallen asleep."

"I wasn't complaining about the contract (meaning his half of the household chores) but I was thinking how I hardly know you. I guess my dream is to be close to someone."

"What do you mean, someone?" he picked up the set after her volley.

"I don't even know what your dreams are," she went on.

"There's one thing missing from my life. ..." he began, his voice fading.

"What?" she wanted to know.

"I want a dog of my own," he said.

"But the children have a dog, can't you share it," she wished she hadn't asked.

"I've wanted a dog to follow me everywhere ever since I was 12," he said.

She was always a sucker for a good line. Gosh said she'd believe the Ayatollah Khomeini if he said he was a prophet of peace who only wanted to conquer the United States to prevent a nuclear holocaust.

Dear Diary, I'm sorry I wanted to know him better. Sometimes ignorance really is bliss, her handwriting drifted downward on the right-hand side of the page.

The Pup stood up, having been moved aside by her size 9's one more time. He walked toward the bedroom door sniffing the floor and left a little pile of ...

"Beloved," she called. "It's your turn."

Beloved came slowly as could be, wondering if al dreams seem so boring when they come true.

Showing off examples of children's smocks that will be featured at the Children's Table of Cohasset's Village Fair, Saturday, Dec. 5, are Amy Silvia and Mindy Cheel, whose mothers, Mrs. Richard Silvia and Mrs. Kenneth Cheel are members of the committee producing items for the table.

White explains laser technology

I'm an 'electro-optical physicist' .....(huh?)

By Laura Doherty

From welding steel plates, drilling tunnels through stone, performing delicate surgery and cutting cloth in fabric factories, lasers have a great variety of uses, explains Matthew White, who is now Director for Science of the Office for Naval Research (ONR).

And, Buck Rogers and Luke Skywalker to the contrary, much of the mystique about lasers is not only untrue but also a lot less exciting than their actual uses.

White has been involved in the development of laser technology from its inception — the laser having just been invented when he completed his PhD in 1960. He describes the excitement of the early years during which he conducted experiments for an aerospace organization in California.

"It was a very fruitful area of research and a good [illegible] for people in that field," he recalls — a time in which he invented 25 different patents. Now, he continues, after 20 years, the laser has come around to that level of maturity where its application for practical use is being actively pursued.

As a director for ONR, White's principal responsibility is serving as the central person in underwater optics and blue-green laser technology. A blue green laser can be used for underwater communications for example by submarines.

The ONR currently funds and monitors a number of programs all over the country in universities and industry trying to develop these lasers.

For the past two or more years, White has also been the Navy representative to an advisory group to NATO, which has meetings all over the world. The official meetings, he describes as being very formal but exciting, nevertheless, and there are also independent meetings which are less formal and provide yet another opportunity for nations to share information.

White says that his work is not affected politically by changes in administration but there is a need to adjust to changing fiscal policies and philosophies. The current feeling, he notes, appears to be "you know enough, now get it to work."

There is a certain amount of loneliness which White often feels associated with his work....As much as half of his time is spent traveling. And, then, there is the difficulty in discussing what he actually does.

"Telling people that I'm an electro-optical physicist can often mean the end of a great conversation," he says.

Over the years, he has described his work to various groups in Cohasset. At a talk at the Deer Hill School, the students were very impressed by the helium neon laser he demonstrated.

White also has the very common problem of trying to find enough time to pursue other interests. For relaxation, he enjoys playing his guitar and sometime, he adds, he would like to write a science fantasy similar to the Mr. Tompkins series.

The Cohasset Drama Club

The Cohasset Drama Club will present "Table Manners" Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights at Town Hall. At dress rehearsal last week, director Valerie Lester (top left) works from the footlights. Clockwise, cast members, including leads Lee Dunne and Davis Dassori, rehearse a scene from the two-act play. That's Lee Dunne again on the right and below at the head of the table.

YOUNG CHOKE-SAVER HONORED — Peter Corbett of Cohasset, second left, was one of 29 persons honored Oct. 22 for saving the life of a choking victim by performing the Heimlich Maneuver. Peter, a junior high school student, rescued a fellow student in a choking accident in the high school cafeteria. He received a choke-saver medal from Dr. Henry J. Heimlich, founder of the rescue technique, at award ceremonies sponsored by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts. With Peter (L to R), are his father, Paul Corbett, John Larkin Thompson, president of Blue Shield of Massachusetts, and Louis F. Alfano, M.D., chairman of the Blue Shield Board of Directors. The medals were presented at the Lantana in Randolph.

Fire Facts

People planning business meetings or any type of gathering in a public place should put fire safety at the top of their agenda. Fire safety should begin with the selection of the meeting place. The safety of the facility should be as much a consideration as convenience of location and the quality of service.

Meeting planners should check the facility carefully to make sure that:

— There is a fire alarm system to alert the attendees, in case a fire should occur.

— There is adequate emergency lighting for exit ways and exit stairs.

— There are no obstructions blocking corridors, exit doorways, exit stairs, or other routes of escape for occupants.

— Attendees should be instructed not to use elevators during a fire. It is possible that some elevators may malfunction, due to the damaging effects of heat to the elevator controls, and carry occupants directly to the fire area.

— Meeting rooms have sufficient exits for the number of occupants.

— Local codes and ordinances pertaining to the use of flammable or combustible materials are observed.

— There are an adequate number of fire extinguishers or standpipe and hose systems for the use of occupants in case of fire.

Designated employees of your organization should be trained and drilled regularly in emergency procedures. These designated persons should be identified at the beginning of the meeting and should be available to instruct attendees on emergency procedures, in case a fire occurs.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Just about now, the holiday season begins. There's a special feeling in the air that lingers on 'till after New Year's. As November beckons family home, we New Englanders believe this is the very best place to be. Here, where Thanksgiving had its beginnings, we're great believers in tradition and it shows in the holiday foods we serve. Helen Melvin is sharing with us one of her favorite cookbooks which has such old Yankee recipes as Steamed Thrift Pudding, Tree Cake, Grandma's Doughnuts, Elephant Ears, Cider Pie and Bean Porridge. I can remember when my mother used to make our holiday mincemeat which we all had to give at least one stir for good luck. From Helen's book comes this recipe from Vermont's President Calvin Coolidge's mother called

MINCE MEAT FOR PIES

1 pound boiled beef
1 pound suet
1/2 peck apples
1 pound currants
2 pounds seeded raisins
1/2 pound citron
2 pounds sugar
2½ quarts cider

Pinch of salt, cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg to taste. Pare apples, core and chop. Chop currants, raisins, citron and sugar for 5 min. Then pour in the meat, suet, salt and spices last. Cook slowly two hours. Put in sterilized jars and seal.

CHRISTMAS SALAD

2 c. raw cranberries
1½ c. water
1 c. sugar
1 pkg. cherry jello
1/2 c. drained, crushed pineapple
1 tart apple, peeled and chopped
1/2 c. nuts, chopped

Add water to cranberries and simmer 10 min. Add sugar and jello. Cool. Add rest of ingredients and refrigerate in greased mold.

The Schnabel Galleries in Hingham is the scene of the start of success for 13-81, a group of South Shore artists.

There are photographs by Gail Bryan, fabric collage by Nancy Connolly, paintings by Rosalind Farbush, sculpture by Dennis Kowal, photos by Tom Lucas, water colors by Douglas Orr, sculpture by Charles Jones, paintings by Susan Rodgerson, all of Cohasset, plus more works of art by artists from other communities.

It was almost impossible to see any of the art at the opening Friday night. The gallery was filled with interested art lovers.

Most of the artists were there. Many of the guests had to stand outside, waiting for space. But that space didn't leave much room for art watching.

The show, the first of a series the group hopes to work out, continues at Schnabel's in Hingham Square, 46 South Street, until Dec. 22.

The names of the artists have been known in art circles on the South Shore. Several of the artists in the group are recognized nationally.

The quality of the work was predictably high.

Roz Farbush paints with drama and bold colors. Gail Bryan's photographs in black and white are exceedingly bold.

Mixed through the gallery space were some glowing artists.

Syma of Hingham was there to look over her ceramics. She wore flowing clothes and specially-Syma-designed 13-81 earrings.

John McNabb, who did stories for the Mariner before going to work for the South Shore Chronicle, was there to see his brother, Michael McNabb's work. Michael had a sculpture on display that uses erotic curves in an abstract form. Many of the works were hidden by either low placement on the walls or merely by the crowd.

Schnabel's is open Tuesday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Thursday nights the gallery is open to 8 p.m.

13-81 Tom Lucas and Charles Jones, two members of the group of artists, look over the work at the Schnabel Galleries in Hingham where the show opened last week. (Derr photo)

The concept of 13-81 is that of a support group. Most of the members are included in the membership of South Shore Art Center.

"But we wanted to get together and just talk about art," one of the 13 said. "There weren't any couches at the art center so we just began meeting in each other's homes."

Out of those discussions came the idea of helping to promote each other's work, helping to explain to the community there is a community of artists here.

Facts of life not pleasant for school spending

[Editor's Note: Eugene Crowell, School Superintendent, gave this paper to school committee this week.]

Fiscal Year 1983
Budget Assumptions

1. That the School Department's FY '82 budget totalled $3,634,475.00.

2. That an additional $20,000 was subtracted for Town emergency situation due to the Proposition 2½ crisis.

3. That the School Department's FY '83 budget limit will be $3,712,241.00 based upon a $225 million dollar assessed value of total Town property.

4. That the school's portion of the 1982-1983 tax rate will be 55.3 percent for FY '83 calculations of limits.

5. That this will represent a $77,766 increase, the 2½ percent increase allowed at present under Chapter 580 (Proposition 2½).

6. That with a 7½ percent increase already contracted for with all the School Department bargaining units, and with a 10 percent average inflation estimate in the cost of all supplies and services, the department will again face a substantial decrease in the amount of monies it has to operate its programs.

7. That inflation increases have to be absorbed in our base budget.

8. That capital outlay requests must be curtailed.

9. That no new programs can begin nor old programs be restored.

10. That projected student enrollment for September of 1982 (the period covered by the FY '83 budget), is expected to be 1401. This represents a 68-pupil decline between September of 1981 and October of 1982. (Please see enclosed enrollment projection sections.)

11. That this document will contain all of the foreseeable fiscal needs of the department but that no contingency for any emergency situation has been included.

12. That if such an emergency arose (roof problems, fire, or drastic utility cost increases), appropriation would have to come from a special warrant article placed before the Town.

13. That the impact of Proposition 2½ has had many subtle and unexpected results on the quality of Cohasset education and that those problems, where possible, have begun to be addressed by this document by re-ordering our priorities. However, the restoration of programs, staff, and equipment/maintenance needs are being "programmed" to stay within the FY '83 limit of $3,712,241.00.

Budget Overview:

a. FY '83 limit	$3,712,241.00
b. Mandatory increase estimate	230,000.00
c. FY '83 2½ increase limit	77,716.00
d. Budget deficit to maintain "status quo"	152,284.00
e. Enrollment decline staff reduction	30,000.00
f. New deficit after staff reduction	- 122,284.00

This estimate represents the amount of money needed to meet our FY '83 contractual obligations over what we are presently spending for existing program operations. Unless more dollars are available through a high assessed valuation or other source of revenue, future cuts will be necessary in our operations for next September.

School Board ...

Eliminating two staff positions will save about $30,000.

Crowell said the critical time for the schools will be in 1984 or 1985 when enrollment projections show a large drop.

But for next year and the year after, Crowell expects enrollment will justify the loss of two teachers a year.

His figures on the shortfall within next year's budget are based on projections of already negotiated raises plus step increases due the present staff.

The Boosters served up an Italian feast at their banquet last week and part of the kitchen help were Carole Meers and Mell Brown.

Booster's Banquet winds up fall sports season

Awards issued

The fall sports banquet last Thursday night wound up the fall sports season.

An excellent baked lasagna was the main course, accompanied by salad, bread and butter, milk and ice cream.

Booster honcho Rosee Duffy modeled the new Cohasset Booster sweaters. Then she moved on to the highlight of the evening: the presentation of the Booster awards. These handsome trophies go to the member of each team that shows the most dedication, team spirit and enthusiasm.

Jack McNiell received the trophy for the football team. Lily Carboni got the award for cheerleading; Mike Ellis for cross country; Mary O'Brien for girls' soccer; Mike Nedrow for hockey and Anne Bear for field hockey. Each coach presented his team members with letters or certificates and mentioned all the people who contributed to Cohasset athletics this fall season. It all made for a fun and interesting dinner.

As a fundraiser the Boosters Club is now selling V-neck, navy blue sweaters with Cohasset embroidered on the left hand side. They will be on sale Tuesday, Nov. 17, at the high school open house. The cost is $14 each or $13.50 each for three or more. For more information about the sweaters call 383-9292 or 383-0292.

CHS Athletic Director Clark Chatterton received a plaque from Tom Wigmore, Clark's assistant. The plaque read: "To Clark Chatterton in appreciation for working with me all these years...spring '78 - spring '83. From Tom Wigmore."

Jan Ditmar shows off a mug that she received from the CHS Cheerleaders.

To Santa Claus, aka My Friend

By Patricia Desmond

I was searching for myself
when I found you, gift-wrapped in magic foil under an artificial bauble tree.
It was a year filled with yesterdays.
You were wearing a tag marked, "Open my heart."
And I was smiling.
There was a woman at your side.
You smiled at her.
But a friend who'd brought me into that clustered Christmas evening whispered that you two didn't get on.
You said hello
and the other words that can be heard at parties everywhere.
I left early,
wondering about you,
your hopes and dreams, sometime,
Wondering if you would look into my eyes and unwrap
my fantasy.

To fight inflation, seek what you hid

By Claire McDonough

I know how we could wipe out inflation and improve our standard of living.

All we have to do is find the stuff we already have. Take my friend Fauna. This year she decided to be super efficient and start her Christmas shopping in April. By July she had bought presents for everyone on her list. By September she hadn't the foggiest idea where she had put any of them. Last Sunday she decided she'd have to begin again.

Fortunately, her mother came for a visit and decided to surprise Fauna by cleaning out her linen closet. To Fauna's surprise and delight, her mother uncovered the games she had bought for her kids, the sports jacket she picked out for her husband, and the Robert Redford poster she bought her sister. She was more surprised than pleased when her mother also uncovered the bed jacket and the toaster that were to have been her Christmas presents.

Fauna doesn't just hide stuff at home, either. Last Wednesday she went through the closet in her office and found three bags of Tupperware she had promised to send to a friend in Florida. Fortunately, the friend seems to have forgotten, too. She may get them for Christmas.

I'm a lot like Fauna, but by the time I find things I've hidden I don't remember ever buying them. Last summer I was making room in the attic to hide a few birthday presents I'd picked up on sale when I came across, still in their original wrappings, one place setting of china, a baby's christening dress, six cans of dog food, and a bottle of penicillin tablets. None of them rang a bell. The china doesn't match any I ever remember seeing in a friend's house, but maybe I should check the Reagans. What really worries me is whether some kid's sore throat went untreated. Or some dog unfed. I don't suppose I could have let some kid go unchristened. Could I?

I don't just hide presents, either. If I want to be able to serve something for dessert, the only way I can be certain to have it at meal time is to hide it somewhere that no child will ever look. Like under the dish towel. The only problem is that I don't always want to serve apple pie when I find it after six weeks in the pots and pans.

Last night I tried a new approach. When I was going to bed I handed the Dragon a note that read, "If I die or develop amnesia before morning there are chocolate chip cookies in your second drawer under the clean socks."

"Now you're starting to show some sense," he said sternly. "Nobody can remember everything, and it's only reasonable to write notes. Whenever I hide anything, I add the item and its location to a list I keep in my wallet. The knowledge is always at my fingertips whenever I need it. For example, when you asked me to hide the chocolate bits last Sunday I added them to my list. It's just a matter of being organized."

"Wonderful!" I enthused. "Could I have them now? I promised I'd make cookies for the church fair."

There was a two minute silence.

"You haven't," he asked sheepishly, "seen my wallet around, have you?"

McDonald's aims to come to Cohasset

By Patricia Desmond

The Golden Arches of McDonalds may soon be seen on Route 3A.

That is, if percolation tests sift out and town boards give their necessary blessings.

The site under consideration by the Westwood real estate office of the nation-wide corporation is the vacant land next to the old Cohasset Motors building on Route 3A.

Last fall the property was under consideration for a town multi-purpose garage. The 10 acre property would have been sold to the town for $450,000 with another $50,000 needed for renovations.

Town officials were reluctant to talk about the plans this week, saying they had no specific details available.

The question which most of the town's younger residents will want answered first is whether there will be a 16 foot Ronald McDonald, like the ones available in Weymouth, Quincy and Braintree.

Apparently, the company spokesman said, the specialized playgrounds are becoming standardized equipment at the newer McDonalds.

"But the Cohasset site is still just a proposal," an official said.

In fact Kevin O'Brien, the health agent, who has been observing the percolation tests on the land said he hadn't been told what the tests were for.

"When there's actually a proposal it will come up on the board of health agenda," he explained. He said he was asked to observe the tests — a requirement according to health board regulations — by an engineering company.

O'Brien said he couldn't tell offhand whether the percolation tests would allow construction of a McDonalds on the land next to the abandoned car sales dealership.

The decision couldn't be made without the plans.

The property is listed on assessors' records as owned by Howard Schramm. John Elliot, the attorney who handles the matter for the Schramm property, was not available for comment before press time this week.

Pat Facey, planning board member, said she has heard the rumors but that her board would have to consider any request for the sort of proposal that's still in the talking stages.

"The first step would be the percolation tests," she said. "It's usual to make sure the land will perc before going very far with a plan. Percs are done long before going for permits."

Officials from McDonalds have been in the office of Building Inspector Jame Litchfield lately looking for information about regulations governing the property.

As of this time the property is one large land mass consisting of about 10 acres.

There are agreements already in effect to rent the existing building to Energy Exchange, which is now located in the professional building opposite Cushing Plaza.

A spokesman for that company said there are no current plans to change anything abut the building — even the sign.

Country Club manager Robert Kemp is murdered and...

By Donna Cogliano

Chef Brad Harlow showed up for work as usual at the Cohasset Country Club Saturday morning and went about his normal duties not knowing that a murder had been committed in his kitchen overnight.

His boss, Robert A. Kemp, 38, manager of the club, had been shot and left partially covered with dirt and leaves on the roadside of a wooded area about 300 yards away from the kitchen where Harlow was preparing for the weekend business.

Harlow, who lives in Hingham, called police at about 10:45 a.m. to report blood stains in the kitchen. He was working in the kitchen for 20 minutes before he noticed the few spots on the brick color tiled floor.

Though Harlow had learned of Kemp's disappearance earlier that morning, he first thought the blood stains might have come from meat. But after looking closely the chef found a blood soaked towel underneath the stainless steel pot sink and a pool of blood beside it which had been squeegeed toward a floor drain behind the kitchen door.

Harlow phoned police immediately. "I found enough blood to make me think that something serious had happened," he said.

A trail of blood was left from the service exit of the kitchen down the stairs to where Kemp usually parked his car.

While waiting for police to arrive, Harlow spotted a revolver on the ground below the porch. Harlow recognized the gun as belonging to Kemp who had a permit and often shot at a range in Pembroke.

Two bullet holes were found in the kitchen where it is believed that Kemp was shot. Though Harlow could not see them, police found a bullet hole in the wall and one in the door.

Harlow said he was shocked about Kemp's death. "I've worked with him for ten years. He's a great guy to say the least ... a good guy to work for," said Harlow.

...A Marshfield man is arrested

On Monday, Pennsylvania state police arrested William McDermott, 17, of 99 Winslow Cemetery Road, Marshfield, on a charge of murder.

Police Chief John DeBassio said the young man agreed to waive rendition proceedings. He was apprehended in North Cumberland, outside Harrisburg.

Cohasset Patrolman Brain Cogill and State Police Trooper John Sprague left that day to bring the suspect back.

McDermott was a painter employed at Cohasset Country Club. He had only been working there a matter of about three weeks.

Arraignment was tentatively scheduled for Wednesday (today) in Quincy District Court.

The car of the murdered Robert Kemp was found about a half mile from McDermott's home in Marshfield. Police said blood stained clothing had been found in the McDermott home after a search. The young man had worked at Cohasset Country Club on Friday but had not shown up for work Saturday.

Police expect to go before a grand jury for indictment next week.

Thanksgiving Day football

By Rob Tis

The most noteworthy custom adhered to at Thanksgiving right behind a gigantic turkey dinner is a good high school football game.

There is an amazing history to Thanksgiving football in Cohasset. The Skippers' first real rivalry started in the 1950's when they played Holbrook on Thanksgiving.

In 1957 Hull formed its own high school after breaking away from Hingham. Holbrook, in the meantime, was dropping in size and in talent so Cohasset immediately initiated Hull as its Thanksgiving day opponent. This was one of the biggest events of the year for Cohasset residents. Old time residents remember crowds of three or four thousand people (close to the total population in those days) attending the games.

These were rich years in Cohasset football history. Close to 80 percent of the male student population was going out for the football team.

These fruitful years in Skipper history fielded such living legends as Walter Sweeney, Richard Silvia, and yes, believe it or not, Clark Chatterton, our infamous athletic director, who spent some time on the gridiron.

The football teams were coached by Evie Dorr, undoubtably the most famous and looked up to

Dump costly

The town dump would cost almost as much to close down as to keep open for the next five years.

Costs range from the estimated $238,000 to operate the dump to $175,000 to cap it off.

Capping it off, or course, would leave the town with the problem of finding another dump site.

The special town meeting Dec. 14 will be asked to appropriate money for the dump operation.

Flag donated

Selectmen accepted a flag gift from Mrs. Blanchard of 16 Cedar Lane. The flag had belonged to Rousseau Forby Haynes, a World War I veteran from Lowell, Massachusetts.

No half day

Selectmen took no action on a request to close town hall for a half-day before Thanksgiving. Chairman Henry Ainslie said that this is a request that comes up every year, but he said they do not have the authority to act. It is a policy of the Personnel Board said Ainslie.

Key for Drama Club

Selectmen voted unanimously on last Wednesday night to lend a key for town hall to the President of the Cohasset Drama Club for use during their productions. The move would eliminate the cost of a custodian locking up the hall. The key must be turned in after at the end of each of the three performances.

Cable Advisory Com.

Selectmen tentatively narrowed the field of 13 candidates to seven for the town's cable television advisory committee. The board will interview three applicants at their meeting after our press time.

The board reviewed the applications in public session but did not reveal the candidate's names. Selectmen referred to the applicants by numbers.

Robert Kemp is murdered ...

"He was an easy going guy and all the help really liked him," said Harlow. "He was a real good family man."

While state and local police scoured Kemp's office at the club house, Harlow spoke of the manager's office walls which were covered with photographs of Kemp and celebrities who had appeared at the Music Circus. Harlow said Kemp had season tickets to the Music Circus and often invited famous people and stars down to the club for dinner and golf.

Caddie master Jeff Granatino, of Hingham, said, "Even though he was my boss, he was kind. He didn't boss us around. All the members liked him."

Granatino, who caddied for three years at the club, described Kemp as a hard worker. "He devoted a lot of time to the course," he said and would often stay overnight when tournaments ran late.

Kemp died of multiple bullet wounds. He was pronounced dead by medical examiner Dr. Clifford Ward at 2:10 Saturday afternoon. Dr. Ward said that the hard rains had washed away most of the mud and leaves which covered the victim.

The body was found face up in a ditch off a partially paved road extension of Lambert Lane at about 1 p.m. by a father and son who were looking at the land. Kemp was apparently shot in the kitchen said Police Chief John DeBassio and then placed about 300 yards away from the club house on the ground of a wooded area.

Police Chief John DeBassio would not comment on many details of the apparent murder.

But he did say, "We are assuming that it was a robbery, in terms of what was taken. There are some articles missing."

DeBassio said that Kemp's car was recovered in Marshfield but would not elaborate on when and where. Kemp's wallet is also among the missing, he said.

An autopsy was performed at the Sparrell Funeral Home in Norwell Sunday morning. Chief DeBassio was present to collect evidence during the examination.

Cohasset police received a phone call at about 1:30 a.m. on Saturday from a friend of the Kemp family. Kemp's wife, Donna, had contacted the friend when her husband hadn't returned home from work.

According to Chief DeBassio a cruiser was sent to the club, as was routinely done in regard to such calls. The officer said there were no vehicles in the parking lot and that the building was secure.

Another employee said he thinks he knows who is responsible for the shooting. "From what I've heard, I think it is this kid who used to paint the locker rooms. Mr. Kemp used to drive him around here and there," said the employee.

The club worker said that the painter was about 20 years old. He also said he heard reports that his mother had called to report him missing since Friday night.

According to several sources, the last person to see Kemp before the shooting was a club member who was supposed to pick up a meat order after 5 p.m. on Friday.

Officers involved in the investigation were issued a search warrant from Plymouth District Court.

Officer Brian Coghill and a state trooper were issued a murder arrest warrant on Sunday afternoon from Quincy District Court. Sources say the man charged lives in Marshfield.

Our plans are to present our case to the Norfolk Grand Jury for an indictment, said Chief John DeBassio.

The victim was a resident of Pembroke for the past five years. He was born in Boston and grew up in Weymouth. After graduation from Weymouth High School in 1961, Kemp joined the Air Force.

He was manager of the Cohasset Country Club for 14 years. He was a member of the Weymouth Elks and the New England Chapter of the Club Manager Association.

He leaves his wife Donna (Mortenson) Kemp; two sons, Christopher R. Kemp and Bryan A. Kemp; a daughter, Nicole R. Kemp, all of Pembroke; his mother, Rose Kemp of Pembroke; and his brother, David Kemp of Pawtucket, Rhode Island.

A funeral mass was to be celebrated (Wednesday (today) at St. Thecla's Church in North Pembroke. Interment was in the Blue Hill Cemetery in Braintree.

Meet Banner ... the Mariner pup

"Here, Banner, here, boy, come get your new name!"

And that's it, "Banner," submitted by three people, chosen from 430 entries by vote of staff members who selected from a list of 20 final names, handpicked by publisher/pet owner David Cutler.

As we said we'd do in case of a tie, the three entries of "Banner" were put in a hat. And out came the first place winner: Jonathan Jarzyna of 5 Westview Circle in Hingham. Jonathan wins $40 and our congratulations.

Second prize went to the second drawing of the inspired "Banner" suggestion, Madeline Roy, Old Coach Road in Cohasset. And she's got $25 on the way. And to Beth Donovan of 312 Plain St., Marshfield we send $10, the third place for the third namer of the pup.

Banner, of course, is a reference to a banner headline, one that goes all the way across a page. But take our word for it, there wasn't a stone unturned by readers who came up with every news-related word as an entry for the pup's name.

Receiving honorable mention and subscriptions to the Mariner are those who sent in: "Digger," and "Inky." They are: Cindy Rinehart, Jeff Hottman, Rose Parsons, Kristine Duchaney, Bobby Korszeniewski, the Hanlon Boys (Tim, John and Ken), Dorothea Gallagher, Elaine Gibbons, Scott Reardon, Thomas Palmieri and Kim Smith.

The most often mentioned names were "Scoop," and "Printer."

Choosing a name for such a pleasing pet was not a matter of facile for the staff, some of whom failed to agree with the final selection. There is, in fact, talk of a possible minority report pending from a reporter who favored "Cronkite."

But ... "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet..." And on behalf of "Banner," we extend appreciation for the overwhelming interest in his proper name. He, for those who'll be visiting the Mariner office, is the short one with the unceasing wagging tail and pleasant expression on his face, not readily confused with the balance of the staff.

Selectmen may reduce T.H. fees

Selectmen might change their fee policy for the use of Town Hall.

The $30 per day or night charge has proved to be a hardship for several regular users.

A group of cub scouts, who met weekly at Town Hall last year, went off in search of new quarters once they learned of the new $30 fee.

The Cohasset Drama Club complained it would not be able to afford the production of three plays at Town Hall. Selectmen made an exception and reduced the charge.

Last Wednesday night the board met with members of the Central Committee of the Cohasset Village Fair to discuss a fee reduction for the upcoming Dec.5 Fair.

In addition to custodian charges and the costs of police detail men, the Village Fair Committee would have to pay $90 in fees for the use of Town Hall.

As the Cohasset Village Fair enters its 41st year of existence this is the first year that they would be charged for the use of Town Hall.

In a letter to selectmen, Eleanor Cooney, secretary of the Village Fair Committee, asked for a fee reduction since the Fair is the work of five churches. It involved a wide segment of townspeople.

"It is truly a community effort," she said.

General Chairman Fran Walton of the Village Fair Committee said, "I believe very strongly that a non-profit group should pay less."

Selectman Rocky Laugelle recommended cutting expenses in half for the Village Fair Committee. Selectman Mary Jane McArthur had a more generous idea, "I'd like to give it to you for nothing."

Selectmen have taken the matter under advisement. Besides establishing a new fee for the Village Fair Committee, the board will reconsider their policy for use of town hall.

Selectmen to meet on public drinking

Selectmen and Police Chief John DeBassio met with Greenhouse manager Ronald Wanat last week to discuss the frequent public drinking, disorders and littering of the town parking lot on Friday and Saturday nights.

DeBassio said that since it was a slow business period now, he would try to send cruisers down to the parking lot at closing time. He asked Wanat to call police whenever groups gathered.

DeBassio recommended that the Greenhouse Restaurant temporarily hire a police officer on private detail for Friday and Saturday nights in the parking lot. The cost would be about $90 per weekend.

Wanat said, "I can't assume all these costs. It would just break me." Wanat, who hired a worker to check identifications at the door, said, "We check people before they leave...they are leaving within the law (without drinks) as far as we know."

Wanat said it seems as though the town wants him to assume responsibility for the parking lot at night, while during the day it makes no effort to discourage all-day parkers from taking spaces that could be used by his customers.

"If I'm going to be responsible for the spaces at night then I should get the same spaces during the day," said Wanat.

DeBassio sympathized with Wanat's request and said he will investigate the parking situation.

DeBassio hoped that the board would review the matter before the summer season to see if a police detail might be needed.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said that she had also received complaints about the parking lot and would like to see such a review before summer.

around town

☐Shiela Ponitz of Cohasset recently attended the Fall Open House at Wheelock College in Boston.

"Who Will Care For Tomorrow's Children?" was the theme of the day and the subject of the keynote address by undergraduate dean Marjorie Bakken.

☐Coast Guard Storekeeper 3rd Class Thomas Piepenbrink, son of Frederick and Shirley Piepenbrink of 150 N. Main St., recently participated in three major exercises in the Atlantic Ocean and the Baltic Sea.

He is a crewmember aboard the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Dallas, homeported in Governors Island, N.Y.

The Dallas is a 378-foot long endurance cutter. It carries a crew of 164 and is armed with guns and anti-submarine torpedoes.

A 1979 graduate of Cohasset High School, Piepenbrink joined the Coast Guard in July 1979.

☐Jody Thaxter is now a student at Harvard University in Cambridge studying Old Norse Mythology and Literature. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Blake Thaxter of South Main St., Jody began his studies in September.

☐What started as a joke at the Log and Line turned into a highly successful art show at a private home on South Main St. recently.

It all began when a group of South Shore artists whose work had been rejected by the South Shore Art Center Gallery laughingly remarked, "Let's have our own show." The idea soon caught on and it was decided that the six artists would have their own show in the spirit of those "refuses" of the 19th Century who had their own exhibition along side of the established artists of the Ecole in Paris.

Relaxing to music provided by a cello, violin and flute in the pleasing atmosphere of one of Cohasset's very gracious homes, guests viewed the exhibit which included several portraits, local scenes and still-life paintings in watercolors, oils and pastels.

☐The 1981 Soccer League winners are in Division A, the Diplomats, coached by Alison Haskell and in Division B, the Rowdies, coached by Ray Kasperowicz. In announcing the winners, town recreation director Jack Whorley noted that over 240 children participated in the program.

☐A tradition of several years was once again re-enacted by students in the 5th and 6th grade open space class at the Deer Hill School.

Beginning in October, the students visit Plymouth Plantation where they interview the inhabitants and observe the life style of the early settlers. Their main goal is to discover what it was like to be a Pilgrim in 1620.

Divided into two main groups — the Pilgrims and the Indians — they spend the next weeks investigating everything they can find on their subject. Natiqous, whose name means Maryanne in English, came up from Mashpee to present a slide show. She also brought one of the Indian's winter houses to demonstrate.

According to Larry Schultz, one of the teachers, the children asked some very good questions. And when Natiqous greeted them with the Indian word for "hello," "kawonkamish," they were quite pleased to not only recognize the word but also to be able to answer back. "They really get an amazing amount out of it," he explains.

The children presented their topics in separate areas throughout the room which have been carefully decorated for all of the students at the Deer Hill School and for their parents. Three weetus (teepees) have been assembled from materials found in back of the school.

Considering that the entire room must be completely changed within three days, there were very few problems, reports Mr. Schultz, who also sees the project as an important way for the students to learn to work together.

And on Tuesday, after the final presentation, there was the Thanksgiving feast for the students and their guests for which seven turkeys and all the extra dishes had been prepared by volunteers. It must be an amazing amount of work planning such an event for Mr. Schultz and 5th grade teacher Betty Cisaneros but from the enjoyment and learning experience of everyone involved the results are more than worth it.

Bay State 'wonder-land'

Commentary

By BUCKY YARDUME

Massachusetts is a wonder-ful place in the sense it makes one wonder, beyond its natural assets.

The Bottle Bill is only one example. Not so much that efforts already are under way to sabotage the measure which finally passed over Governor King's second veto, although neither the counterattack nor the veto should be taken lightly. Rather consider the outlandish claims and statements people are asked to swallow whole as fact.

Opponents cry disaster — escalated industry and consumer costs, more unemployment, lack of storage space, increased water use, even ineffective litter reduction. Yet the bottom line is that Maine, Vermont, Michigan and Oregon among others have the regulation which has resulted in less litter, more jobs and business still doing business. Apparently, we're supposed to believe what can be done elsewhere can't 'Make it in Massachusetts.'

But the Bottle Bill is only one case in point.

Massachusetts is No. 1 in the nation car theft, most of the reason why its motor vehicle insurance rates rank higher than its Patriots and are the stiffest around. Yet car theft isn't a felony in the Bay State and for some inexplicable reason isn't so classified although theft of a car at today's prices is grand larceny.

Massachusetts also takes no back seat to any state in taxation. They don't call it Taxachusetts for nothing! Name the tax, we've got it, headed by horrendous property taxes. So Prop. 2½ came up as a half-asset reform with the promise a more comprehensive measure would follow. So far not a whisper of any such followup has been heard. Yet other states somehow manage without the highway robbery in property taxes here.

Massachusetts has no monopoly on crime which is up everywhere. Bay Staters are indignant like their counterparts in other states. So we emasculate police departments but let hoodlums walk away with slaps on the wrist, spring dangerous criminals and call for more prisons but refuse to build them in anyone's community. Talk abo··t Catch 22!

Massachusetts used to be No. 1 educationally. While it isn't any more, Bay Staters will demand quality education. Yet the state is far down the list in aid to education, despite all its stiff levies.

There's no ready compilation of rankings when it comes to corrupt politicians, but Massachusetts has more than its share evident in convictions, let alone those unapprehended.

Many Bay Staters have packed up and departed. Others will follow. On the other hand, some wouldn't think of living anyplace else. New Englanders always have been described as tough, jokingly attributed to their ability to survive the weather.

Obviously they are tough to have withstood worse than the weather so long.

But it's high noon and well past the time they should start getting tough on other scores.

Nothing can be done about the weather. Not so the other ills.

People to thank

Tis the season to be thankful.

We've stopped the presses for a whole day this week to observe the holiday. Still the news streams into our office. News of tragedy, inflation and signs of positive action.

Amidst our rush to bring you the happenings, we want to stop and publicly acknowledge our thanksgiving to our readers, news sources, contributors, both paid and unpaid, and our families who put up with the schedules newspapers impose.

There are some special people who deserve the thanks of the entire community.

Thanks to the Cohasset Dramatic Club for bringing serious and well done productions into this town of 7,000.

Thanks to Richard Hayes, librarian, and the trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library for continuing to try to deal with the budget crunch.

Thanks to the Library friends and volunteers for doing whatever they can.

Thanks to the Cohasset all sports boosters and Clark Chatterton for keeping junior varsity programs as strong as they can be.

Thanks to the teachers who have continued to give extra effort despite the days of Proposition 2½.

Thanks to the parents who volunteer for school organizations, scouting, and youth sports.

Thanks to Arthur Clark for the long hours he's still giving the town.

Thanks to members of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset for opening some six homes to show how Cohasset entertains. (Tickets advance sale only for the Tuesday, Dec. 15 tour.)

Thanks to the workers who make the Cohasset Village Fair an annual success story.

Thanks to the people of the Vedanta Center for providing an interesting and peaceful retreat in the middle of continual development.

Thanks to the people who organized or should we say revitalized the American Field Service program in town.

Thanks to everybody who called a legislator or wrote in demanding passage of the bottle bill.

Thanks to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for fighting the good fight against the forces of a Hull casino.

Thanks to the MBTA for staying out of Cohasset. Next year we hope to thank the legislature for eliminating Cohasset's assessment for the T.

Thanks to everyone who sent in names for the Mariner pup. His new name is Banner.

Thanks to the Cohasset fire department for being there. We hope you're still there come the last few weeks of June.

Thanks to McDonald's for thinking about our town. We'll let you know exactly what we think after we see the plans.

Thanks to South Shore Art Center for supporting art.

Thanks to Mary Lou Slottnik for supporting art.

Thanks to Police Chief John DeBassio for his patience and perseverence.

Thanks to the Cohasset Community Center for providing a great service to the townspeople through the nursery school, classes, workshops and other events.

Thanks to the town officials who volunteer long hours to provide good government to the community. You know who you are.

U. Mass Boston is in trouble

Letters

To the Editor:

Do you know that a South Shore institution of growing value and national prestige is in serious danger? I write as a long-time South Shore resident. I am also a college teacher of many of your college-age constitutents, and they are worried and angry about threats to the continued quality of their university education. I write on their behalf. They attend the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

Do you know that over the past seven or eight years increasing numbers of students have chosen to commute to UMB from Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Hanover, and points south? I would estimate that 20 percent of my students now come from the South Shore. They now choose our campus, not just because of its convenient location and relative cost, but because of its growing reputation as one of the best public urban colleges in the nation.

Our classes — in communications and thinking skills, in math and computer science, in the social sciences, in innovative pre-professional programs — are bulging from early morning to mid-evening. At a time of declining enrollments, our acceptance rate holds firm or increases. The percentage of superior students, freshmen and transfers, grows steadily; my three classes at present include the best students I have taught anywhere in the United States in thirty years.

The threat to our continued progress and achievement comes from a desperate campaign to "save" Boston State College. BSC faculty understandably are carrying on a fight to save their jobs, and I fully sympathize with them; as a senior English professor (and former department chairman) my own job is not threatened whatever happens. The campaign seeks to accomplish what disinterested educational planners have already rejected. It seeks a wholesale and hasty amalgamation of the older and "senior" BSC faculty with ours. Certainly we can benefit from the incorporation of some BSC programs and faculty, and I fully support such incorporation. But a wholesale amalgamation would be wasteful and duplicative.

It would undermine the integrity of our programs and endanger the very future of the excellent junior faculty we have appointed and retained in the past five or six years. In short, Boston State's problems of quality and survival over recent years are not to be solved by dumping them into a new and different setting.

U Mass Boston faculty have not been good "politicians"; we have been too busy building a first-rate university campus. As a result, our "image" in legislative circles comes chiefly from the misrepresentations of those who fear or envy our success as educators in recent years. Our administrative spokesmen have not always expressed the things that matter most to us and to our students.

We are just as dedicated to teaching and to our students as BSC faculty are. We work just as hard. One main difference is that many of us are also known nationally and internationally as active and influential scholars. Another is that we have developed at UMB an innovative and rigorous general education curriculum that is winning wide recognition. As chair of the committee that designed this curriculum, I am always happily available to explain its extraordinary worth.

Do you know how, in fact, we university faculty spend our time? My own current schedule is representative. I work approximately fifty-four hours a week. I teach almost ninety students, from struggling, inarticulate freshmen to graduate students, ranging in age from seventeen to seventy-seven. I know all of my students by name and have conferred individually in my office with a majority of them so far. This semester I will grade and comment on 325 student papers.

I must spend 24 hours a week in class preparation and grading. Five or six hours a week must be spent in research and writing (I have published four books and twenty-five articles), and additional hours must be spent in faculty meetings and planning sessions. I have never worked harder in my life, and it is worth it because of the achievement and promise of our campus, the excellence of our students and programs. Many of my colleagues work even harder.

I hope and pray that you as a legislator will support no campaign to undermine this achievement and this promise. My students, your neighbors, will appreciate your understanding and support.

Thank you for your attention.

The moon, Richard and me

By Paul Steven Stone

"Just do it," I thought. "What have you got to lose?"

There are times when you say what's on your mind, and times when you don't. I could see that he was about to end the interview, and in another moment I would lose my chance. He was already pushing his chair back from the desk.

I heard the words arise as if someone else were speaking.

"I'd like to talk to you about the moon," I was saying. "If you've got the time."

That surprised him, and he said, "The moon?" in a puzzled voice. "I don't see...What about the moon?"

"I'll be brief," I promised."You see, I have this friend Richard who is also looking for a job right now. Don't worry — writing isn't his line of work. He won't be sending you his resume."

"What's this have to do with the moon?" he asked.

"I'm getting to that," I assured him. "If I were to tell you that Richard was pure gold — as a friend, as a human being, as a hard worker — I'd run the risk of understating his case. I won't go into details, except to say that Richard brings love, care and intelligence to whatever he does, to whomever he comes into contact with."

"Sounds like a remarkable fellow," he said with little interest, "but..."

"What's that have to do with the moon?" I cut in "I'm getting to that.

"I thought Richard would breeze through finding a job. After all, you couldn't miss noticing his strengths; they weren't hidden behind an awkward personality or an unpleasant appearance. I expected someone like yourself to see the gold in Richard and grab at it while he had the chance."

"Which didn't happen?"

"Which didn't happen."

"Could you be wrong about your friend?" he asked.

"About his value?"

"Perhaps you've mistaken brass for gold?"

"I don't think so," I said. "I think it's the same thing that happens with the moon."

"Ahh," he sighed, "at last the moon! What is it that happens with the moon?"

"Well, it's an optical illusion of sorts. A full moon appears much larger when it's near the horizon. Have you ever noticed that?"

"I think so. Why is that, do you know?"

"It's a function of the mind. Everything we see is actually an interpretation of the mind. That's true at even the most basic level of visual experience. For example, the optic nerve receives all its visual images upside down. The mind, knowing that the world is rightside up, reverses the image. So everything we see is merely a reduction to an expectation held in the mind."

"And the moon?" he reminded me.

"Well, the mind ordinarily perceives the size of an object in relation to its distance. When the moon hovers near the horizon, the mind unwittingly interprets the size of the moon based on the distance to the horizon — within reasonable limits, of course."

"And when prospective employers view your friend Richard; what do you think they see?"

"Something that doesn't match the image of gold that they're holding in their minds. It's as if you showed them the moon when it was high in the sky and they remembered how large it looked when they saw it skimming the trees. Understandably, they might suspect you were peddling a false moon, one much punier than the moon that had caught their fancy."

There are times when you say what's on your mind, and times when you don't. This was a time when I wanted to speak — but didn't. The conversation took place in my mind, in less time than it took a prospective employer to push back his chair and stand up. I left it for someone else to tell him about the moon and optical illusions.

"Thank you for coming in," he said. He offered me his hand. "I've enjoyed our talk. We'll get back to you when we've reached some decision."

Junior is having module problems

By Claire McDonough

The Dragon and I were visiting with a group of couples from area towns the other evening, when my friend, Flora, pulled a note with a school letterhead out of her purse.

"Do you," it began, "interface with your daughter on a regular basis? Due to inevitable fluctuation and cyclincal stress in Amanda's societal substructure, we feel that this is essential to effective parenting."

Flora looked over her shoulder nervously.

"I didn't want Amanda to know how dumb I am," she confided. "Can anyone here tell me what that means?"

Fauna studied the paper for a minute.

"I think," she ventured, "it means she should have a lining in her jacket every day. The mornings are getting pretty chilly."

Maggie and Jim looked at each other significantly. "Fauna's probably right," Maggie blurted, but our Christopher brought home a letter saying he was having problems modules. Do you think that has something to do with adolescence? He started to shave about a month ago."

Jim frowned.

"No, Maggie," he objected, "It said that he was having greatest difficulty with his literary module. I'll bet it was some project he was supposed to pass in months ago."

Millicent sighed.

"I never though I'd tell this to another human being, but since we're all letting our hair down, I haven't understood a note from school since the one about Jason's individualized program of studies."

"What do you do when you have to answer one?" I asked.' Millicent took a swallow of her Tab — the only thing I have ever seen her drink.

"For a while," she admitted, "I used to wing it. "I'd send the teacher a letter with 'relevant relationship' or 'behavioral objective' in every other line. They ate it up."

"That's wonderful," Gregor interjected. "Do you still do it?"

Millicent gulped some more Tab.

"No. I took it as long as I could, but when the high school sent me a mimeographed sheet to initial headed, 'Instructions for Students Desirous of Achieving a Lavatory Experience," I told Jason to tell the school I have a drinking problem and I never read notes."

She smiled. "I haven't heard from them since."

Her husband looked at her with an expression akin to awe.' "I wish I'd thought of that," he said. "The word must be out that you're unstable. I've been getting notes at work from Diedre's teacher. The latest asked me to 'speak to her behavioral objectives.' Any ideas?"

We all shook our heads.' "Larry's teacher sent me a note," I contributed. "He said that the custodial engineer had objected to Larry's inappropriate interactions in the media center, and asked me to cooperate in the internalizing of his values. I didn't know what it meant, but I figured chicken soup wouldn't hurt. Especially since it said something about clinical supervision."

The Dragon nodded. "Breida brought a note home from school today. It asked us to meet with her teacher to discuss reevaluation of her effective domain. I phoned and said I would, only I'm about due for a sanitarium experience."

Thanking . . .

Thanks to Connie Parker and the other members of the Cohasset Historical Society for keeping the three houses in the Village open to the public in the warm weather months, for bringing invaluable programs to town and for the restoration of Lothrop House.

Thanks to the Powder Puff teams for good sportsmanship and a sense of humor.

Thanks to the Rotary, Social Service League, Council on Aging, and so many others who donate time, ideas and energy to the community.

The moon . . .

"Fine," I said. "Thank you."

It struck me that Richard might well be listening, at that same moment, to someone else expressing with different words a similar air of disinterest. How easy it would be, I thought for Richard and myself to allow some stranger's perceptions to warp our vision of who we were and what we had to offer.

If only man could emulate the moon, I thought; to rise and fall without a single thought for the millions of minds that distort its reality.

"I'll look forward to hearing from you," I politely lied.

"I'm glad you came in," he politely smiled.

If only gold weren't so difficult to recognize.

Artist Linda Wasko talks about Mexico and her work

By Patricia Desmond

Linda Wasko is into giraffes and Mexico for their magic.

She wonders where her art will take her next. She thinks it may take a turn into a combination of abstractions and Mexican symbols.

Linda, like all artists, would like to make her living by painting and creating her photographs.

Of course that's one of the ways she survives. But she works as a teacher of art.

Linda teaches privately, at MIT and at South Shore Art Center in Cohasset. She lives in a rambling house a very long walk from the Sea, with her dog, Ben. She just recently bought the house with her father, who lives out of state. He considers it a possible retirement home.

The house still has the large expanses that are filled with time in place. In the backyard, there's a shed where Linda plans to make a studio for her painting.

"I was painting in the front room at first," she said sipping herb tea. "But I decided I had to get it set up and I use oils. You can't really use oils in a space you live in..."

A Mexican scene

Whole rooms of the house are filled with her unhung canvases. A wall in a room off the kitchen is covered with matted photographs she's still working on.

Her use of photography combines two images, from separate negatives on the same print. No two of her photographs will come out the same, just as no two paintings are the same.

Outside a floor to ceiling slider, it was grey, cold and raining. Inside Linda sipped more hot tea and talked about the wonders of painting in Mexico in mid-winter. She will be teaching a course in intensive photography in two two week sessions in January. The course is at the Instituto Allende in San Miguel.

The place is an art colony where color and warmth are set in a background of the Sierra Madre Mountains.

On the walls of her home, most of what hangs is earlier work. Work from a time when she was fascinated with abstractions. The works are what she calls stain paintings.

"Then I decided I wanted my art to be more realistic. When I was in Mexico it just all seemed to fit together, the color, the images, the lifestyle."

She talks about the special vision each artist has to share.

"If you are an artist, you see the world in a different way, a way other people might miss while they're rushing," she said.

"You see something for what it is. It doesn't have to be labeled. Even a chair can have a life of its own, a character. If you really look at things, experience them."

She said she finds it's easier to sell the sort of art she does in other parts of the country. Galleries show her work in Houston, Washington and other major centers.

"People who buy art here are conservative," she said.

She said she knows of an art buyer in New England who buys up local art here and ships it to the West Coast where it will bring a better price.

But despite the problems in financing her work, she likes living on the South Shore. She has a studio in Cambridge.

"But I like the country. My lifestyle doesn't fit in the city."

And too the studio is not heated.

Linda is one of the artists of 13-81 currently showing at Schnabel Galleries in Hingham.

"I like what one reviewer called it," she said pushing her hair back from her face. "She called it art without sand dunes or seagulls. It's not safe or conservative."

Linda Wasko

She said the people at the South Shore Art Center have been supportive.

"Without the center it would be a total oasis," she said.

Linda is someone who can drift through thoughts about art and the culture any rainy afternoon. She believes in the value of simplicity and childlike spirits.

She keeps thinking about her growth as an artist, wondering what direction will come when she finishes with Mexican scenes and giraffes.

"I want to become more universal. I think everything is going to blend..."

Gourmet tastes at Village Fair

By O. F. Ingram

Tempting taste treats that range from the chicken cordon bleu of a gourmet Village Fair Dinner to colorful gingerbread houses, with a variety of home-cooked delicacies from Cohasset kitchens in between, will once again be on the menu of the Cohasset Village Fair to be held on Saturday, Dec. 5, mostly in and around Cohasset Common.

To give greater scope to the food aspect of the Village Fair this year, the location of a number of the familiar food features has been changed, removing them from the crowded Town Hall. The food and candy tables, for instance, will now be in the vestry adjoining Congregational Church, and the Chowder Bar, ever popular as a luncheon gathering place, will be in Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Church on the rock.

The Village Fair Dinner, which in the recent past had principally served Fair workers, is being moved to the Cohasset High School cafeteria where a larger group can be accommodated. It will be catered by Rene Catering of Scituate, with decorations and special added treats provided by the dinner committee, including a selection of desserts contributed by the new Panagia Greek Orthodox congregation which this year has joined the other four sponsoring Cohasset churches.

Mrs. Peter O'Connor and Mrs. Terry Atherton head the dinner committee, and tickets at $6.75 may be obtained from the ticket coordinator, Mrs. Louis Strong, 389-0939, or from representatives in each of the churches.

Bob Beggan heads the Chowder Bar operations in Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Church. Always busy at lunchtime, the Chowder Bar will be offering steaming bowls of clam chowder and also sandwiches, beverages and simple desserts.

Food features prominently this year in the big raffle that has become a tradition of the Fair. While the prize list is again topped by a donated color television set, ticket buyers will also have a chance at winning dinners for two at Hugo's Lighthouse, and the Red Lion Inn, breakfasts for two at the Log & Line Restaurant, $25 worth of holiday hors d'oeuvres from the Strawberry Parfait, and a luscious, "entirely edible" gingerbread house baked and constructed by Mrs. Carl Hurtig. Other raffle prizes included donated articles from Cohasset Hardware, the Linen Chest, Cookworks, and a Christmas creche given by the Greek Church. Fred Howe heads the raffle ticket sales force.

With the Fair now the joint fund-raising project of five Cohasset churches, a special effort will be made this year to increase the stock of all articles for sale, including food, so that there will be an ample choice throughout the day.

Mrs. Merle Brown heads the ambitious Food Table committee which has coordinators appointed in each of the participating churches to seek out home-cooked specialties of Cohasset's best cooks to go on sale at the Fair. Grace Donahue heads the effort in St. Anthony's Church, Mercie Nichols in the Second Congregational, Gertrude Hooper in St. Stephen's and Ann Andrews in the Greek Orthodox. They are asking for donations of cakes, breads, cookies and other popular holiday comestibles.

In a similar way, Mrs. Colin Studds is soliciting sweets for the Candy Table, also to be in the vestry of the Second Congregational Church and which will be offering a wide variety of sugary items with an appeal to young and old.

Once again Hamilton Tewksbury will be on hand with the great wheels of sharp, succulent country cheeses he brings in from Vermont and upper New York State. With the current fashion of wine and cheese parties, Ham expects an increase in the popularity of his product.

Finally, in the food department, are the three fast-food features: the Snack Bar, where Phil Shockman and staff will be selling hot dogs and soft drinks, the Tacos Bar staffed by teenagers of the Congregational Church under Mrs. James Seddon, and the busy Popcorn Machine again presided over by Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Hobson.

An expanded offering of "Kitchen Crafts" will be offered at the Cohasset Village Fair through the efforts of a committee headed by Ann DuVoisin (left) and Sally Avery. Sally has expanded the popular Apron Table of the past in the course. They have added tea caddies, bun baskets, oven mitts and stable mats to their stock.

Legion Auxiliary offers Figueiredo scholarship

The George H. Mealy American Legion Auxiliary Unit of Cohasset will offer two scholarships instead of one this year to high school seniors.

The Lucy Nardo Scholarship , a $100 scholarship and the Blanche Figueiredo Memorial Scholarship, a $100 scholarship, will be offered.

Mrs. Nardo is a resident of Rockland Street, Hingham. She has supported and worked hard for "God and Country" for many years. The Auxiliary is grateful for her years of service.

Mrs. Figueiredo was a Cohasset resident. She was an inspiration to everyone she touched, young and old. We, the Auxiliary, feel proud that such a lady was one of us.

Thanksgiving Day football . . .

person in Cohasset sports history. Dorr coached from 1949 to 1968. That's when Frank Almeida took over. It was this year that the Skippers left the now defunct Mayshore league and joined the newly formed South Shore league with Hanover, Norwell, Middleboro, Holbrook, Abington, East and West Bridgewater and Marshfield.

This didn't both CHS fans too much, but the league ruled that the Skippers were to play Marshfield on Thanksgiving instead of Hull. This sent a great many townies through the roof.

Many people still feel we should be facing Hull on Thanksgiving.

From 1968 onward Frank Almeida led the Skippers against Marshfield in an uphill battle, which nobody got too excited about. Thanksgiving, in a way, came earlier in those years against Hull.

Finally, in 1972, after Marshfield trounced the Skippers 34-0, the league officials realized that changes had to be made. Marshfield, West Bridgewater and Apponoquet were moved into the Mayflower league leaving the South Shore league like it is today.

Unfortunately, to the protest of many CHS fans when Marshfield left the league, Hull decided that it wished to continue playing Holbrook on Thanksgiving. Hull claimed that it had developed a good rivalry with Holbrook while Cohasset people suspected that Hull enjoyed beating Holbrook (the doormat of the South Shore League) and that they were in fact running away from the real turkey day competition.

So in 1973 the Skippers began playing Duxbury on Thanksgiving. The Skippers lost their first battle with Duxbury on Turkey Day under the guidance of coach Goose Goslin. In 1974 coach Henderson took over and the Skippers lost again. But under coach Henderson's rebuilding program the Skippers won in '75 and '76 and once again in 1977 with Dennis Walsh as head coach. The Skippers lost a heartbreaker in '78 after giving up only one TD.

In 1979 John Leone took over as head coach. The Skippers lost in '79 and '80. There, however, is one thing that is evident in all of Leone's teams, especially this one, that's Pride. The Skippers are capable of the big game as they proved in a big win over Middleboro.

It is also the last game of the year and the last game of the senior's high school careet. This is the senior class that ruled the South Shore league as freshmen. This group of 12 seniors are nowhere near the biggest in the league. They are, however, the toughest and have more pride in their town than any other football team around.

Win, lose, or draw on Turkey Day, the names are Kevin Dooley, Pat Conlan, Bob Donahue, J.T. Price, Jack McNeill, Paul Buckley, Beaver Buckley, Tom Stanford, Rob Whelan, Don Machinnon, and Dave Lahive will live in CHS football history. Along with the juniors and sophomores these seniors are going to give it absolutely everything they have. I hope everyone goes down to Duxbury on Thanksgiving Day to cheer the Skippers on. I know that coach Leone and his group of unyielding seniors will not let you down.

1st Parish concert to benefit DOVE

The First Parish Church's Christmas Concert, to be held on Sunday, Dec. 13 at 4 p.m. for the benefit of DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended), will feature Ralph Vaughan Williams' "Hodie" (This Day).

Under the direction of Margo Euler, the Broad Cove Chorale, the Unicorn Singers, and a children's choir, Kinderchor, will perform this stirring piece which tells the story of the birth of Christ. There will also be selected instrumentalists on organ, piano, bells, and flutes. The program will be interspersed with ten elaborate carol arrangements for all to sing.

The Broad Cove Chorale is a group of sixteen women from the South Shore who, for seven seasons, have been performing throughout the year. They are all experienced singers, many with professional choir and teaching jobs. Founded three seasons ago, the Unicorn Singers consist of twenty-four men and women (eight women sing in both groups) from all over the area as well.

The Kinderchor is a group of 30 vocally gifted and motivated children who study with Euler at the South Shore Conservatory of Music.

Proceeds from the concert will be donated to DOVE in order to help that organization defray the costs of a new shelter which was recently purchased for the Norfolk and surrounding areas. DOVE provides specialized, confidential services to battered women and injured children. The group offers temporary shelter to victims of domestic violence, a 24-hour crisis hot line (471-1234), and court and welfare advocacy.

Tickets, for $2.50 each, or patronage, for $25 or more including two tickets, may be obtained by writing to The First Parish in Cohasset, Christmas Concert, 23 North Main Street, or by phoning the church office, 383-1100, Chartis Langmaid, 383-6433, or Dorothy Booth, 383-0824.

Seating is limited, so purchase your tickets soon and don't miss an afternoon of magnificent music.

Winners announced in C.C.C. poster contest

There were so many excellent entries in the Community Center's poster contest for Thanksgiving that it was very difficult for special judge Joanne Sheppard to choose the winners.

"Each poster was really a work of art," said Joanne, who was especially impressed with the care that many of the children had taken with their work.

The following winners were selected and awarded a gift certificate to the Strawberry Parfait for a sundae: Alyson James, Larissa Huskins, MaryBeth McNamara, Courtney Schultz, Justin Hughes, Allie Redfield, Kerri Anglin, Jacob Powell, Robby Lawrence, Amy Crafts, Lauri Doherty, Dean Volungis and Anthony Bonnano.

The Bigelow history gets to the heart of Cohasset

By David Wadsworth, Curator
Cohasset Historical Society

At Town Meeting, March 5, 1894, the voters of Cohasset established a new organization called the Committee on Town History, to study and collect together material relating to the history of Cohasset.

Old maps, documents, and relics were gathered and stored in the Public Library and Town Hall vaults. By 1896 the Committee decided to embark upon the writing of a comprehensive history of the Town. The Reverend E. Victor Bigelow, Pastor of the Second Congregational Church, volunteered to write the history.

By 1898 the book was ready for printing, and was published in that year under the auspices of the Committee. The original of Bigelow's "Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset" ran to some 561 pages, covering many aspects of Cohasset's history from the beginning to the time of publication, and is the definitive history of the Town. A valuable source book for persons wanting to do research or just to read leisurely about Cohasset, the book is both entertaining and represents painstaking work in gathering together background material relating to the development of the Town and the activities of its people. Bigelow starts at the beginning, with a short description of the Town and its appearance, then moves on to a discussion of the ancient glacial epoch which laid bare our granite ledges and finally piled deposits of clay and gravel over the surface. Reforestation of the landscape following the departure of the glacier is described.

Before Cohasset was first settled by English Colonists, it was inhabited by a small tribe of Indians, and Bigelow describes their stone-age society. During the latter 1600's, Colonists from the parent town of Hingham settled here, founding farms, homesteads, and a thriving fishing industry. The author tells of discovery and settlement in a chapter called "The 'Quonahassit' Pioneers." Boundary disputes between Cohasset settlers and those of Plymouth Colony are described. The first homes were built in Cohasset before 1700, and highways (little more than cart-paths) were established, linking outlying areas. The Reverend Bigelow describes the way of life of these early pioneers; the simple, sparse, subsistence-level toiling of people who worked hard and constantly in their newly found freedom. Cohasset became the second precinct of Hingham in 1717, then built its own school and church. In 1770, it became a separate town, and formed its own government. By this time, rudimentary industry in the form of primitive iron and lumber mills existed. Shipbuilding was also a growing occupation. Cohasset was becoming a fishing village. Its residents were active during the American Revolution, serving at Saratoga, as well as in the New England area. Bigelow's "Narrative History" goes on to describe the separation of Church and State that occurred locally in the 1820's, when Town government and parish church severed their close ties and diversity of religious belief arose.

The Age of Sail during the 19th century saw Cohasset fishermen sailing locally built schooners to Canadian waters to bring back mackerel by the barrelfull. Prosperity accompanied the flowering of maritime industry, and substantial businesses arose around the Harbor and at Cohasset Center. These advancements are covered in the "Narrative History." The engineering feat accomplished in the building of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse is covered in detail. By the time the Committee On Town History was formed in 1894, the schooner fleets were gone from Cohasset, victims of economic hardshilp, and Cohasset was well on its way to becoming a summer resort town for the ultra-rich from Boston. Even as Bigelow was writing, the great Victorian mansions or 'cottages' were being constructed along Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue.

The author describes the development of the town's schools, beginning with the early one-room district school houses, and tells of the development of its public library. By 1898, the date of publication of Bigelow's "Narrative History of Cohasset," the town was becoming a modern community. His book spans the first two centuries of Cohasset's life. The 1898 printing of the History was exhausted many years ago. In 1970, as part of Cohasset's Bicentennial Year activities, the book underwent a limited reprinting. That reprint, too, was soon sold out. In 1980-81, the Cohasset Historial Society undertook a major project to again reprint the book as a memorial volume. The new reprint now is available through the Society. Bigelow's "Narrative History of Cohasset" is an easy to understand, altogether fascinating book, and give a rare glimpse into the history, not only of Cohasset, but also of the early years of coastal New England. It is a must for all who are interested in the historic past of an old New England village which became a resort town, and finally, a suburb.

Highly readable, extensively illustrated, and with maps included, the Bigelow History, makes an ideal Christmas, birthday, or other gift to people of all ages. It is a book to be treasured for a lifetime. You may obtain Bigelow's "Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset" by calling Historical Society President, Mrs. Constance Parker at 383-0773, or the Society's headquarters at the Lothrop House, 383-6930. The cost is $20, plus state tax.

Fire Facts

Thanksgiving is a national holiday in America, celebrated each year on the fourth Thursday in November. A special time set aside to give thanks, to share in a feast with family and friends, and even enjoy a traditional football rivalry. But tragic fires can become a part of this joyous occasion. Here are a few precautions to observe during the Thanksgiving holiday:

- Check to be sure your stove and oven are in good operating condition for the extended cooking period.
- Use care while cooking to be sure that grease does not become overheated and ignite. Also that it does not spill and cause severe burns.
- Be sure that the handles of pans do not extend out from the top of the stove. They could be knocked from the stove by small children, causing scalding.
- Avoid wearing loose fitting and flimsy clothing while at the stove. This type of garment is easily ignited.
- Electrical appliances such as blenders and mixers should be in good repair, so that fires or electrical shock will not result.
- Use care with holiday decorations, keeping them clear of any open flames, such as candles.
- Keep a multi-purpose dry chemical fire extinguisher handy, to be used by a qualified person in the event of a fire.
- If house guests are expected, make them aware of your family escape plan, in case a fire should occur.

Unfortunately fire never takes a holiday. If we observe the fire safety measures above, a healthy and happy Thanksgiving holiday can be had by all.

☐The Berries have only been selling their attractive stenciled items since October, but judging from the success of their home parties and word of mouth advertising, they are well on their way.

From cranberry scoops to belts, clam baskets to hair ribbons, their items are much in demand, says Sue Jackson. The Berries can be reached by calling Sue at 383-1729 or Richelle Saunders at 545-3087.

☐Members of the 60 Plus Club have been very busy lately. At a recent meeting, they heard guest speaker, Commander Tyrone Martin.

Club members were also invited to the Cohasset Dramatic Club's presentation of "Table Manners" and were guests of the Cohasset Community Garden Club's fascinating program on "Landscape Practicality."

Holiday etiquette

By LOIS MARTIN

This is the holiday season. (You heard it here first, remember that). You'll want to be at your best. Who among us would wittingly choose to drift about elegant, sequinned people at cocktail parties with a foot in our mouths.

So this is an etiquette column, with grace guidelines for this gladsome time.

I've chosen to address specifically the things one ought not ask another. A pitfall of light chatter under the mistletoe, around the holly berries, is a cloddish remark. Let it be known that none of us here in the tasteful South Shore of the Commonwealth would b so gauche as to be heedless in small talk.

PATCHES

Here then are avenues to aplomb:

—Don't say, "Have you been sick" People pale when you say that. They think they look pretty good, dressed up and all. If someone is peaked, no need to announce it.

— Avoid saying,"That dress still looks good on you, I loved those 60s styles." Many of us are considering timing new fashions with stuff in the attic. If we're off by a couple of decades, it's none of your concern.

— The weight! Do not, as your tongue grows more glib and you foolishly think you've gained small talk finesse, bring up a person's weight. Saying how nicely someone has filled out, that a woman really "looks strong," that you've always favored full-hipped people, won't excuse the subject.

— "...How much did you pay for that velveteen skirt?"

To begin with, you blew it when you cheapened real velvet by calling it velveteen. But there's good news for people who can't stand it till they hear the price someone paid for something. Women who got a great dress on sale will volunteer information. A bargain is something to be shared.

Men don't give a hoot about saying what they paid for clothing, even if they remember. But let 'em get a good deal on a car and it's all over town, or a neat price on a cord of wood.

— A similar policy should be followed when you'd like to learn what operation a person had. But clues are more subtle. Skip saying, "What'd you go in for..what'd they do to ya!.."

Watch the eyes. If a woman demurely remarks with lowered eyes she just had an operation, you got it, right? If a man says he's carrying that little rubber donut because he prefers it to soft chairs, you're learning more than is any of your business.

And the thing is some people won't be happy till you've heard the whole story right from the night nurse to the anesthetist, to the scar so there's no need to embarrass yourself with personal questions before hand.

— Clearly the most offensive remark in the world: "How far along are you" to someone who has no intention of being with child. Recovering from such an oral error isn't possible. And there's no way to gloss it over by saying you could tell from her eyes like your grandmother always could.

— Age. A topic that has come out of the closet for some and remains slammed in for others. Make a deal with them. Say you'll tell how old you are if they will. I'd steadfastly avoid responding to, "Guess how old I am." And, "You look good for your age," ought to be bypassed.

The curious must suffer with light talk, so many temptations...."How did you manage to find a hairdresser that would do a beehive?"..."I thought you said you had someone who cleaned your house"..."Did I notice your son and that girl sent you a Christmas card from the same address?"... "Wouldn't your father-in-law have been interested at all you've been able to do with the money he had saved and saved...He probably would have loved a hot tub himself." "I'm amazed your taxes are so high for this place."

No, no, no. Stick to your gracious comments and safe subjects. Argue the merits of David Stockman's head for figures and interviews. Talk religion or something not who you saw in the courthouse last week.

People most fondly remembered in January follow the rules set by Thumper's mother in "Bambi," Remember? "If you can't say nothin' nice, don't say nothin' 'tall." Some smart mouths would say that means we're in for a silent season on the South Shore.

Not so. There'll be warm chatter and hearty hugs and many a heartfelt greeting like this one. "Happy Thanksgiving!"

from the kitchen

By JOAN PINKHAM

Lucky is the family whose kitchen is the heart of the home, where the comforting aroma of simmering soups and baking bread fills the room. Many a modern mother is found behind an office desk during the week, but holidays and weekends she is often seen presiding over the stove in a kitchen that is the family gathering place. One young businesswoman we know finds it a refreshing change of pace to try out a new recipe evenings when the last dinner dish has been put away. Bernadette Freedman's recipe yields 12 medium-sized muffins which could be baked and reheated for the holiday weekend breakfast.

2 T shortening
1/4 c. sugar
1 egg
1 c. all-bran
1 c. flour
1/2 tsp. soda
1/4 tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking powder
1 c. sour milk

Cream shortening and sugar. Add egg. Sift flour, soda, baking powder and salt. To creamed mixture add all-bran, then milk alternately with dry ingredients. Stir only until ingredients are just blended. Bake in greased muffin tins in 375 oven for 20 min. Raisins or nuts may be added to batter before baking.

The old refrain carols "over the river and through the woods to Grandmother's house we go" and that venerable New England lady knew all the angles when it came to the old Yankee maxim "make do or do without." Lucky us who can tuck the turkey remains away and serve them days later, becomingly disguised. In grandma's day a large batch of this recipe was made in a sugaring kettle and kept out of doors where it usually froze solid. Then when some was wanted for supper, Grandma took her trusty axe and chopped off a piece large enough for the family to serve this Place the turkey bones with a little meat left on them in a large kettle and cover with water. Cook them until the meat literally falls from the bones. When you are done you should have 3 qts. of stock and 2 c. of meat which you have picked from the bones. Soak 1½ c. of pea beans overnight. Cook them in the morning in the above prepared stock until beans begin to burst their skins. Add meat and thicken with 3/8 c. yellow corn meal which you have moistened in water. Season to taste. Cook 30 to 45 min. Serve in soup plates with common crackers. The flavor is improved by storing in a cold place for 24 hours and even better if the porridge is frozen solid before thawing.

BEAN PORRIDGE

Another old refrain often comes when the family views the recycled turkey for the third or fourth time, but under the guise of this casserole, how could anyone refuse Margaret Ward's

TURKEY AU GRATIN

1/2 lb. sliced mushrooms
6 T butter or margarine
6 T flour
3/4 c. light cream
1 1/2 c. chicken broth
3 c. cooked egg noodles
2 c. cut-up cooked turkey
2 to 3 T sherry
Salt and pepper to taste
3 slices cheddar cheese or swiss, cut in triangles
Tomato wedges
Chopped parsley

Saute mushrooms in butter for 3 min. Stir in flour, then chicken broth, gradually. Cook until thick and stir in cream. Reheat one min. Add next three ingredients. Season and spread in buttered 1 1/2 qt. casserole. Bake at 400 degrees 20 min. or until bubbly. Top with cheese and bake 3 to 5 min. until cheese melts. Garnish with tomato wedges and chopped parsely. Serves six.

What you need to know about buying a bike

By Lee Palmiter

There is no doubt that the Holiday Season is upon us. Errand lists mysteriously appear, and the momentary lull before the holiday hustle and bustle reminds us of the rushing to and fro, celebrations, and reunions yet to come.

If there is a bicyle on your list for a very special someone, you may be unsure of how to go about proper selection. It is important to realize that there is more to look for when selecting a bicyle than a favorite color or price.

Like people, bicyles come in different sizes. One common mistake is to order by wheel size rather than frame size. Adult cycles usually have 26'' or 27'' wheels and are available in a variety of frame sizes. Junior and juvenile cycles have 24'', 20'' or 16'' wheels with a variety of frame sizes. The correct frame size is important for safety and comfort. Considering the wide range of frame sizes available, it is surprising how many people will choose cycles that are too large for the rider.

Often parents will buy a bike for their children that is obviously too big for the rider, thinking that the child will ''grow into it.'' By the time the youngster ''grows into it'' he may have had an accident or lost interest in the cycle because it just did not fit right. Although it is possible to plan ahead when sizing a frame, it is always advisable to seek expert advice on this matter.

The frame size is right when you can adjust the seat so that the rider's leg is straight when the heel is on the pedal (with shoes on). There should be no more than five inches of seat post visible between the cycleframeand the seat, and there should be at least two inches of seat post remaining inside the cycle frame for safety. Another important consideration is to make sure that the rider's crotch does not contact the cycle frame while he is standing upright, straddling the cycle, with both feet firmly on the ground. If there is significant frame contact, sooner or later the rider could be in a painful accident. If you need help making the correct frame selection, seek an expert's assistance. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred, the department or discount toy store salesperson is not the most knowledgeable about bicycles.

Bicycles, like clothing are highly individualized gifts and require special selection. Even if you do not buy from him, for safety's sake, consult an expert whose judgement you can trust when selecting frame size, wheel size, and cycle style. Have no fear of row upon row filled with shiny new bicyles. If the salesman or shop proprietor is an expert, he will pin-point the exact size and style from your description of physical dimensions and age of the rider.

It is also important to consider the type of use expected of the cycle, as well as the individual characteristics of the rider. Is he or she careful with possessions? Are they physically active or sedentary? Will the cycle be used daily or only occasionally? Will the bike be basic teenage transportation, relied upon for the daily paper route? Will it be used for camping trips or family outings?

The most popular styles of cycles today are three, five and ten-speeds, and, of course, the popular BMX (bicycle motocross). Three, five and ten refer to the number of gears the bike has, although there are other differences. The quality ten-speed is lighter than the three-speed, which makes it popular for touring. On the other hand, the ten-speed demands more care and maintenance. The gears of a ten-speed are exposed to dirt and weather, and, because of their action, require adjustment from time to time. In spite of this maintenance consideration, there is no denying the sheer fun of riding a ten-speed, even if you need all its gears only occasionally. Generally, riders younger than ten years cannot fully grasp the principles and operation of the ten-speed derailleur system.

Reliability and riding characteristics vary greatly with quality of equipment and construction from brand to brand. Above all, remember that buying a quality machine does not necessarily mean spending a great deal of money. There are many fully warranteed brand name cycles offered at reasonable prices. Ask about shop warrantees also. Most quality bicycle shops not only assemble their products at no extra charge but also provide a shop warrantee that covers adjustments and break-in, in addition to honoring the manufacturer's warrantee. Bikes, like cars, have a break-in period with required inspection and maintenance.

The same rules apply to the purchase of a BMX bicycle. On the race track or around the block, quality construction and careful selection of the proper parts and accessories will make the difference between a bike that is appreciated and enjoyed and one constantly in need of repair. It is important to realize that a bike designed for racing and rough use will have a much greater life expectancy than a discount house or department store BMX ''look alike.''

The bitterness of poor quality will remain long after the cheap price has been forgotten. When selecting a BMX bike, remember that it will most likely get repeated and severe hard use. Top quality dirt bikes, built to withstand all the rigors of competition and rough play, will cost more than poor quality ''look alikes.'' If all that sounds complicated, remember that BMX bikes come in only one size, with a height adjustment that can accommodate riders (male and female) from 6 to 16.

Most shops will layaway, as well as carefully assemble and tune the cycle at no extra charge. Finally, when shopping for bicycles, remember to start early for the best selection.

This faucet is playing taps.

Water is a most precious resource, yet we use it like it's going out of style. And it is. Plymouth County is in the middle of its worst drought in years. Of the county's 27 communities, 16 are experiencing water shortages and have instituted restrictions.

Saving water is mostly common sense. Think before you turn on the faucet next time. Let's not blow taps on our water future.

This message was brought to you as a public service by this newspaper and the Plymouth County Development Council.

"We'll go for permits when plans are developed, if they're developed," he said.

He was curious about the interest in the building. He pointed out that it will be used as additional office space for Energy Exchange.

Just a year ago townspeople rejected the plan to buy the property for a combined fire station, highway barn and school bus storage facility. The rejection came at the same special town meeting where voters approved initial plans to build a new Beechwood Fire Station.

Voters were told last year the facility would replace both the Beechwood and North Cohasset Fire Stations as well as housing other town vehicles.

The Beechwood Station had just been closed down at the time and the North Cohasset station was still functioning.

The Cohasset Motors building has been vacant for about two years, the company having gone out of business.

In the past few weeks the building has lost the vacant look. The for sale sign is down. Lights can be seen at night. The hedges have even been reshaped.

Energy Exchange will be opening the new office space within the next two weeks, one source said.

Casino issue still kicking, new bill going to the legislature

The casino issue is alive and kicking.

A new bill was put together by the Hull selectmen and filed by Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and Sen. Allan McKinnon with the legislature.

Some people expect the new bill will answer the charges made by opponents of casino gambling.

Meanwhile Carol Oteri of the Citizens Against Casino Gambling said her group is working on expanding its base and coordinating efforts with other similar organizations.

Oteri is not convinced the casino can be regulated successfully.

But the charges that organized crime and political corruption would proliferate — as they have in New Jersey — aren't the prime reason people in Hingham and Cohasset began the effort to stop the gaming in nearby Hull. The first problem seen by residents is one still not addressed in the bill — traffic.

To make ends meet a casino needs a large number of patrons. Those patrons would have to travel to Hull over roads in Hingham and Cohasset. The Hall Estate, which is already owned by MGM Grand, is at a corner of Hull that touches North Cohasset and West Corner in Hingham.

Although Rep. Murray is one of the sponsors of the legislation, she said this week she will work against it.

"I'm still violently opposed to casinos," she said.

She said she has always sponsored any bill requested by her constituents and pointed out all citizens have the right to petition the legislature under the state constitution.

Last year the Hull selectmen decided not to ask Murray to be one of the sponsors of their bill. No one expects that bill has a chance of passage this year.

The new bill, which will be ready for the 1982 legislative season, puts restrictions on municipal officials as well as on casino operators.

The key points are:

— town officials would be barred from working for the casino operator for five years after leaving office. Their relatives would not be restricted.

— casino employes would not be allowed to make contributions in local campaigns.

— within five years of the opening of a casino in Hull and Adams, no other town would be allowed to seek a license, giving the two towns a temporary cartel on the casino business.

— after five years only one casino would be allowed within a 50 mile radius of the first two.

— casino patrons and employes would have to be over 20 years old, answering the charge that the establishment would become a problem for

The space answer to stain prevention

Tom Gilmore moved into town three years ago with some knowledge of space science secrets.

Now he's parlaying that into a national business that is the answer to every homemaker's prayer.

Gilmore is the founder of Pro-tection Inc., a trader in the wonders of stain prevention. He works at the nation-wide sale of franchises of his service from an office located at 411 South Main Street, the Lincoln building.

His son, Tom Gilmore Jr., works in the new company swabbing materials with special soil seal.

His ad agency says:

"The company has rapidly been gaining recognition for its revolutionary fabric sealant. Bearing the same name as the founding organization, "Protection" is a powerful silicone formula that penetrates any form of carpeting, drapery, or wall covering, without altering the original appearance or texture. It protects permanently, and provides years of worry-free use. Soils, spills and stains just wipe away, time after time.

"Pro-tection, applied professionally by an electric spray technique, was developed through extensive research in modern fabric technology. Intense testing has proven the product to be truly astounding in its ability to resist the absorption of staining elements.

"Pro-tection Inc. is now in the process of marketing its fabric sealant nationally. Other cities with Pro-tection offices are Boston, Denver, Detroit, Huntington Beach, Calif., Rochester, N.Y., and

Change of command at Hugo's

Everything is set for the change of ownership of Hugo's Lighthouse.

Walter and Edward Guleserian, who run the Sheraton Commander in Cambridge, are buying the picturesque restaurant on the harbor from the estate of the late John Carzis.

Selectmen last week approved the transfer of the liquor license.

The board's approval puts the Guleserians and a group of investors one step closer in finalizing the sale of the famous seaside restaurant. No one appeared to oppose the transfer.

Charles Humphreys, Cohasset attorney, said the sale should take place soon. "Ideally it would be done in the first week of December," he said.

The Guleserians and 11 others plan to purchase the restaurant. Humphreys said the new owners planned to spruce up the outside and extensively remodel the interior of the restaurant. He said the brothers hoped to improve the operation of Hugo's while continuing to offer a menu with wide public appeal.

The Guleserian brothers have owned and operated the Sheraton Commander Hotel for 20 years. Walter is president of the company and he will own and operate Hugo's.

The restaurant with its huge windows facing out into the harbor has gone through a series of changes since its start.

It was built in 1933 on what was the old Tower wharf property by John Macris who operated the Lobster Claw in Boston. The new restaurant was called Tower Wharf and was a competitor of Kimball's Lobster Shop.

Study committee named as the cable race begins

Cable television companies are interested in bringing their triple trunk cables and mega-channels into this community of 2,000 homes.

Last week selectmen appointed a committee to study the whole matter.

They will find some interest from the companies in a regional system. The configuration companies would expect to work depends on which company becomes the franchise winner.

Some see Scituate and Cohasset as a possibility. Some see Hingham, Cohasset and Norwell. Some new thinking places Cohasset as the center of the system with spinoffs in Norwell and Hull.

The larger cable companies are not expected to apply in town — the larger ones are the names of the applicants for the Boston system, names like Warner and Teleprompter.

The smaller companies end up offering the same proposals, or so it would seem. People in the industry say the difference is that the big companies don't need to be bothered with a small system.

The proposal in a town like Cohasset would undoubtedly include about 50 available channels, which would be from other parts of the country for the most part. There's 24-hour news and special sports and various movie packages.

A basic package is sold at a minimal cost. There are some deals where a pack of 15 or so channels are rented for $6 a month. But those are not the first run movies. Packages including those frills begin about $15 a month, depending on the company.

The cable companies make their money by selling more than basic. The cable system that includes a burglar alarm would be a popular number in a town where there are already hundreds of burglar alarm systems.

Nearby Hingham is looking into the possibility of running a municipal cable system. Such a system is sure to be priced in the multi-millions.

People in the industry say the rush for franchises will slow soon. Norwell, Hingham, Scituate, Hanover and Hull are all in various stages of studying cable.

Norwell has called for applicants with submissions due by sometime in January. It is likely the applicants in Norwell would be the same as the applicants in Cohasset. It is also likely the proposals will be roughly the same.

Seven people in town will be making decisions on

Cohasset's week

Tree donation

Lloyd Prescott of 69 Old Pasture Rd. wants to donate one large spruce tree for Christmas decoration to the town or town merchants.

Selectmen will offer the tree to village merchants this week. In a letter to selectmen, Prescott said that this year's tree is just as large as last year's — if not larger.

Stop sign approved

Selectmen approved a stop sign last week for the intersection of Old Coach Road and Forest Ave. In a letter to selectmen, John Rousseau, Jr. said the intersection is not marked in any reasonable way.

Rousseau said the printed legend on the road, at the edge of the intersection, is essentially worthless because of the uphill approach. Two weeks ago Rousseau's wife and daughter were struck by a telephone truck. No one was seriously injured but the car was demolished.

Special T.M. checkers

Selectmen approved five checkers for the special town meeting. Checkers should report for duty at 7 p.m. at the Cohasset High School auditorium.

Margaret Hernan, 558 Beechwood St.; Mary Brennock, 35 Oak St.; Mary Grassie, 45 Spring St.; Barbara Williams, 48 Stockbridge St.; Frances Marks, 16 Hill St.

Early release day

Thursday, Dec. 10, will be an Early Release Day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

The Junior/Senior High School, 12:20 p.m.; Deer Hill School, 12:45 p.m.; and Joseph Osgood School, 12:55 p.m.

Lunch will be served in all of the schools.

This Early Release Day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee.

The program at the Junior/Senior High School will be devoted to the incorporation of library science programs into the regular classroom curriculum. The release time at the elementary schools will be devoted to parent conferences.

More Margin Court $

Selectmen voted 2-0 to pay an additional $300 for the reconstruction of Margin Court. Executive secretary to selectmen, Athur Clark, said the additional work would be a big improvement.

Dump discussion

The dump will be discussed at the selectmen's meeting at 8:30 tonight (Wednesday) at town hall.

Arthur Clark, executive secretary to the board, said a member of the disposal committee is expected to talk about the situation with the board.

Rocco's plans

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said this week he isn't sure when he will announce his bid for reelection. But he said he hasn't had any thought of not running.

A&P closing

The A&P is closing, probably next week, according to people in the company.

The workers have all been put on notice.

A definite day for the shutdown of the store has not been established although some workers there feel the order will come out any minute.

The shelves are not appreciably thinning out and prices seem average despite a sign on the front that says hundreds of prices reduced. If the prices were reduced, they still have a way to go to seem like a sale.

A gull made a lonely but majestic Thanksgiving flight over Cohasset Harbor last week.

If the town moves on with the licensing process, it is the selectmen who have the final say. They are the only board allowed under state regulations to license a cable company.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said last week her main concern is that the committee did not have someone with a legal background.

The committee members are: Donald McAllister of 60 Aaron River Rd. A resident of town for two years. He is associate manager of media services at Gillette in Boston.

Terrence Farrell of 12 Virginia Lane. A five year resident employed in real estate development and financing business.

David Chittim of 130 Linden Drive. A resident for over nine years, he has worked for New England Telephone in Boston as divisional manager of sales and personnel.

Joseph McCool of 14 Old Pasture Rd. A resident of 11 years, he works in sales at Motorola in Burlington.

Robert O'Hayre of 103 North Main St. A resident for 22 years, he is a retired sales engineer.

Joseph Mercurio of 3 Cedar Acres Lane. A ten year resident, he is an assistant vice president and comptroller.

The two alternates are: W. Chester Browne of 22 Fernway. A resident for 35 to 40 years, he is a retired president of a Boston architectural and engineering firm. He is a former part owner of Channel 5.

David Lahire of 52 Jerusalem Rd. A resident for 15 years, he is a Hingham school teacher.

Town officials awaiting McDonald Plans

Town officials still haven't seen any written plans from the McDonalds people but they do expect whatever goes up in town will be minus the golden arches.

The vacant land next to Cohasset Motors is being considered by the company as a site.

"If they build in town, it will be a nice place," Rocky Laugelle predicted. "They have to go through the planning board and you can believe they will be tough."

He pointed out that the selectmen have little control over the fast food franchise. The only permission needed from selectmen would be for a common victuallers permit.

"It's a tough spot there on 3A, right at the curve," Rocky said. "But we don't even have a say in that. It's a state highway so they decide on access."

teenagers.

Hull selectmen are hopeful the new bill will win passage in the legislature. Rep. Murray was one of the reasons the last bill did not get through. She worked hard to keep the bill out through parliamentary procedure over the fact the bill was late filed, requiring a four-fifths vote for admission.

There is no question this will be admitted.

Flora of the Village Fair

By O. F. Ingram

Busiest of all the committees this week is the large group of wreath makers who have gathered daily in the vestry of the Congregational Church to put finishing touches to what is perhaps the most popular of all sale items at the Fair. Mrs. John Riley and Mrs. Philip Shockman head the wreath committee which has enlisted coordinators in the participating churches as follows: Congregational, Mrs. Carl Tuthill; Catholic, Mrs. George Barunas; Episcopal, Harriet Partridge; Greek, Ann Coutoulis; and Unitarian, Mrs. William Baird.

Matching the wreath and swag offerings in popularity at the Fair, will be the Plant Table, where emphasis will again be on special favorites of the holiday season, especially featuring miniature boxwood trees for table or mantel. Mrs. Peter Goedecke and Mrs. Charles Dean are in charge of assembling, displaying and selling the plants, assisted by a group of workers.

Also new to the Fair this year will be an expansion of the popular Apron Table into one offering a variety of attractive hand-made creations for the kitchen which will be called Kitchen Crafts. In addition to aprons, the table will be selling quilted tea caddies, mitts, bun-baskets, potholders, and hand towels. The colorful items have been crafted by a group headed by Ann DuVoisin, assisted by Heidi Bishop.

The Greek Orthodox Church has taken on responsibility this year for the Boutique, where creative craftspeople have allowed their imaginations and talents full run to produce an assortment of distinctive gift items geared to the holiday season. Mrs. Demosthenes Syrmopoulos and Mrs. John Sedell are co-chairmen of the Boutique committee.

Fred Howe, heading up the raffle operation, and assisted by a group of ticket sellers in each of the churches, has reported some important additions to the already tempting prize list that is capped by a color television set. Joining the other goodies in store for lucky ticket holders are gifts from Colonial Pharmacy, Dependable Cleaners, Charlotte's Hair Stylists, Creations, Cards & Shards, Fleming's Hardware and the Wee Spinnaker. Raffle tickets are being sold by the following representatives in the participating churches: Unitarian, Joanne Chittick; Congregational, Carlton Pratt; Catholic, Patricia Fitzpatrick; Episcopal, Jane Carlson; and Greek, Mike Vallas.

Treasure hunters and bookworms will find their usual opportunities at the Fair, although with one important change in location. The Bargain Bazaar, selling the accumulation of hundreds of treasures from Cohasset closets, attics and basements, has moved to the Unitarian Parish House, where the group headed by Mrs. William Becker and Mrs. Paul Desmond will preside over the sale of second-hand sports goods, toys, appliances, and housewares, all at rock-bottom prices.

Mrs. John Daunt and Mrs. James Hooper will tempt the book-browsers and buyers at the used book table in the vestry of the Congregational Church where there will be the usual extensive offerings of fiction, non-fiction and reference volumes.

All is in readiness for the big event which provides much needed funds for the good works of the Catholic, Congregational, Episcopal, Greek Orthodox and Unitarian churches of the towns and forms what is believed to be a unique ecumenical effort.

The bill is in on the tennis court fight ... $5,600

The special town meeting on Monday, Dec. 14, will be asked to pay $5,600 to the law firm the town hired in its unsuccessful attempt to prevent construction of the tennis court at the end of Gammons Road.

According to Town Accountant William Signorelli the bill is for work done by Burns and Levinson from January to June.

He said it is listed as an unpaid bill "simply because the town did not have the money to pay it."

The advisory committee transfered $4,000 from the reserve account at the close of the fiscal year to pay another bill to Burns and Levinson for other work on the same tennis court case.

"The town is caught in the middle here," Signorelli said. "Once the town or the selectmen authorize legal action they have to pay the bill."

The case involves a question brought by the neighbors, particularly Peter and Marilyn Mazza, over the right of Lowry and Diana Bell to build a tennis court on their land across the street from the house the Mazza's own.

The town is now part of an appeals court action in the state court system. Last summer a judge in Norfolk Superior Court found that the Bells could build the controversial court.

It is possible the appeal may be heard in January. Both the town and the neighbors are appealing the judgment which allowed the court to go up.

Signorelli explained that the unpaid bill of $5,600 has nothing to do with the state court action. The money was spent on research, motions and the like in a federal court suit that the Bells filed to counter the town's action.

The federal suit, a civil rights action, charges that the town had tried to stop the Bells from building their tennis court while allowing other residents to build tennis courts that do not meet the setback the town sought for the Bells.

The federal action will probably involve a trial of several weeks and should the town lose, Cohasset would be required to pay damages to the Bells plus all their legal fees.

There is no estimate of what the town will end up paying on the appeal of the state court finding.

Signorelli said the bill which town meeting will be asked to pay contained a detailed breakdown of the charges. The average charge was $85 an hour but there were charges of $125 an hour included.

success. It was taken over by Hugo Ormo in 1940. Hugo was the operator of Kimball's Lobster Shop and another restaurant on Border Street named Hugo's. He renamed the place Hugo's Lighthouse and offered dancing and entertainment as well as dinner.

The name has been kept by owners since then, success inviting the tradition.

After John Carzis died his estate kept Hugo's Lighthouse and Kimball's By the Sea in operation. Some say little was done on maintenance in the past few years.

Last summer a Cohasset family purchased the motel with the stated intention of improving the conditions there.

According to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Dillon of South Main Street, Kathryn is very excited about her work. She is a graduate of Cohasset High School.

☐Young Johnny Reed has recently discovered a new interest — radio broadcasting. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Reed, had recently invited radio station WATD to broadcast at an Open House from Mr. Beam which they have now purchased. "One Johnny was on the air," he discovered he really like it," his mother explains, "and someone suggested we should let him take over more often."

☐A book of poems done during the poet in residence program at the Deer Hill School is now being put together and an engaging title, "Others Croak Back" has been decided upon. The title was taken from one of the students' poems. It is hoped that the project will be completed before Christmas, says one volunteer.

☐If you are looking for original and unique gifts for the holiday season, don't forget the many different items now available at the South Shore Art Center. Many members have donated their works for the Christmas sale, all of the proceeds from which will benefit the center. Prices range from under 15 on up for unusual and attractive items which are not available anywhere else.

☐Marianne White has been having a great time, lately, and learning a lot, besides, as part of a course she's taking in Marketing Strategy at the University of Massachusetts, Boston.

Marianne was assigned to a team to set up a marketing strategy for "The Freeway," a car which gets between 80 and 100 miles to the gallon and which, she says, just about sells itself.

There are already eight on the road in Massachusetts which she says is the only state which registers The Freeway as an automobile. All other states classify it as a motorcycle. As a part of her course, Marianne has had to establish target markets and appear at trade shows, where she says the response has been fantastic. With Marianne's well known level of enthusiasm and energy, her project is bound to succeed.

Located next to Spensley Chevrolet on Rte. 3A, this delightful shop is owned and operated by Arlene Ferreira. And right next door is her husband, Robert's, Town and Country Carpet Shop which was formerly located at Cushing Plaza for many years.

There are also many different Christmas gift items available and Arlene says, "We will try to feature a little something different." Store hours are from 10:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m., Monday through Saturday and from 1 p.m. until 5 p.m., Sundays.

Historical Society has town history book

Last week an article detailed the days of schooner fleets, Hingham partition, and stone-age Indians as described in the "Narrative History of Cohasset."

The book is available for $20 plus the governor's tax through the Cohasset Historical Society.

This week we want to remind you that the 561 page book is merely Volume I of the town's history. The book by the Rev. E. Victor Bigelow covers the first three hundred years of the town's history.

As David Wadsworth told you last week, the treatise begins with the glacial epoch and moved quickly to the settlement by English colonists. It ends with publication in 1898. Reprints were done by the Historical Society in 1970 and again for the 1981 season.

Volume II of "A Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset" was written by Burtram Pratt and published under the auspices of the committee on town history in 1956.

It will tell you bits of wonderful background.

Like the story of the construction of the high school. Set against a drape of servicemen returning from World War II and the Korean conflict, there was talk of overcrowded schools and outmoded buildings.

Now since the town's newest school is 25 years old, the talk is more than a trifle interesting.

The Joseph Osgood School was built in 1927. The high school was built in 1951. The Deer Hill School was built in 1955.

Pratt's history will tell you what they paid to do the work and what else they considered as an alternative back then. (You can buy the book for $7.50 in the office of E. Gordon Flynt, treasurer-collector. It doesn't seem to be revealing too much of a secret to tell that the high school cost less than $1 million.)

Back when the book came out the police force consisted of a chief, two sergeants, a clerk, six patrolmen and eleven special officers, running on a budget of $50,000 a year.

The police force today is up to an authorized 17, including the chief and other superior officers.

But at the turn of the Century there was no force at all.

The first mention of the word police, spelled out, was in 1893 when Edward Wentworth was paid $370 for work as night police, or constable. Wentworth was also fire chief, deputy sheriff, and a blacksmith, according to Pratt's history.

There's 338 pages more of factual interest in 20th Century events for historians with thoughts of the present.

On dumping ...

To dump the dump, or not to dump the dump, that is the question.

Townspeople have little choice about appropriating one whopping amount of money when the special town meeting convenes Monday, Dec. 14, at the high school.

Some people in town wonder whether a quorum will be willing to make the transaction possible. The hundred or so people who were backing Yvette Rattenbury's reinstatement won't bother to show up, having been warned well ahead of time the article won't go to a vote since the wording is illegal.

So what is there to interest 200 people? Will the thought of purchasing Penn Central's right-of-way bring out a hefty contingent? We doubt it. Will the thought of spending a quarter of a million to keep the dump relatively the same bring out hundreds? Also unlikely.

Are there 200 public spirited people in town who will brave the chilly winds and take time out of their schedule of holiday cheer and Christmas shopping to attend the town meeting?

We heartily recommend it.

We believe, after much thought and late night calls to local experts, that the town has no choice but to appropriate the $238,000 sought by the board of health to bring the dump up to state standards.

That gives the dump five more years.

We would also recommend that the voters make it clear that they expect to have town officials come up with some long range solutions to the big problems starting right away.

This money for the dump is only a temporary solution. What happens five years from now? Well the disposal study committee doesn't have an answer yet.

Now is the time for those good people to do some serious and creative thinking. The landfill on Cedar Street is going to close — albeit five years down the road.

By then the state may not be allowing any landfill operations or they may be prohibitively expensive. Burying our trash is not the way of the future.

We leave them with the question.

... and ticketing

It's time the town drafted provisions for ticketing cars parked wrongfully in spaces marked for the handicapped. It's also time some space, somewhere in the Village, was set aside for such a purpose.

The reason for handicapped spaces is to make life easier for people with disabilities. It seems there are more people confined to wheelchairs these days — or maybe it's just that these people are trying harder to function as independently as possible.

Our society as a whole gives a great deal of lip service to the concept of helping the handicapped. Now this doesn't mean we would favor buying elevators for the high school like they just did in Hingham. We have a consevative streak when it comes to spending large sums of money. But setting aside some of the valued parking space here and there throughout the town seems like something we can and should afford.

There are already spaces reserved for the handicapped at the Stop and Shop, the new Route 3A Emergency Walk-In Medical Center and Johnny

A casino offshore perhaps

To the Editor:

Gov. Edward King recently slapped the people of Massachusetts in the face with hypocrisy; he committed an act which can only be categorized as the ultimate insult to the intelligence of all fair-minded persons.

The Governor, brazenly, sailed away on the S.S. Volendam, complete with gambling, on a campaign fund-raising cruise to nowhere (just as long as it was beyond the 12-mile limit).

To add injury to the insult, Press Secretary Gerry Morris defended the action in a statement which must be classified as imbecilic. "The ship was outside the 12-mile limit," and "it was absolutely legal," quipped Morris to the press.

Is Morris under the impression that Hull is seeking illegal gambling? If he is then someone should bring him up to date. Is the Governor, who is willing to defend this state from, (what he calls), the scourge of gambling with his "dead body" willing to live on the campaign funds derived through gambling?

If the Governor can convention in Atlantic City, and raise campaign funds on a gambling ship, then Hull and Adams should be able to have a small casino within a luxury hotel to provide needed jobs, and brick and mortar taxes; a cause equally worthy and as important as raising campaign funds.

Perhaps the Governor would prefer Hullonians to erect a tall mast in the center of town and sail the S.S. Hull out beyond the 12-mile limit; that magic distance that mysteriously turns the Governor's concept of the evils of casinos into legitimate business.

Sincerely,
Hildred Parent

Success of the powderpuff game

To the Editor:

On Sunday, Nov. 22, the annual Powderpuff Football game took place at the high school. We, the Junior coaches, would like to thank the following people for helping to make this the most exciting game in years. First, thanks to Joe McCullough and Bob Magna for volunteering to referee the game. Next, thanks to the "stick men" who slogged through the mud with the down markers. We also appreciate the excellent support demonstrated by the 100 to 200 people who watched the game. Congratulations also to the Senior girls and their coaches, who showed how to play and win with class.

And, most importantly, the Junior coaches would like to commend the Junior girls for their enthusiasm, their willingness to learn, and their team spirit.

Once again, thanks to all those involved for making this the sporting event of the season.

Next year, Clark and Gino!!

Ah, she's only kidding

By Claire McDonough

There are two drawbacks to writing humor for a newspaper. One is that half of your readership is divided as to whether you are naturally vicious or just have a screw loose and should be locked up for everyone's sake. The other is that everyone else expects you to say something hilarious every time you open your mouth.

I met Fauna at Angelo's last August, and I told her I liked her new hair style.

"What's wrong with it?" she asked.

"Nothing," I assured her. "As a matter of fact, it makes you look a little like Mary Tyler Moore."

"You're a riot." She laughed uneasily and started edging away. I never saw her wear her hair that way again.

My family takes full advantage of the situation.

"Breida," I will say, "do the dishes. Skipper, take out the trash. Larry, water the plants. Then I want you all to clean your rooms."

They begin by nudging each other and giggling, and work up to a stage where they're leaning against each other, tears of helpless laughter coursing down their cheeks.

"Oh," they gasp, "that's wonderful. You could use it in the newspaper."

"Clean our rooms," one will moan, and they will be off again, convulsed by gales of childish mirth.

My neighbors aren't immune, either. I told Carol that we were going to Connecticut for Thanksgiving and asked her to keep an eye on the house while it was empty.

She waited expectantly for a minute or two, then said, "O.K., I give up, What's the punch line?"

Since I couldn't convince her I was serious, I did the next best thing. I left signs all over the house that read, "Claire McDonough lives here," on the theory that any housebreaker who read them would be laughing too hard to carry off his ill-gotten booty. It worked, too. When we came home we found that nothing had been taken, but one of the signs had, "Thanks, I needed a good joke. Your Burglar" written on the bottom in peanut butter.

Sometimes a reputation for low comedy can be a real handicap. Letters to teachers asking to have a child dismissed for a dental appointment or requesting a conference to discuss failing grades tend to get posted, unanswered, on bulletin boards. My friend Flora asks that I not sit near her in church because, "If I look at you I know I'll start laughing."

Last week my problem was brought home dramatically. I ran into a friend I hadn't seen in a long time, and I was delighted.

"How are things?" Fidelia asked, smiling.

"Not too good," I sighed.

After all, I reasoned, self-pity may be better than none, but this is a chance to dump on a friend.

"The Dragon's back is much worse; my house looks like the testing grounds at Yucca Flats; the kids all have the flu, except for Breida who nearly had her appendix removed; my allergies have all flared up, and I haven't done a bit of Christmas shopping."

Fidelia looked at me reproachfully. "I don't think that's very funny," she sniffed.

The getting there...

Super Mom

It was dark when Super Mom came home from work. Dark and cold. And she was hungry.

She came into the house bearing gifts of potato chips, hamburg and ice cream. It was her way of easing her guilt over the lateness of dinner.

She turned the slightly bent key in the door lock and opened into a capsule of chaos.

"We're going bowling now," July announced, her coat slung over her right shoulder.

"But it's dinner time," Super Mom replied, incredulous.

"We're going to eat later," Wren informed her, dressed to go, except for his sneakers. They were no where to be seen.

Beloved tromped down the stairs, took her bag of uncooked offerings and smiled.

"We're going to eat later," he said. "The three boxes of cookies were snack."

"Why can't we go to an art museum instead?" Super Mom wondered. "I could have supper fixed in five minutes."

"No, I promised them," Beloved said.

Gosh was dressed to go and playing electronic super star. Mit was wearing a sweater, a diaper and slippers. Somehow he'd been overlooked in the rush.

Super Mom found pants for him while everyone else whined nervously to hurry up.

"Everyone has to have his coat on and buttoned or zipped," Super Mom called out as she dressed the youngest. "July will you please put the ice cream in the freezer."

"I can't, I'm putting my coat ON," she replied.

"I'll do it," Beloved snarled.

Soon the car was slipping through the frigid night. Beloved drove. Wren and Mit sat in Super Mom's lap. July and Gosh had the back seat to themselves.

The bowling alley was almost empty when they arrived.

"I guess it's closed," Super Mom hoped.

"No, this is just the 6:30 hush," Beloved volunteered.

There were no shoes available in sizes small enough for an almost three-year-old. Beloved took a 9½. Super Mom whispered her size and made it clear she wanted no one to know, so dear reader, we keep the confidence. July took a 6½. Gosh took a 5½ then changed his mind and tried a 5. Wren took the smallest shoes they had, and they swam over his feet.

"I want new shoes, too," Mit said loudly.

"There aren't any in your size," Super Mom replied.

"I want them now!" he repeated.

"I want to go first," Gosh said.

"I want to go first," Wren said.

"I want to go first, black, black, no hosey, back," July sing songed.

"No, I'm first," Mit forgot about his shoes.

"Gosh said it first," Beloved said, with resolution.

"I hoseyed it," July reasoned.

"Okay, you're second, Wren's third," Beloved intoned.

The game was played with skill and daring.

Mit threw a wonderful nine for his string. Most of the balls went all the way down the alley.

Beloved got an 80 something. Super Mom was beaten by two points.

But somehow the bowling wasn't anywhere nearly as interesting as the getting there.

Appleseed's at Cushing Plaza. It seems the 3A end of town is doing what can be done to attract the business of the disabled.

But according to our sources, the town has yet to provide for regulations covering the possible violation of the reserved space.

Actually, we think it would be wonderful to go a step further than providing spaces for people with HP plates, it would seem like a worthwhile task to develop a special system of parking permits for the infirm and elderly. But such a system is probably years away from being a possibility. Time and money being what they are in town government — scarce.

For the present the town should take care to add a few reserved spaces for the legally handicapped and guarantee the availability of the spaces by police powers.

A marriage that works

By Elaine VanNess

There has been much talk recently about lifestyle — mine, yours, theirs.

This type discussion causes one, including myself, who has never consciously thought of lifestyle to begin studying his own.

Today's society is extremely different from the one I grew up in. It appears many things are now "acceptable."

One of my children asked me once, "As long as it doesn't hurt anyone else, what difference does it make?" Good question! But what do some choices do to "you?"

Perhaps my lifestyle wasn't a choice. When I became a young woman it was expected that I would marry, work until children arrived, have children and stay home and be a mother and homemaker. The idea seemed to be — "What more could you want?"

While I still feel being a mother and homemaker carry a tremendous challenge, my lifestyle also changed. For me, as the children grew older, there was a need to prove to myself that I could still be a contributor to the world, outside the home. As they grew older still, I began to realize I needed my work financially for my children's education.

This is when I really began looking at different lifestyles. I saw people living alone, living together without marriage, divorced, living together as homosexuals. There are those who appear to work hard and gain little — those who appear to work little and gain much — those who appear to earn their living from welfare and financial aid.

In trying to straighten all of this out in my mind, I became convinced I am content — most of the time — with my lifestyle.

I am married, have two children, we own our home, we both work hard. Our marriage has lasted close to 22 years. All of those years were not easy. My husband has made sacrifices for me — I have made sacrifices for him. Long before "Women's Lib" became household words, we each did whatever needed to be done. He has babysat, cooked, washed dishes, vacuumed, whatever needed to be done. I have cut grass, painted, wallpapered, taken the car to the mechanic, whatever needed to be done.

Marriage can be beautiful. I think it is imperative that our society returns to teaching our young people the value of marriage and the traditional family life.

I have been told, "You are lucky. Your husband is one in a million." Perhaps, but our good marriage did not just happen. It wasn't luck. Of course there is love. How can any marriage hope to succeed without

Just how grim circumstances are was shown by the facial expressions of Cohasset Police Officer Brian Cogill and State Trooper John Sprague, as they escorted suspect William McDermott, 17, of 99 Winslow Cemetery Rd., Marshfield.

McDermott held without bail

William McDermott, 17, of Marshfield is being held without bail after being charged with the murder of Robert Kemp, manager of the Cohasset Country Club.

McDermott was indicted by a Norfolk County grand jury this week for both murder and armed robbery, according to Cohasset police.

Cohasset police have been working with state police from the district attorney's office on the case.

Kemp's body was found Saturday, Nov. 21, in a wooded area near the golf course. He had been shot eleven times. By the time the body was discovered McDermott, a painter at the club, had disappeared.

The young man was picked up in Pennsylvania where he was staying with his sister. Police say it amounted to a surrender since Pennsylvania state police were called by the family.

Patrolman Brian Cogill and State Trooper John Sprague picked up McDermott in Pennsylvania. He waived rendition proceedings, coming back to the state voluntarily.

The answer to stain prevention ...

Hampton Falls, N.H. Several other cities including Ft. Lauderdale and Toronto are scheduled to open offices soon."

Gilmore speaks with quiet authority in place of the hype.

He says the material was developed about 12 years ago under a federal government program for the aerospace industry. It was developed by one of the major corporations.

"I just happened to find out about it," he said. Gilmore has been in the carpet industry all his life. He now operates a professional cleaning service under the name T.G.A. The service handles large commercial operations. It was in those operations that Gilmore tested the product.

"I've been using it for three years now and I haven't had any complaints."

He works at selling his wares through designers and architects since the cost of Pro-tection is high.

He explains that the way to apply his product is professionally.

"You have to take out any stains that are there first. And to do that you have to know what you're doing," he explained. Locally he works with Philip Smith.

"Other designers know what we're doing," he added.

The service he offers is to seal off fabric from stains. He will have his workers return if there are problems.

He leaves a container of some secret solution for possible problems.

"We show the customer how to blot up a spill and ask them to try that first. Then if that fails they are asked to spread the solution once and blot. If that fails they are to call us and we will treat the stain."

So far his company has only has five calls from people in need of help. He's done office buildings and the Ritz Carlton ballroom.

"That means we are 99 percent effective," he said.

The cost for the treatment?

An average job of a room done for a designer is $400 to $600. A whole house might cost $1,000 to $1,500 to soil-proof.

American Legion seeks oratorical contestants

The American Legion Posts of Norfolk County are looking for area high school students to participate in oratorical contests. Students enrolled in grades 9 to 12 in public, private, parochial, or military schools are encouraged to participate in this national contest that offers $66,000 in cash scholarships at national level, and thousands of dollars more at Post, County, and Department level.

County Oratorical Chairman Theodore Sprissler of Brockton, stated: "We're looking for boys and girls who can think and speak on their feet, or have had prior public speaking or debating experience. The subject of the oration must be on one phase of the Constitution of the United States. It must be original, and must not be less than eight nor more than ten minutes in duration, and must be delivered without notes or prompting."

Chairman Sprissler suggests that students interested in the contest contact an officer of their local American Legion Post, their high school principal, or write to him at 977 Warren Avenue, Brockton, MA 02401 or call 583-1184.

Frost to exhibit at S.S. Conservatory

The December exhibition in the Staircase Gallery at the South Shore Conservatory of Music will feature the color photography of Walter (Jack) Frost. Beginning Friday, Dec. 4, with a reception from 7 to 8 p.m., the exhibit will continue through the month. The Conservatory is located off 19 Fort Hill St. in Hingham. The Gallery is open to the public free of charge Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

A most appropriately named exhibitor for the holiday season, Walter, known as Jack Frost, became interested in photography after graduating from the University of Vermont. Working for a newspaper gave him access to a dark room and speed graphic camera which he utilized and which stirred his interest in photography. Due to the demands of his career in journalism, he had to drop this hobby temporarily and did not take it up again until about eight years ago. Frost is a copy editor in the sports department of the Boston Globe and also writes a camera column for the paper.

Since his interest in photography was revived he has entered many competitions including the International Competition under the Photographic Society of America. He is a four star holder which means he has received more than 320 acceptances in this competition. His photographs have won many awards, the most recent being the Best Color Photograph in the Cape Cod Art Association show this past fall. Frost is a past president of the South Shore Camera Club and a member of the South Shore Art Center Gallery where he also serves on the Gallery Acceptance Jury. He is the co-author of a book, "Lighthouses of Maine: A guide for Photographers and Artists." He also has a small company called, Photographics Plus, which produces note cards and posters with photography and art work by Frost.

After nearly a year of struggling to sell nearly $1 million in property during the real estate industry's highest-ever interest rate period, these "Conway Country" brokers relaxed and studied in Aruba where the company held a week-long business conference to honor their efforts. Attending were Paul and Julie Gailinas (left), Mary Ellen Neagle, Ben Bennett, managing editor of the "Aruba News," Mary Pecce, Debbie Deal, Shifi Jordan and Zoe Bongarzone, all of the Cohasset office of Jack Conway, Realtor.

Murray to attend New York meeting on casino gambling

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (R) of Cohasset, announced this week that the interstate group of legislators formed to prohibit the establishment of any casinos in New England, New York and Pennsylvania, will meet in Albany, New York on Dec. 5.

The L.A.N.C.E. (Legislators Against New Casino Establishments) group formed in recent months has been monitoring the activities of the casino gambling interests, the meeting in Albany will be to coordinate strategies to oppose the casino gambling industry in their states and in the region also to contain the cancer where it is and outlaw it from spreading.

Other mutual problems which affect this section of the country will also be discussed by the legislators.

Mary Jeanette went on to say, "Casino interests, are parlaying the states against each other, proponents have consistently stated that Massachusetts should have casino gambling now because New Hampshire will have it and we will lose out on revenues. This reasoning is used in every state as a scare tactic. Our coalition will disprove this theory because we will be in close contact and cooperation with each other. Each of us will be aware of what is happening in our states and will be forewarned of any push to pit one state against another state," said the 3rd Plymouth State Representative.

While we are winning the battle against the pro-casino interests, the war will surely continue. The prospects for our ultimate success will surely be enhanced by the active involvement of everyone concerned.

"It is my understanding that the casino industry plans to spend many millions to bring the facilities into Massachusetts."

Rep. Murray said, "I would like to extend an invitation to legislators and state officials to join me in combating this insidious type of gambling in Massachusetts."

"I urge all citizens of the Commonwealth who are willing to work to keep casino gambling out of this state to please contact me at the State House."

Mary Jeanette, the leading Massachusetts Legislator against casino gambling will be joined in Albany by Legislators from the New England states plus New York and Pennsylvania.

New England and New York Members of L.A.N.C.E. are: Senator Steven Casey, Chairman of Connecticut's Public Safety Committee, Senator Jerard P. Conley of Maine, Speaker of the House John Tucker of New Hampshire, Senator Frank Padovan, Assemblyman William F. Passannante, Speaker Pro Tem of New York, Senator Frank J. O'Connell of Pennsylvania, Representative Jeffrey J. Teitz of Rhode Island and Representative Theresa Feeley of Vermont.

Mary Jeanette Murray stated, "I appreciate the efforts of all the media and hope that they will continue to support my fight against casino gambling in the Commonwealth."

Village shop talk

By Larry Fone

The Cohasset Village and Harbor Association is presenting the annual Christmas Open House at the historic Lothrop House. The Christmas candlelight party will be Sunday, Dec. 6, 4 to 7 p.m. $5 per person. Wonderful punch will be served — a special rum punch and a wonderful strawberry punch. Grand assortment of savours will be in abundance. Spirits of the bottle will also be served...at a modest cost.

Come enjoy this festive gathering and at the same time contribute to our Lothrop House. Perhaps some of you would like to contribute furnishings (tax deductible). Come to this really nice Cohasset "Do."

Also come meet lots of good folk who are doing their best to preserve and maintain one of Cohasset's fine old homes. If you can't join in the festivities, you might consider providing a year's membership in the Cohasset Historical Society. Call Mrs. Parker, 383-0773, or send a postcard to Mrs. Parker, Parker Avenue, Cohasset, 02025.

But best of all enjoy the elegant party. Wish some more of the young folks would come...under twenty. Some of you parents might encourage this interaction.

For those shoppers who enjoy the quiet Christmas ambience of shopping in Cohasset...the shops are stuffed with fine gifts for almost everyone. I travel shop to shop almost daily, and the variety is endless. Aside from the items in the shops a gift certificate can be a fine gift.

Parking is a problem in a small village area and the harbor too. I hope everyone will park thoughtfully of the other guy.

Sorry to hear "the rumor" our fine A&P might be phased out. Hope it's not true for so many good people work there and have provided just super help in my 15 years living in Cohasset.

I would advise any shopper to try Cohasset Shops first. If you live here support the local merchants. They help support this grand town...and all merchants want to provide what you need!

A small suggestion: So easy to provide a small list of things wanted, especially for kids and some husbands. Don't waste money on unwanted items... a list is so easy. Happy shopping for all. Shop Cohasset....Your hometown!

SCIENCE CENTER FUND DRIVE

As the year ends with the Season for Giving, the South Shore Natural Science Center is asking for contributions for operating and growth expenses. With the many changes in school programming, the Center is planning to reach out to the educational sector by initiating new opportunities for nature education. In its 20th year, the Center continues to carry on Dr. William G. (Cap'n Bill) Vinal's legacy of teaching nature in the best, most inspiring ways. Its goals are to be an interpretive and resource center; to make the best of its open space availability, to stay current in all related areas and have knowledgeable personnel to reinforce these goals and encourage and inspire their students and peers.

The Center has a staff of 10 and more than 70 volunteers. Situated on 27 acres of country land, the interpretive building houses educational and administrative departments, nature gift shop and resource library. It is a non-profit organization wholly dependent on earned income and donated funds.

Open seven days a weeks to the public at no charge, the five trails are pleasant experiences in enjoying nature. Programming starts at the 2½ year level to the interested older adult, with workshops, seminars, daily programs, crafts and special events.

Obituaries

John Fitzpatrick

John J. Fitzpatrick, 72, a retired employee of General Electric Company in Westwood, died Nov. 21 in South Shore Hospital, Weymouth, after a brief illness.

Born in Boston, he had lived in Cohasset for many years. He was a graduate of South Boston High School.

He was a World War II Army veteran and a member of St. Anthony's Holy Name Society.

He had been employed at General Electric for 27 years.

He leaves his wife, Rosalie E. (Morris) Fitzpatrick; two sons, Joseph A. Fitzpatrick of Brockton and John K. Fitzpatrick of Mission Viejo, Calif.; two daughters, Elizabeth B. Fitzpatrick of Cohasset and Katherine Bonanno of North Scituate; three sisters, Barbara Murray of South Boston, Mary Dooley of North Quincy and Margaret Moran of South Chatham; and five grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Nov. 25 in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Ruth Welton

Ruth (Monroe) Welton, 90, a retired executive secretary of the Massachusetts Society of Certified Public Accountants, died Nov. 24 in South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

Born in Revere, she had lived in Norwell before moving to Cohasset 30 years ago.

She had served as treasurer of Community Garden Club and was a member of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

She leaves a niece, Ruth M. Ford of East Bridgewater.

A memorial service was conducted Nov. 28 in St. Stephen's Church. Burial was in Central Cemetery.

Donations in her memory may be made to Massachusetts Society of Certified Public Accountants, 3 Center Plaza, Boston.

Holiday Shoppe at S.S. Art Center

The exciting new Holiday Shoppe at the South Shore Art Center is filled with items made by the Center's own artists and donated by them for the benefit of the Center. The Shoppe will be open through Dec. 23 at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset — it is a rare opportunity to purchase original gifts and at the same time make a donation to the Art Center.

Of special interest to the children as well as adults are the burgundy T-shirts (silk screened by Ron Goodwin) with the Art Center logo. The gift-wrapping paper, of unusual design and color, as well as the birthday cards and Christmas cards were all painted by various artists — among them Virginia Avery, Mary Lizotte and Janet Blagdon. Louise Kalish is showing beautiful hand-created necklaces and Syma has made lovely ceramic pin faces. Ceramic Christmas tree ornaments by Dorie Weintraub are available as well as small, unframed paintings by many artists.

Photographs of children or family members may be done on commission with Peter Anderson or Gail Bryan and will be ready in time for Christmas giving. The Art Center gift certificates for art classes or art works are an annual favorite.

The Shoppe will be open Monday through Friday, noon to 5 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Fire Facts

Firesafety should be as much a part of apartment living as a panoramic view. Some apartment buildings have smoke detectors, but these devices alone do not provide complete protection. Apartment tenants should develop and practice a fire escape plan.

The plan should include a sketch of the apartment showing all windows, doors, stairwells and any other alternate means of escape. The escape route should be clearly marked in red on the sketch.

Fire drills should be held so that each member of the family knows the location of all exit stairways and how to get to them as quickly as possible. Special provisions should be made for the elderly and the very young by assigning another member of the family to help them escape safely.

Here are some additional firesafety tips for apartment dwellers:

*If a fire occurs, DO NOT PANIC. Staying calm will increase chances of survival.

*Remember that smoke rises. It also kills. It is safer to crawl to the door.

*Do not open the door until you have checked to be sure there isn't fire on the other side. Feel the door knob. If it is hot, the fire may be just outside your door.

*Brace your shoulder or foot against the door and open with extreme caution. Should you be confronted with a high concentration of superheated air or smoke, close the door immediately.

*If the hall is passable, use one of your predesignated escape routes.

*Do not waste time gathering personal belongings, but shut the door and take your key.

*Do not use the elevator. It may malfunction due to heat or stall due to a loss of power.

*If the stairwell is safe to enter, walk downward, do not run. Hold onto the wall or handrail to prevent falling.

*If your escape route is blocked, it may be safer to return to your apartment.

*If you must return to your apartment or remain in your apartment, open a window slightly to let smoke escape. Do not break the window, you may need to close it if there is smoke on the outside.

*Do not jump. You may not survive the fall.

*If you must remain in the aprtment, close all vents and air ducts. Wet towels and stuff them around the doors.

The best thing an apartment dweller can do is to practice firesafety at all times. It may mean the difference between surviving and not surviving a fire in your apartment.

Pipe organ and choir recital Dec. 6

The second annual recital of pipe organ and choir is being offered by Cohasset's Greek Orthodox Community at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 6 in the Pope Memorial Church on Jerusalem Road.

The featured soloist will be organ master Thomas Bunting of Marshfield. The program is to include works by classical composers as well as the favorite traditional carols.

The event's coordinator, Mrs. Jeannie Syrmopolis, of Cohasset said: "Last year's concert was so wonderful, people were commenting on it for weeks afterwards. Well, this year's concert is even more special because we have been invited to include it as the 'finale' of the Cohasset Village Fair by The Village Churches, of which we are now considered the fifth.

"I must say that the warm and open acceptance that this community has offered our church is most gratifying. It gives me the feeling that Christian Brotherhood really does exist, especially coming, as this has, at Christmas, which by the way is our first anniversary as a functioning church.

"And we want to give special thanks to Mr. Bunting who has graciously taken a lot of time from his busy schedule to arrange this fine program."

Under Nicholas Palmer, founding director, the orchestra will perform Schubert's Fifth Symphony, Stravinsky's Pulcinella Suite, Chopin's Andante Spianato and Grand Polonaise for Piano and Orchestra, with Donald Kane soloist, and a New England Premiere performance of Rossini's Overture to Othello. The South Shore Chamber Orchestra welcomes Beth Cohen as Assistant Conductor who will be leading the orchestra in a performance of Bach's Brandenberg Concerto #2.

Confessors

Four ministers, in search of the relief of a confessional, took a quiet cruise off the coast to unburden themselves.

"It's my foul language," said the first to his brethren. "I cannot stop swearing."

"I'm too materialistic," said the second. "I'll go to whatever church pays the most. I don't care where, or what the people are like."

"I'm a compulsive gambler," said the third minister. "Every night I sneak off somewhere and secretly gamble. It's terrible."

At the helm, the fourth minister made a sharp turn and gunned the boat toward shore.

"Hey, wait a minute," said the first minister, "where are you going? You haven't given us your confession yet."

"I'm a gossip," said the fourth, "and I can't wait to get ashore!"

Orthodox Church eyes Cohasset fire station

Members of the Greek Orthodox Church are interested in acquiring the North Cohasset fire station for a Sunday School The group is now using the old Nantasket Library for its classes.

There are other people also interested in the building which will not be sold without a new septic system.

The recreation commission has been approached by one resident who would like to see a recreation building in town on the order of the Hingham skating facility.

There's also been talk of the Beechwood Station being turned into a museum. The Historical Society which is working on the restoration of Lothrop House doesn't have the $8,000 it would need to move the building. The building is on the playground at Beechwood and the land would be kept by the town.

Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home sold

Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home was sold recently to Joseph and Mary Polizzotti who plan improvements.

Polizzotti owns and operates Wedgemere Nursing Home in Taunton. He will be the administrator at the 80-bed Cohasset facility.

The last change of ownership was about a year ago when a realty trust bought the home.

The state Department of Public Health instructed the new owner to correct some problems which continue from the previous operation.

By JOAN PINKHAM

Where do you go right about now when you want a pair of hand-made mittens, home-made relish, or a patchwork wreath? To a church fair, of course. On any given Saturday you can usually fill the hours between 10 to four by trooping from grange hall to parish house, even to nursing homes in the area, certain to return with a little bit more of your Christmas shopping done. A novel offering found at the Cohasset Village Fair on this coming Saturday will be tu-tus for budding ballerinas. Forget breakfast and save your appetite for such scrumptious fare as home-made clam chowder, tacos and perhaps a slice of Frannie Walton's favorite recipe which she got from the Sept. '81 issue of BON APPETIT and is called

LIVERY STABLES STRAWBERRY BREAD

2 c. frozen, unsweetened strawberries. [Place in bowl and sprinkle lightly with sugar. Let stand till thawed.]
3 c., plus 2 T all purpose flour
2 c. sugar
1 T cinnamon
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking soda
1 1/4 c. oil
4 eggs, beaten
1 1/4 c. chopped pecans

Pre-heat oven to 350 degrees. Butter and flour two 9 x 5'' loaf tins. Combine flour, sugar, cinnamon, salt and soda. Mix well in large bowl. Blend oil and beaten eggs into sliced strawberries. Add to flour mixture, stirring in pecans, blending until dry ingredients are just moist. Divide batter between two pans. Bake approx. 45-50 min., testing before cooling on a rack for 10 min. before turning out and cooling completely.

Considering the fact that the women who plan these fairs are amateurs and their volunteer help eager but usually untrained, they do well. When all the dollars spent for a plate of chewy brownies, or a crocheted afghan are added up, one or two thousand dollars has been added to their treasury. In spite of the recession, our entrepreneurs were thrilled this year, saying their weekly workshops, months of planning sessions and hours in the kitchen were all worth while. When you consider that they must unload their entire stock in one day, you realize it's a challenge most experienced retailers have never had to face. On Dec. 12 the Hatherly Holiday Fair will be held on Ann Vinal Road and I love their idea of showing ''The Great Muppet Caper'' at 8:30 a.m. and at 1 p.m. in the Scituate school cafeteria. While the children are having their fun, you might find the food table offering this positively ambrosial

TOASTED COCONUT MOUSSE PIE

1 c. heavy cream
3 T sugar
1/2 tsp. vanilla
1 stiff-beaten egg white
1/2 c. shredded coconut, toasted

Whip cream. Add sugar and vanilla. Fold in egg white and coconut. Pour into refrigerator tray and chill until mixture is very thick but not frozen. Pour into graham cracker crust (they're easy to find in your supermarket) and chill thoroughly. Top with fruit such as strawberries.

Not long after the last knitted scarf has been sold, the final Christmas tree ornament paid for and the church supper dishes cleared away, the women who run these bazaars will be meeting to plan again for next year. The First Congregational Church of Marshfield is one of the oldest in the nation and for years, the Ladies Benevolent Society has spent monthly meetings preparing for their Christmas sale. It will be held Saturday from 10 to 4 and this year they will have a novel Tasting Table where you can buy hors d'ouevres to stock your freezer for the holiday. Here is Jane Cole's recipe for

1 pippin roll of cheese
1 stick of margarine
1 c. flour
Dash of salt

Cream ingredients together. Spread large piece of waxed paper on your counter and shape a roll about 1'' in diameter and 8'' long. Wrap and chill in refrigerator, or freeze until ready to bake. When your guests arrive, light oven to 450 degrees and remove chilled roll. Slice into 1/4'' slices and place on ungreased baking sheet. Set your timer for eight minutes and serve piping hot.

This faucet is playing taps.

Water is a most precious resource, yet we use it like it's going out of style. And it is. Plymouth County is in the middle of its worst drought in years. Of the county's 27 communities, 16 are experiencing water shortages and have instituted restrictions.

Saving water is mostly common sense. Think before you turn on the faucet next time. Let's not blow taps on our water future.

A rosy future predicted for Cushing Plaza

Cushing Plaza has a rosy future despite the departure of the A&P.

Another grocery store, complete with deli, bakery and gourmet foods, will be moving into the shopping center sometime next year.

Joe Quinn works tucked away in an office above the Rockland Trust. His job is to bring more and higher quality development into the shopping center on Route 3A.

He works for Zaven Dadekian, who bought the complex not a year ago from Cushing Associates. Since then Johnny Appleseed with its classic line of clothes and gifts has opened at one end of the complex and the 3A Medical Walk-In Center moved to the other end of the row.

When you look out Quinn's office you notice the parking lot needs repaving. He says that will be done once some of the other major changes have been made.

He hasn't picked the new tenant for the A&P building yet. There are about a half dozen offers, he explains. Some of the offers come from other than food stores.

But he will say for certain, the new tenant will be a food store and it will not be the discount variety.

"We are trying to find something more suitable for the community," Quinn said.

Outside there are Christmas carols blaring across the lot. The sounds emanate from the roof of Radio Shack.

The other new tenant in the first year of the new ownership is Cohasset Travel.

"We've been selective in choosing what would go in," he said.

"We want what we have here to benefit the community as well as benefitting the shopping center."

The idea is to add services not otherwise found in town. With the A&P leaving, Quinn said he sees the plaza as having a chance to be upgraded.

The A&P was one of the first tenants in the plaza. Back in 1958 or '59 the food chain moved in under a lease from the developer, Claude Rice. The plaza developed store by store, accounting for the mixed size range of the connected structures.

About 10 or so years later the property was sold to the Mugar Group. Late in 1978 it was sold to Cushing Associates. Dadekian, who lives in New Jersey, has other commercial properties in New York, New Jersey and Georgia, according to Quinn. A short time after taking over the plaza, he acquired the 760 Professional Building, across Route 3A, from 760 Inc.

Quinn said he has already begun talking with local officials about the changes in the shopping center. One possible change might be expansion of the buildings. Another change, which will happen after the A&P finishes its going out of business sale, will be a new sign for the plaza.

The town's sign bylaw is based strictly on the Options outlined for school building

There are three alternatives being mapped out for the school system in the year 1984.

They include:

—leaving the three school buildings with the same grade configuration, the status quo as it were.

—closing the Osgood School and moving the Kindergarten through Grade 3 to the Deer Hill School.

—keeping Osgood as K to 3, creating a Grade 4 to 7 complex at Deer Hill and using the high school for Grades 8 through 12, allowing the space to be used for more than just classrooms.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said this week those options are not the only possibilities. They are the three he's thinking about now, although he added he doesn't feel favorable toward the shut down of Osgood.

"But the status quo isn't the most efficient use of space in a system of declining enrollment," he said.

The three options will be included in a planning document he is working on with the idea of presenting the options to the school committee by next summer.

"This is wholly based on the projections I shared with the school committee recently," Crowell said.

An Announcement

The Cohasset Mariner this week is being mailed free to all Cohasset residents as part of our subscription drive. The purpose of the drive is, of course, to sell subscriptions and, as a by product, to raise money for the Cohasset Community Center.

During the drive, subscriptions will sell for $7 a year, with $3 of the $7 going to the Community Center.

Parent raps school poetry program

Not all the children at the Deer Hill School learned as much about poetry as they expected during the stay of the poet-in-residence.

Peter Lelecas, a parent, appeared before the school committee to explain his anger at the exclusion of large numbers of interested children.

There were 36 children at Deer Hill who created poems under the tutelage of Lewis Hyde, the poet. Other students had him attend their regular class once or twice.

Lelacas began the discussion asking why his letter to the school committee hadn't been answered. He wrote the committee at the beginning of last month.

Irene Brown, committee chairman, said she received the letter and did not pass it on to other members by mistake.

Eugene Crowell, school superintendent, said he had replied to a similar letter. At least one school committee member hadn't seen either letter.

The main complaint was that public money and money raised by the school children paid at least part of the cost of the program. Yet only a few children were included in the intensive program.

Lelacas said the way the program was presented was not the way it was administered. When the children were selling tickets to the car wash at Deer Hill, they were not told the program would be limited, the parent said.

The school committee was asked to restructure the program before it goes to Osgood in the spring. Another poet, paid under the same grant from the Artist Foundation, will spend a month at Osgood.

"Instead of having some of the poetry rub off on my kid, he's become disillusioned," the parent said.

He pointed out that there was one workshop open

Village Fair succeeds

The weather conspired to dampen the spirits of the Village Fair-goers, but still the weekend long event was a success.

The hundreds of people who shopped the Village Friday evening in the midst of carols and twinkling white lit decorations were enchanted with the Christmas Stroller.

One young lady of nine said the event should be held in the summertime too.

"The only thing wrong is the weather," she smiled.

Indeed people planning the events for Sunday had more to complain about than a bit of a chill.

All reports from the five participating churches indicate the Saturday fair was a gigantic success.

The wreaths put together by volunteers from the Congregational Church should be available for viewing on almost every house in town, from the speed of the sales.

The boutique handled by the newest participant in the fair, the Greek Orthodox Church, began the day cluttered with Christmas crafts. By later afternoon the selections were more limited, as, of course, they should be. Ecumenical fair with a mix of people from the Catholic, Unitarian, Episcopal, Congregational and Greek Orthodox churches is the only effort of its kind in the region.

Observers at smaller fairs in Hingham and Scituate reported the events there seemed to suffer from comparison with Cohasset's gala and mammoth fair.

Cohasset's week ...

Wheelchair missing

The housing authority used to offer its residents free use of a wheelchair when necessary.

That is until someone made off with the expensive piece of apparatus.

The officials of the housing authority are still hoping that someone borrowed it and just forgot to return it. They would like to know where it is.

The chair was kept in the community room at 60 Elm Street, which is the housing for the elederly. It was noticed about a month ago that the chair wasn't there but for sometime officials hoped it would be brought back.

While there is no pressing use for the chair right now, the housing authority would like it back before it is needed.

Nay to fund raising

The March of Dimes will not be allowed to distribute its fund-raising dime cards in the school system.

Not one member of the school committee spoke in favor of beginning the prohibited practice of using the school children for charitable solicitation.

Officials say the practice has not even come up before school committee for some years now.

No vote was taken on the already established practice.

KoKo Island opens

KoKo Island restaurant opened Friday in the former Ground Round on Route 3A.

The entrance has been moved to the back, where there is plenty of parking. The interior has been completely renovated bringing the look of a Polynesian restaurant to the structure.

The restaurant is open weekdays from 11:30 a.m. to 12:45 a.m. Friday and Saturday the place is open until 1:45 a.m. Sunday and holidays the restaurant is open from noon to 12:45 a.m.

Take out orders are available.

The least expensive item on the menu is chicken soup for $1.05. The most expensive item is the Pu-Pu Platter for two at $10.50. There are other combination plates that can be had with less expensive appetizers.

Dishes with lobster and shrimp seem to run the highest with shrimp lobster kew, a recipe that includes oyster sauce, vegetables and chunks of the lobster meat and shrimps for $10.25.

The restaurant accepts Master Charge and VISA, according to manager Billy Lee. He said American Express will be accepted soon.

School drug policy

The policy on drugs and alcohol is still being discussed by groups in town. This week the form will go to the students, according to School Supt. Eugene Crowell.

The revised ideas will go before the school committee for discussion in January. Adoption may happen as early as February.

Auditorium renovations

An architect — Knight, Bagge and Anderson — has been voted a contract of not more than $2,000 to come up with preliminary plans for renovations of the auditorium in Cohasset High School.

The school facilities building committee is being asked to work on the project which is expected to cost about $40,000 all together. Town meeting will be asked for the funds next spring.

A&P closing sale

The A&P is selling its goods at 20 percent off, trying to clear the shelves as quickly as possible to close down operations.

Some of the workers have already received new assignments at other stores. But as one worker said, "Duxbury is a long way off and western Massachussets is out of the question."

The parttime workers will be out of luck.

No date has been officially set for the closing, according to A&P officials.

The frozen foods were selling at 50 percent off last week but all that was left in the frozen food freezer was a few boxes of frozen okra and other even less popular vegetables.

School repair work

One priority of the school administration for maintenance work will be held up for the time. Both the high school and Osgood need some repointing done, according to Eugene Crowell, school supt.

He said the windows are Deer Hill need aluminum windows to cut energy costs and the decay of the steel windows on the building.

The school building facilities committee will be asked to help with the project.

School budget increase

Next year's school budget may go up $72,000, provided the state agrees that property in town is worth a total of more than $230 million.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said under Proposition 2½ that would be the best the school system could expect.

If the state certifies the valuation at $230 million or more, the overall budget could increase by $140,000 and the school department's portion of that would be 55.3 percent.

The draft of the school budget will be given to school committee members by Christmas, Crowell said.

He added that there is not room for building and grounds maintenance within the budget. He suggested capital items be placed in separate warrant requests.

Parent raps poetry program ...

to the students in general. It was held on a Saturday when soccer competition was underway and the Boy Scouts had a trip to Old Ironsides. Still 30 youngsters attended.

The workshop should have been on a regular class day, Lelacas said. It should have been made a part of the curriculum for all the students.

Crowell said the choice was either to accept the program on the terms of the foundation, which paid 66 percent of the cost, or scrap it.

He pointed out that all the teachers at Deer Hill benefitted from workshops on poetry with Hyde. And all the students benefitted from the readings the poet brought to the various classes.

"Phase 3 of the program bothered us but the philosphical bent was that of the Artist Foundation. They believe in taking core groups based on high interest."

Once the interested students applied they were selected for the groups by lottery. There were three groups of 12 in the project.

He said the special Saturday workshop was planned after several parents complained about the fact their children would be left out of the groupings.

Crowell said he too believes public education should be for everyone. He suggested Lelecas contact the board of directors of the foundation to express his disapproval.

School Committee member Diana Kornet said one of her children was included in the core groups, another was not. She said she was impressed at how involved the students became.

Kenneth Eckberg, Deer Hill principal, said he too was concerned about the fairness issue.

"But given the small groups, the lottery was the way that was the fairest."

Options for school buildings ...

Those projections showed detail of a continuing pattern of declining enrollment. By 1984 the numbers would have dwindled to a point that one of the town's three schools could be closed — should the school committee and townspeople choose to go that way.

Crowell pointed out that the junior/senior high school is a building that will be part of the school system for the next 50 years. Deer Hill is also a relatively new school, having been built back in the 50's. The Osgood School was built in 1927.

"The school committee will have some time to wrestle with the issues," Crowell said.

He pointed out it might be unwise for the town to give up a school building in case the birth rate changed or development were to increase.

"It would be a shame if the town closed a school and then faced the need of having to build a new school a few years down the line."

He said he can't predict the future but educationally the best alternative would probably be to keep the grade structure as it is.

"But there are other things to consider," he said.

Planners need more information on addition

Norfolk Conveyor wants to build a 5,000 square foot addition but information on the plan is not easy to obtain.

The plan was heard by the town planners last week but continued to the Wednesday, Dec. 16, meeting. More information is being sought by the planning board.

Officials of the company were unavailable early this week to provide greater detail.

The addition would be a paint shop for the large conveyors manufactured at the factory.

Cohasset's week ...

Wheelchair missing

The housing authority used to offer its residents free use of a wheelchair when necessary.

That is until someone made off with the expensive piece of apparatus.

The officials of the housing authority are still hoping that someone borrowed it and just forgot to return it. They would like to know where it is.

The chair was kept in the community room at 60 Elm Street, which is the housing for the elederly. It was noticed about a month ago that the chair wasn't there but for sometime officials hoped it would be brought back.

While there is no pressing use for the chair right now, the housing authority would like it back before it is needed.

Nay to fund raising

The March of Dimes will not be allowed to distribute its fund-raising dime cards in the school system.

Not one member of the school committee spoke in favor of beginning the prohibited practice of using the school children for charitable solicitation.

Officials say the practice has not even come up before school committee for some years now.

No vote was taken on the already established practice.

KoKo Island opens

KoKo Island restaurant opened Friday in the former Ground Round on Route 3A.

The entrance has been moved to the back, where there is plenty of parking. The interior has been completely renovated bringing the look of a Polynesian restaurant to the structure.

The restaurant is open weekdays from 11:30 a.m. to 12:45 a.m. Friday and Saturday the place is open until 1:45 a.m. Sunday and holidays the restaurant is open from noon to 12:45 a.m.

Take out orders are available.

The least expensive item on the menu is chicken soup for $1.05. The most expensive item is the Pu-Pu Platter for two at $10.50. There are other combination plates that can be had with less expensive appetizers.

Dishes with lobster and shrimp seem to run the highest with shrimp lobster kew, a recipe that includes oyster sauce, vegetables and chunks of the lobster meat and shrimps for $10.25.

The restaurant accepts Master Charge and VISA, according to manager Billy Lee. He said American Express will be accepted soon.

School drug policy

The policy on drugs and alcohol is still being discussed by groups in town. This week the form will go to the students, according to School Supt. Eugene Crowell.

The revised ideas will go before the school committee for discussion in January. Adoption may happen as early as February.

Auditorium renovations

An architect — Knight, Bagge and Anderson — has been voted a contract of not more than $2,000 to come up with preliminary plans for renovations of the auditorium in Cohasset High School.

The school facilities building committee is being asked to work on the project which is expected to cost about $40,000 all together. Town meeting will be asked for the funds next spring.

A&P closing sale

The A&P is selling its goods at 20 percent off, trying to clear the shelves as quickly as possible to close down operations.

Some of the workers have already received new assignments at other stores. But as one worker said, "Duxbury is a long way off and western Massachussets is out of the question."

The parttime workers will be out of luck.

No date has been officially set for the closing, according to A&P officials.

The frozen foods were selling at 50 percent off last week but all that was left in the frozen food freezer was a few boxes of frozen okra and other even less popular vegetables.

School repair work

One priority of the school administration for maintenance work will be held up for the time. Both the high school and Osgood need some repointing done, according to Eugene Crowell, school supt.

He said the windows are Deer Hill need aluminum windows to cut energy costs and the decay of the steel windows on the building.

The school building facilities committee will be asked to help with the project.

School budget increase

Next year's school budget may go up $72,000, provided the state agrees that property in town is worth a total of more than $230 million.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said under Proposition 2½ that would be the best the school system could expect.

If the state certifies the valuation at $230 million or more, the overall budget could increase by $140,000 and the school department's portion of that would be 55.3 percent.

The draft of the school budget will be given to school committee members by Christmas, Crowell said.

He added that there is not room for building and grounds maintenance within the budget. He suggested capital items be placed in separate warrant requests.

Parent raps poetry program ...

to the students in general. It was held on a Saturday when soccer competition was underway and the Boy Scouts had a trip to Old Ironsides. Still 30 youngsters attended.

The workshop should have been on a regular class day, Lelacas said. It should have been made a part of the curriculum for all the students.

Crowell said the choice was either to accept the program on the terms of the foundation, which paid 66 percent of the cost, or scrap it.

He pointed out that all the teachers at Deer Hill benefitted from workshops on poetry with Hyde. And all the students benefitted from the readings the poet brought to the various classes.

"Phase 3 of the program bothered us but the philosphical bent was that of the Artist Foundation. They believe in taking core groups based on high interest."

Once the interested students applied they were selected for the groups by lottery. There were three groups of 12 in the project.

He said the special Saturday workshop was planned after several parents complained about the fact their children would be left out of the groupings.

Crowell said he too believes public education should be for everyone. He suggested Lelecas contact the board of directors of the foundation to express his disapproval.

School Committee member Diana Kornet said one of her children was included in the core groups, another was not. She said she was impressed at how involved the students became.

Kenneth Eckberg, Deer Hill principal, said he too was concerned about the fairness issue.

"But given the small groups, the lottery was the way that was the fairest."

Options for school buildings ...

Those projections showed detail of a continuing pattern of declining enrollment. By 1984 the numbers would have dwindled to a point that one of the town's three schools could be closed — should the school committee and townspeople choose to go that way.

Crowell pointed out that the junior/senior high school is a building that will be part of the school system for the next 50 years. Deer Hill is also a relatively new school, having been built back in the 50's. The Osgood School was built in 1927.

"The school committee will have some time to wrestle with the issues," Crowell said.

He pointed out it might be unwise for the town to give up a school building in case the birth rate changed or development were to increase.

"It would be a shame if the town closed a school and then faced the need of having to build a new school a few years down the line."

He said he can't predict the future but educationally the best alternative would probably be to keep the grade structure as it is.

"But there are other things to consider," he said.

Planners need more information on addition

Norfolk Conveyor wants to build a 5,000 square foot addition but information on the plan is not easy to obtain.

The plan was heard by the town planners last week but continued to the Wednesday, Dec. 16, meeting. More information is being sought by the planning board.

Officials of the company were unavailable early this week to provide greater detail.

The addition would be a paint shop for the large conveyors manufactured at the factory.

Wampatuck access editorial draws sharp criticism

Several members of the Wompatuck State Park Advisory Council charge that the editorial in the November 4 issue of the Norwell Mariner was irresponsible.

The editorial by Bucky Yardume, editor of that paper, was later run as a commentary in the Hingham Mariner. The editorial was wildy opposed to building the second entrance to the park through the Norwell wellfields.

Richard Cook, who is one of the town planners as well as a member of the advisory council, described his attitude toward the Mariner in loud, angry words.

The board did not conduct any business, for lack of a quorum. The next meeting is set for 7:30 p.m., Jan. 21, at the visitor center of the park.

After Yardume's editorial the Norwell selectmen voted against participation in a study which would have been done by the Metropolitan Area Planning Council on a second access near the wellfields.

In the meantime the Hingham selectmen want the state Department of Environmental Management, owners of the park, to do the study.

Gilbert Bliss, DEM's director, told members of the advisory council that his agency's budget doesn't have enough money right now.

But local legislators will be asked to put it in the capital outlay budget, Bliss said. A copy of the letter from the Hingham selectmen to DEM was passed about at the council's meeting.

Attached to the letter, which requested DEM do the study the MAPC was to do was an unsigned note stating: "Bob, I did pass on your suggestion that this letter not specifically mention the wellfields but this is what I was asked to write."

The letter signed by all three Hingham selectmen specifies a study of a second access by the wellfields.

Bliss said it will cost a fair amount of money for his agency to do a full environmental impact study of the plan. He guessed it would take at least six months to get the money if all goes smoothly.

The best estimate he had was "many thousands." Discussion of the funds for the study will be on the agenda of the next council meeting.

Norwell's refusal to approve the concept will not eliminate the possibility of the study.

Cook said the Hingham people were accused of being insensitive to the problems of the Norwell water supply.

"They forget their watershed is the Hingham watershed. It's our ground water as well," he said.

He said Hingham was being accused in the Mariner article of pushing the second access on the town of Norwell.

"Hingham is neither a no growth nor a pro growth community," he said. "We try to do our planning carefully. The development cited had a right under zoning to be built...Hingham happens to be a community pressured to develop. We're a very desirable community to live in. It won't be too long before Norwell and Cohasset have the pressures put on them."

He said the editorial was "inflamatory" and did "nothing but make a bad situation worse."

The Norwell representative quoted at length the same week in the Mariner was not present at the meeting. Arlene Lucid, the other Norwell member, said nothing during the discussion.

At least one member suggested Miles Cassidy had not meant what he said at the time.

John Richardson, another Hingham member, called the article irresponsible. He suggested Cook write a letter to the editor.

Cook said he doesn't have time.

Richardson agreed with cook that the statements are inflamatory. He also categorized some statements by the Hingham selectmen as childish.

"We're all trying to work for a positive end here," Bliss said.

Snow brought town to halt

By mid-Monday afternoon there were children carrying sleds through the town and electricity was still off here and there.

The unseasonable snow brought the town to a halt over the weekend.

School was cancelled much sooner than is habit in this town — but that didn't keep the school children from tying up the telephone lines at the police station.

"It's a good thing there were no major storm emergencies," one police officer commented Sunday on the phone situation. "If someone needed an officer in a hurry, it would have been too bad."

The storm with its wet heavy snow turned the power lines into frozen problems. Power was out in the area of Sohier Street, Fair Oaks and Old Pasture roads for much of Sunday afternoon and evening.

Sam Reed of Eastern Edison said there was no separate log kept for Cohasset's problems with the storm. Trouble in Cohasset, Scituate and Norwell is grouped together. By Monday afternoon there were about 100 customers in the three communities left without power.

"I would guess at any one time we had about 800 out," Reed said.

The type of storm caused the problems for the light company. Reed said if the problem had been confined to one location, it would have been far simpler.

"We would restore service to a house and then it would go out again," Reed said.

The fire department coped with live wires reported as down but had no influx of problems by Sunday evening.

Chief Charles Piepenbrink said his men had no difficulty responding to the trouble calls.

Police hope that their telephone lines won't be flooded with calls from school children when the next storm hits.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell said he made the decision to call off school at 6 p.m. Sunday, based on the expected problems with early morning ice.

"I was worried about the walkers," he said.

His usual procedure is to wait until morning to make a decision on school closings.

The decision was broadcast on television and radio stations including WHDH.

He said he got a call from a young school girl at his home Sunday evening.

"I just chuckled over it," Crowell said.

But he added that the students are expected to wait until the decision is released over radio or television.

☐Steve Bartow of Cohasset is the 1981 recipient of the Joseph Coburn Smith Best Overall Performance Award of Colby College.

The Smith Award is named in honor of Joseph Coburn Smith, Class of 1924, and is awarded to the class agent whose class shows the best overall performance based on the total number of donors, percent participation, and dollars contributed to the college.

A 1960 graduate of Colby, Bartow has been a class agent for three years.

☐Virginia and Imants Ansbergs of 1 Grace Drive, Cohasset, are parents of a daughter, Naomi Alexandra, born at home Thanksgiving morning. In attendance were four midwives. Both mother and child are doing well.

☐About 250 people gathered at Hugo's recently, to express their gratitude and good wishes to Renee Chaisson, who is retiring and will soon move to Florida.

Mr. Chaisson, who owned his own plumbing business in town, has long been involved in community and church affairs. He served 18 years on the Board of Health and was also a member of the Sewer Study Committee.

Many of his fellow members of the Plumber's Association were there to present him with a new set of golf clubs. Also in attendance were Senator Allan McKinnon and Representative Mary Jeanette Murray. Selectman Rocco Laugelle read a citation from his board commending Chaisson on behalf of the town.

The Chaisson family, including his six daughters, one of whom came all the way from Alaska for the event, were there to share in the special evening.

☐Another special event in town during this past week was the 40th wedding anniversary celebration for Rose and Charles Pape.

One of the guests recalls that Rose was actually speechless with surprise when she entered the party which had been carefully kept secret. It was a very happy time for the Papes and their many friends and relatives.

☐Fifteen Girl Scouts of Troop 4319 and their leaders have just finished an unusual Christmas project — thanks to their ingenuity, 36 children at the Ronald McDonald House and their parents will sit down to a Christmas dinner at a table decorated with very merry Santa Claus napkin holders.

Troop leaders Carol Martin, Sue McNamara and Jan Pyle and the Girl Scouts themselves wanted to do something different this year that would involve children. Rosie Norton supervised the project which also included a giant poster card gaily decorated and signed by each girl.

Thanks to their thought and efforts, Christmas, this year, should mean a little something extra for some very special people.

☐A new recording group which includes soprano, alto, tenor and bass instruments has formed and is busy rehearsing at Roger's Music Store.

Roger Shaffer, store owner and group director, notes that his group is covering baroque and classical periods. Anyone who would like more information may reach Roger at 383-6931.

☐Well, report cards came out last week for the Osgood and Deer Hill schools and with them the inevitable disappointments and surprises. It must be difficult, at times, for teachers to say what sometimes must be said regarding their students, but the following report has to be appreciated by both parents and teachers alike.

"...Your child's strength is in the quickness with which he can process information. He will be the first to turn a phrase or assimilate ideas. At the moment, however, he uses his swift mind and charisma to focus attention on himself as the class clown..."

DOING GOOD WORKS four members of Brownie Troop 4319 work on their Christmas project. The troop is sending holiday napkin holders to the Ronald McDonald House in Boston. The house, nearby Children's Hospital, provides a place for the parents of hospitalized children so they may stay nearby during treatment. The troop meets weekly at the Unitarian Parish House in the Village. (Photo by Greg Derr)

☐Diana Kornet, a student in the fifth grade at the Deer Hill School, has been busy rehearsing her part in the Boston Children's Theatre Touring Company's production of Pinocchio.

From late January through April, Diana will be performing on weekends throughout the Greater Boston area.

☐Cohasset residents attending the Boston Ballet Company's production of The Nutcracker Suite may recognize two of the performers.

Meredith Nash, who is in the 9th grade at Cohasset High School, is now in her fourth year in the delightful Christmas fantasy. This year she is performing the hoop or candycane number which requires agility and high stepping. With only seven other performers on the stage with here, Meredith will receive a great deal of exposure.

Ann Marie Goggin will be an angel in this her third year in the Nutcracker. An 8th grade student at Cohasset High School, she is very excited about this year's production which will begin on Dec. 9 with a gala performance. Both Ann Marie and Meredith will participate in 18 performances through Dec. 20.

Fair Saturday

Twas the month before Christmas and all through the town, every creature was strolling, most smartly dressed in warm down.

The cause for the local interest was the Village Fair.

This year's fair was a marvelous creation of pure enchantment.

There were far too many people involved in making the event a success for us to be able to list them. But you know who you are. You can be proud of the weekend brought to town by the Cohasset Village and Harbor Association and the churches.

Shops everywhere are crowded these days with people who are thinking a lot about Christmas.

The mood is one of somber spending as people hit by inflation try to move into the Christmas spirit.

Shop owners in town are hoping people will buy locally, hoping the cost of gasoline and time will keep people in town for this the major marketing time in a retailer's year.

We agree with the merchants of the Village and other nooks and crannies throughout the town. Shopping close by makes great financial sense.

A legal bill

Town meeting — should it reach a quorum — has no choice but to pay the $5,600 legal bill which brings the tab for opposing the Gammons Road tennis court up to about $10,000.

The legal battle of the town versus Diana and Lowry Bell is continuing. An appeal is expected to go before a judge in state court sometime this winter. The federal civil rights suit will probably take another three years.

We think the town has already spent enough money on this frivolous affair. We think they should make some provision to cut their losses.

The civil rights case hinges on the fact that the Bell's were roadblocked in their plans to build a tennis court using less than regular building setbacks allowances — or 50 feet.

The thought that a fence can't be built on the property line seems a violation of some basic right.

We want to know what happens if the town wins its case in appeals court. Will every fence in town have to be set back from the property line?

Too bright

A new Chinese restaurant opened on Route 3A this week.

You can't miss it. There are two small yellow and red neon signs letting you know parking and the entrance happen to be at the back and a larger red neon sign blasts "KoKo Island" at you.

We wish them well. We also hope they change the color of the two small parking advisory signs. That bright yellow really gets your eye.

A tricycle in the rain

By Paul Steven Stone

As this was written, seven teenagers from Lenox were waiting to be sentenced for the senseless manslaughter of two other teenage boys.

It's raining, and outside my window I can see my daughter's tricycle. It's standing where she left it three days ago, and now the elements seem to be conspiring with her negligence to hasten its demise.

In truth, I have no strong feelings about the tricycle. It came to us with its personality well established; no single zone of metal was untouched by rust, its front fender bore the scars of countless falls and collisions, its rear wheels rested so wobbly on the axle that they blurred your vision when you watched them spin.

We took this battered veteran into our lives with no concern for its rehabilitation. It still performed its function, and that was all we needed to know.

I take a lesson from this unloved tricycle; and indeed it is unloved. I see the decline of civilization in its dull, crusty exterior; the fall of reason from our lives. I see the aimlessness of our young who idle away their existence in the pursuit of pleasures that will only rust — not enhance — their youthful promise.

Too much of the world goes unattended and unloved; too many children are allowed to run free at the precise moment in their lives when they most need direction and understanding. To question why things go wrong in our world is to question why a tricycle left standing in the rain will rust.

The laws of nature are immutable. Unresisted, they work to reduce all things to their most primitive state. Our highways would be forests again if we let nature have its way, our homes would crumble to the earth. We can see what needs to be done when potholes turn our roads into obstacle courses and paint begins to peel off our shingles, but our children require the kind of care that prevents their decline. They are too vulnerable for us to rely on hindsight, and far too difficult to repair once they've been damaged.

I have two daughters, and Kristin, the youngest, has no higher ambition in life than to be like her older sister. Katie, for her part, at three-and-a-half has transferred some of her parents' role model responsibilities to a more reachable level — to older children, and to children her own age who seem to have made more progress on the road to adulthood. At three-and-a-half you tend to measure such progress in terms of liberties and attainments: the freedom to dress yourself, to ride your tricycle on the street alone; the privilege of getting gum more often, of having a real wallet in which to store your play money.

This drive to escape from childhood doesn't disappear when a child reaches adolescense, it merely reaches a new level of sophistication that, in itself, carries a new dimension of responsibility for a parent. The attainments that our adolescents value still mirror the workings of the adult world, only real cars and motorcycles have taken the place of toy ones, and the desire for freedom has turned its focus on adult liberties and, more sadly, adult weaknesses.

A license to drive doesn't certify that a youngster is mature enough to own a car. Being old enough to be out after dark doesn't mean that a teenager has the strength or the wisdom to resist going along with his crowd in whatever it does.

The world our adolescents inhabit is clearly in decline; we can see it in the drinking, the drugs, the vandalism, the long hours each day that are rarely filled with substance, and especially in a tragedy like the one that happened in Lenox. Like that tricycle on my lawn, our teenagers are being left to the elements, and if they begin to rust we have only ourselves to blame.

We can't bottle up adolescent energy, we can only try to channel its flow. Our task is not to baby young adults, but to actively guide them. In order to do that we have to give up the notion that teenagers, once outside the home, can be left to their own pursuits. A few of them can, most of them can't.

As adults, as parents, as caretakers of our world, we have to take responsibility for the lives our children lead. We have to ask ourselves if a tricycle truly belongs in the rain, or are we just too lazy to bring it inside?

Wot's with Protestant angst?

By Claire McDonough

O.K., folks, that does it. I really have been terribly non-political lately. Oh, I may have had a word or two to say about new china or trickle-down economics, but on the whole I've shown admirable restraint.

This, however, is too much. On November 26 I read that Richard Perle, a high level defense official in the Reagan Administration had said publicly that nuclear demonstrations in Europe are the result of Protestant "angst." As a Catholic from the cradle to this day, I want to tell you I resent that statement deeply. We Catholics have just as much "an st" as anyone, and I can prove it.

My mother was the queen of "angst." Whenever I went swimming she was sure I'd drown or be eaten by sharks. In Houghton's Pond.

When I told her I wanted to go horseback riding, she painted vivid verbal pictures of crazed stallions trampling beginning riders to death. When I returned in one piece and told her that my steed had been a broken down gelding whose only interest was to return to the stable and his hay she was not reassured.

"That's what he wants you to think," she warned, shaking her head gloomily. "Next time, when your guard is down he'll show his true colors. When you're least suspecting it — that's when he'll rear up and throw you off his back. After that, it's Trample City."

Mom continued to let me ride for six years — it was with a parish group, and remember, this is

Anti-casino forces gather in N.Y. to plot their course

By BETH HARLING

Massachusetts anti-casino activists Carol Oteri of Hull and Fred Moran of Adams represented Citizens Against Casino Gambling, Inc., at the meeting in Albany, N.Y., Saturday of LANCE (Legislators Against New Casino Establishments).

Calling itself a "regional strike force against casinos," LANCE is a coalition of legislators and grassroots organizations from 9 states.

Sen. Steven Casey, Chairman of Conneticut's Public Saftey Committee, was elected chairman of the group. He stated, "We look to Atlantic City as the guinea pig of the casino industry." He concluded that the "only ones benefiting in Atlantic City are the casino operators themselves." His address referred to the "Four Cs of the casino industry — Crime, Congestion, Corruption and Compulsion."

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray R.-Cohasset was named vice-chairman. Accepting her new responsibilities Murray said, "LANCE is a major step forward and I will do everything I can to stop casino gambling in our area."

Oteri and Moran, leaders in the anti-casino movement in Massachusetts since the mid-1970s, remarked that one of the first orders of business at the meeting called by the legislators was the granting of full voting rights to delegates from citizens groups. Both were also enthusiastic about LANCE's plans to meet in Boston within the next three months. C.A.C.G.'s president and vice-president took particular note of the participation of Arnold Maurer, vice-president of the Service Employees International Unions (New York State Council) and his statement, "Casino unions are a disgrace to the other unions."

Moran pointed to the press release issued by the National Anti-Drug Coalition, which sent members to the sessions, describing casino cash flows as "money laundries for the drug trade."

Oteri said, "Casino promoters will never convince Massachusetts that it 'needs' casinos when our state has the second lowest unemployment rate in the country among the ten largest industrial states. The Boston Building and Construction Trades Council recently bragged about 'almost full employment'," she added.

Elected secretary was New York Assemblyman William F. Passannante, speaker pro-tem of the New York State Assembly, and the official host for Saturday's organizational meeting of LANCE. He is also president-elect of the National Conference of State Legislators. In remarks made before the gathering Passannante said that proponents of casino gambling in New York have testified before legislative committees with claims that Massachusetts and New Hampshire "are going to accept casino gambling." He explained, "I communicated with people in those states and found out that not only had the boat not left the dock, there never even was a dock." Alluding to the windowless, clockless decor of the casinos, Passannante said, "They don't want you, Mr. or Mrs. Sucker, to leave until they've taken your last dime."

Sen. Frank J. O'Connell of Pennsylvania accepted a post as vice-chairman. He described the casino industry as "a taker, not a giver" and forewarned legislators "looking for quick fixes" that the social problems bred by casinos have to be paid for by the rest of the state.

Speaker of the New Hampshire House, John Tucker, was elected the third vice-chairman. Christopher Boyle, a legislator from Rhode Island was named to the board.

Howard Kay, of Concerned Citizens About Casino Gambling in Rhode Island, recounted that group's successful efforts to keep casino gambling out of Newport. Similar achievements were detailed by Thomas Laverne and Charles Kriss of No Dice-We Love New York.

New Jersey State Rep. Walter Cavanagh, Vermont State Rep. Theresa Feeley and Maine State Sen. Jerard P. Conley will serve as the liasons between their respective states and LANCE.

Wampatuck access

By Patricia Desmond

Someone should ascertain the general opinion of people in town about Wompatuck State Park. We tried and found no opinion.

The park needs a second access, according to the officials of Hingham. The present access is from the side roads of Hingham.

A substantial chunk of the park land lies in Cohasset, in the back of Beechwood, but there's no way to get there from here. The entrance to the park being a good seven minutes through Hingham.

Maybe there is a strong sentiment for an access from town. It would, afterall, provide a shortcut through to Route 228, if it's built properly. Maybe there isn't.

We began one of our usual unscientific polls of opinion over the weekend. But the weather kept the results on the low side.

From the six people we were able to corner in the cold on South Main Street, we discovered that there is little awareness of the park. And less thought to whether there should be a second access from Cohasset.

But then no one we stopped lived in that part of town.

Wot's with Protestant angst? ...

Catholic angst we're talking about — but she never got over the uneasy feeling that Oat Burner was just biding his time while craftily plotting my downfall.

She wasn't just convinced that death and destruction were stalking her only child, either. Whenever she and Dad left for a vacation trip, she would take me aside and tell me where all her cherished belongings were, and where she had hidden her important papers, "In case the worst should happen."

When they'd come back home tanned and healthy, I'd point out that disaster had not struck and she'd look at me seriously. "No, it didn't," she'd agree. "Not this time."

Make no mistake that this was Catholic angst. Mom searched for years before she found just the right prayer book. It had a section in the back with prayers to ward off tornadoes, hurricanes, and plagues of locusts. Every night she said her rosary. The sorrowful mysteries.

Strangely enough, all this angst did not make her a depressing person to live with. She was so certain that doom was just around the corner that she cherished every minute she was granted. Life with my mother was a series of one-liners, and I probably got to do more fun things than any other kid on my block. After all, Mom would reason, if we take the Nantasket boat to Hull we'll probably hit an ice berg (in August) but if we stay home there's a pretty fair chance an earthquake will destroy the house. So we might as well enjoy ourselves on the road to Gotterdammerung.

Occasionally one of my mother's gloomy predictions would be fulfilled. The cold I caught when I ignored her advice and didn't wear my rubbers did turn into pneumonia. I was hit by a car while crossing Dorchester Avenue.

"You see?" she would ask. "Didn't I tell you? Maybe the next time you'll listen to your mother, Miss Knows Everything Because She Goes to College."

I just wish she were around now and in a position to advise the Reagan people.

"See?" she would exclaim in righteous Catholic vindication. "I told you it would be dumb to make that statement. Next time maybe you'll listen, Mr. Smart High Level Defense Official Perle."

And next time, maybe he would.

Out to sea

To the Editor:

In response to Hildred Parent's letter published in the Dec. 2 issue of the Cohasset Mariner, I wish that the secretary of Hull's Planning Board and other supporters of "The Casino Fiasco" would realize that perhaps that is exactly where Casino Gambling belongs — on a ship — twelve miles out to sea!!!

Mrs. Maria A. Plante

Painting exhibit at Kit & Kaboodle

Bob Fesler, new proprietor of Kit & Kaboodle, one of Cohasset Villages most intriguing gift shops has invited B. Spencer Green to display a series of primitive style paintings for the month of December.

The paintings are a charming arrangement depicting a lifestyle of days gone by in Cohasset when horse drawn milk carts and wagons of salt marsh hay were a common sight.

Green has delightfully captured the charm of the old time village of Cohasset showing familiar sights and buildings that still exist today. Her paintings are sure to warm the hearts of many.

Rosy future for Cushing Plaza ...

amount of frontage. Quinn said the sign for the A&P currently uses up most of the sign allowance available.

Rockland Trust Co. has just extended its lease in the plaza with plans for upgrading, Quinn said.

The plans include another drive-up window and installation of an automatic teller machine.

The ownership of the plaza changed last February. Ever since then Quinn has been working to make a statement for Cushing Plaza.

"We wanted to set a tone, a direction. We were fortunate to find Johnny Appleseed in that line."

The company which operates on the North Shore was brought to the attention of Cushing Plaza by a local realtor. Within six months the shop had been leased, refurbished and opened to the public.

"Somehow I'd like to thank everyone that was involved with that project. Town officials were helpful and Turner Brothers (the general contractor) did amazing work in a short time.

The reconstruction of the shop makes the facility handicapped accessible, Quinn pointed out.

In the less than a year of Dadekian 's ownership about a quarter of a million has been brought to the center for new construction and renovations.

There are already about 30 new jobs created from the shops and medical facility that have moved in. The new supermarket will create more jobs, Quinn pointed out.

That new supermarket may be open in three months if the renovations needed are relatively minor. It could be six months if more major work needs to be done.

"We want to have the kind of store Cohasset really deserves," Quinn said.

"An anchor store in a shopping center should be a quality store."

He expects the plaza will not only keep people in town to do their shopping but will soon be drawing people from Hingham, Scituate and Marshfield to shop in Cohasset stores.

Zoning board requests special permit

The zoning board of appeals voted recently to deny the request of Salt Winds Development Corp. for a special permit to build a home in the flood plain on Jerusalem Road.

A public hearing had been held on the request Sept. 8. The decision was sent to town clerk last week.

Salt Winds, acting as agent for Bradford Cushing, wanted to add 460 cubic yards of material to the site at 2A Jerusalem Road to raise the elevation. The septic system proposed did not lie within the flood plain.

Two abuttors testified at the hearing and showed photographs proving there was flooding on the location in the storm of February, 1978.

Robert Booth, zoning board chairman, said the bylaw does not permit his board to hypothesize about the change of conditions if the lot is re-engineered and so the denial was voted.

Winter sports ready to roll

By Rob Tis

The winter sports season is just starting to get off the ground. Every inch of gym space is in use from the minute school is over until 8:30 at night.

The Sullivan gym is used by both girls' and boys' basketball and the upstairs gym is divided up between the gymnastics team and the wrestling team.

The ice hockey team is hard at work at Winter Garden and is preparing for what looks like one of the most promising seasons in a long time. The Skippers only lost two seniors from their starting team last year which won 70 percent of their games.

The Skippers will have the incredible number of 12 seniors and juniors on the team this year with two or more years of varsity hockey experience. These veterans include Andy Pottenger, Sean Curran, Barron Salvador, Joe Becker, Jack McNeill, Scott Ripley, Dom Compadelli, Mike Nedrow, Steve Bowen, Richie Evans, John Cusey and Don O'Neil.

The team, for the second year, will be under the tutelage of coach Tom Burnell. The Skippers don't seem to lack anything this year. They have two top notch experienced goal tenders in Scott Ripley and Steven Bowen. They also have a very strong defense led by Dom Campadelli, candidate for just about every award high school hockey has to offer. The Skippers also have some fast skating, hard hitting forwards including Jack McNeill, Mike Nedrow, and Richie Evans. This team also has some stickhandlers that are quite proficient in putting the puck in the net — Andy Pottenger, Sean Curran and Don O'Neil. Many, including me, think this will be the best Skipper hockey team ever.

The boys' basketball team has no problems in the area of height this year as they have had in the past. The Skippers have five big men that will all see action this year. They are seniors Keith Goff, Andy Songer, Jim Leonard, and Juniors Guy Martin and Tom O'Brien. Goff, the only returning starter, seems to be leading this team with a lot of enthusiasm. Andy Songer who was bother with an ankle injury last year with Goff and Leonard will be putting the ball through the basket quite a bit. The Skippers have an abundance of ball handling guards with lightning speed; namely Dana Infusino, Jack Mahoney and Danny Anderson.

Eddie Minnelli begins his first year as coach of this team. David Infusino is his assistant. Everyone is optimistic about this team. It just might end up a winner.

Next week Girl's Basketball, Wrestling and Gymnastics.

Some students were still wondering what they wanted from Santa as first grade students from the Osgood School wrote letters to Santa last week. Others had definitely made up their minds. (Derr photo)

Alarm system needed

The present budget should be used for financing an alarm system for the high school and needed drainage work on the field behind the Sullivan gym, according to school committee members.

Five CHS students finalists in AFS program

Five Cohasset students are finalists for the American Field Service program, according to Barbara Spooner.

Mrs. Spooner thanked school officials for their cooperation this week as she formally introduced the two AFS students to school committee.

Both Johanna Arola from Valkeokoski, Finland, and Hiromi Yoshioka from Tokyo, Japan, are happy with the time they are spending in Cohasset.

Neither one will receive academic credit for the year when they return to their homelands, despite the fact they would be eligible to graduate from Cohasset High School.

Holly Grant, student representative to the school committee, is one of the five finalists. Holly said she hopes to spend the last half of her senior year abroad.

"I hope I get to go," she said.

"I am happy and pleased to be here," Johanna told the school committee. I have felt comfortable at school."

She has been in town about three months now.

Hiromi came to town about five months ago.

"The time is running really fast," she said. "I love Cohasset. Everyone is so helpful."

The AFS chapter in town was revitalized last year after years of inactivity.

WINTER WEATHER didn't keep people from the events of the Village Fair (except for SunJay). Seen here resting on the steps of town hall are Sally Cook, Megan Pratt, 3, Carolyn Pratt, 2, and Mary-Jo Mahoney.

PATIENTLY WAITING FOR SANTA is Lauren Jones, 3. Lauren is one of the hundreds photographed with Santa over the weekend. She expects him to visit more particularly in three weeks.

Bloomfield's new book is coming

Lincoln Bloomfield of Beach Street, a professor of political science at MIT, expects copies of his new book "The Foreign Policy Process, A Modern Primer" will be available soon at the Hingham Square Bookshop.

The book published by Prentice-Hall includes a game kit.

"Students can play this realistic foreign policy simulation game," or so the publisher's brochure says.

"All instructions, rules and scenarios are provided, along with a description and analysis of techniques."

The Political Game was invented at Rand and developed by Bloomfield at MIT.

Dr. Bloomfield (BS, MPA, PhD - All Harvard University) has divided his professional life between government service and academia.

A leading scholar in the field of foreign policy and international relations, he is author and co-author of eight books and numerous articles in scholarly journals and leading papers such as "The NY Times," "Newsweek," etc. He is also known as the developer of the CASCON computerized conflict analysis system.

Before joining the MIT faculty he served four years as a navel officer and eleven more as a State Department official. In 1979-80 on a leave of absence he served in the White House, in charge of Global Issues for the National Security Council.

Holder of several prestigious fellowships, he has lectured on world affairs in over thirty-five countries.

KoKo sign

Building Inspector James Litchfield is apparently discussing the status of the signs at the KoKo Island restaurant with the owners.

Apparently more than one person has commented on the color of the bright neon signs which direct people to parking in the rear.

No McDonald playground

The plans for a McDonald's next to the Cohasset Motors building on Route 3A call for a structure without an outside playground.

There would be about 100 seats in the restaurant.

Meanwhile the sign still says Cohasset Motors but the building is full of workers from Energy Exchange. The company is expanding rapidly and continues to occupy its old space in the professional building opposite Cushing Plaza.

Library trustees want additional fine revenue

The library trustees, who voted recently to up the fines, want the town to send back some of the extra money for new books.

Richard Hayes, chief librarian, said the trustees decided this week to ask for the new revenue the library will generate in the coming fiscal year.

"We aren't asking to dip into the tax revenue," Hayes said, pointing out the fines of five cents a day for overdue books with a maximum fine of $5 a book plus reinvestment of trust funds can generate $7,000 to $8,000 a year.

The library already generates other funds which are filtered into the town's general fund. Hayes says he has schedules showing $25,000 in library revenue, all going into the town treasury. About $6,700 of that is sent back to the library.

The trustees decision to ask for the money they will be raising is their effort to keep the book budget where it has been.

Hayes said that to provide a level funded budget, with no increase for the larger revenue, would mean something would have to be cut. The choices are: the book budget, the library hours or the staff.

The library which uses large numbers of volunteers is already closed on Wednesdays.

Hayes describes the budget he prepared for the trustees as a level-funded one. It calls for $136,000 or $17 per capita a year.

"I don't think it's exorbitant," Hayes commented.

The reason the trustees are seeking more money for the book budget is partially due to the leaps of inflation happening in the book and periodical industry.

The trustees are also recommending the library pages receive an increase from $2.72 an hour to at least $3 a hour. Minimum wage is now $3.35 but towns are not forced to comply.

The trustees also voted to ask the advisory board to continue with the past practice of granting the non-union library workers the same percentage wage increase other union employees receive.

The $136,000 budget does not include a cost of living raise.

Hayes said more gifts to the library wouldn't hurt.

"But finding private money even from the high tech corporations is hard right now."

Blood donors listed at CHS

The Cohasset Chapter of the American Red Cross held a bloodmobile at the high school recently, and a total of 40 pints was collected.

There were 19 new donors who became 17 years of age and were able to donate with the written consent of their parents or guardian. The balance of the donors were faculty and staff members.

The bloodmobile was coordinated by the school nurse, Mrs. Carol Cicciotte, R.N., who was assisted by Holly Grant, president of the Student Council. The bloodmobile was held to assist in the continuing blood and plasma needs of the burn victims of the Holbrook aerosol factory fire.

In April, 1982, the senior class will sponsor its own bloodmobile at the high school, following a tradition started eight years ago.

The donors were: Deborah Andrews, Paul Buckley, Anne Bear, Ronald Bergenheim, James Benbow, Sarah Cook, Leslie Cahill, Lois Ceasarini, John Chapin, Derek Lovering, Kerry Crehan, Drew Dougherty, Everett Dorr, John Durant, Robert Donahue, Constance Delaney, Tia Esposito, Dennis Ford, Karen Froio, Michael Gill, Cathryn Hoy, Jean Higgens, Christina Karcher, Nancy Kealy, Gail Lucas, Andrew Marks and Helen MacKinnon.

Also, Michael Nedrow, Thomas O'Neil, Sheila Ponitz, Anna Plante, Cynthia Pratt, Robert Ripley, David Rourke, Gordon Ricketts, Maeve Rever, Linda Sheppard, Richard Streeter, Lori Stover, Torin Sweeney, Thomas Stanford, Robert Tis, Mahmoud Tehranian, Dennis Walsh, Jo-Ellen Wood, Robert Whelan, and Amy Wittet.

Old Glory

When the flag raises you can see the stars and stripes flashing in front of you.
You think of wars and old times passing by.

Kenny Caristi, Grade 4

Shyness

Mrs. Shy has a turtle for a pet.
She wears coats with large hoods
so no one can see her.

Her hobby is knitting.
She has nightmares
about being caught in a crowd.

She lives in a house with no windows
so no one will see her.
When a person knocks on her door
she sends her turtle to answer it.

Sarah Hamilton, Grade 6

Selectmen's briefs

Pratt resigns

Selectmen accepted the resignation of Nelson C. Pratt as Deputy of Civil Defense because of his membership on the Advisory Committee.

Ubaldo DiBenedetto, a ham operator, of 32 Jerusalem Road was appointed by selectmen to fill the vacancy.

Fund transfer approved

Selectmen approved a transfer of funds for repairs made to the ambulance. However, they did not approve payment for fire hydrant damages. They took the matter under advisement to gather information about why the hydrants needed repairs.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said that if the fire hydrant damages were caused by automobiles, then the respective automobile insurance companies should pay the repairs.

Alcohol licenses renewed

Selectmen renewed alcohol and common victualer licenses last Wednesday night for Papa Ginos, Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant, and Ko-Ko Island Restaurant.

Bridge traffic reviewed

Selectmen received a letter from Chris McCabe, executive secretary to Hull selectmen which suggested an alternative traffic pattern, to be reviewed by the Department of Public Works, concerning the Fore River Bridge.

The main suggestion in the letter was to close the bridge for only one-way traffic during the heavy commuting hours to and from Boston.

Selectmen are considering contracting an engineer for plans regarding a holding tank at the North Cohasset Fire Station. If a plan for a holding tank were approved by the Conservation Commission then the value of the property would increase.

Officer Doyle resigns

Selectmen accepted the resignation of Gerald Doyle of Hull from the Cohasset police department.

Penn Central land attracts more buyers

The town meeting can shave the purchase price of the Penn Central right-of-way by about $20,000 if the voters choose.

Osborne F. Ingram, president of Cohasset Savings Bank and a member of the advisory committee, wants to buy 4.5 acres of the tract that runs from Beechwood Street, behind his home, to the Scituate line.

Ingram said he would be willing to give the town the right to use the land for utilities for token consideration.

The town has talked of using the land for its sewer line eventually.

Arthur Clark, executive secretary to the selectmen, pointed out that the selectmen would be taking no action on Ingram's request because they were carrying out the instructions of town meeting in tying up the deal with Penn Central.

"If town meeting chooses some other course of action that's something else," Clark said.

Penn Central is willing to sell the land to the town for $135,000. The land amounts to 27 acres and runs through the community.

Ingram said his offer to pay $20,000 for the land was made during a time last spring when for sale signs went up on the land.

"It's a piece of property I have been eyeing for sometime," Ingram said.

"I hadn't been able to contact anyone from the railroad for many years. They were going through their bankruptcy or reorganization or whatever it was. They were in a state of flux."

Ingram said he would not like the idea of a bicycle path. A bicycle path is one of the suggested uses for the property.

Other parts of the right-of-way are used as bridle trails or motorcyle runs. But the land along Beechwood Street has been blocked off for some time, he said.

"I don't think of my offer as competing with the town," Ingram said. "When I called the railroad, the man there hadn't even heard from the town."

He pointed out that his offer could save the town part of the purchase price.

Penn Central has other offers besides that from Ingram. His offer came to light when he disqualified himself from discussion of the warrant article.

The railroad is not releasing other information about the offers. The town has first option. Should the town fail to pick up the land, it will be sold in smaller parcels.

For the Reeds Mr. Beam is a family affair

By Laura Doherty

It may not be the best of times to be taking on a new business venture but if success depends on a spirit of adventure, hard work and cooperation, the Reed family can't help but make it.

When, last summer, Jerry Reed learned that Mr. Beam, Inc. was up for sale, he couldn't understand why the young owner would want to let go of a $300,000 a year business. He had been working part time at the home supply store and upon learning about the owner's decision on a Friday, he and his wife, Peggy, spent the weekend going back and forth on it. "You know it and love it, you ought to buy it," Peggy said and that was all Jerry needed to hear. "On Monday, I called and told the owner that I'd buy it, not knowing how," he recalls with a chuckle.

The beauty of the whole arrangement was, Jerry continues, that he was already familiar with the 18-year-old business. Also, the former owner remained a member of the board of directors and continued to assist with advice.

His first step was to arrange financing for the project. "The bank had just financed a Chinese restaurant in Quincy," he laughs, "so I asked them why not Mr. Beam in Cohasset?" Well aware of the responsibility he was undertaking, Jerry describes the final arrangements as "worse than signing the papers on your first house."

No one who knows the Reeds is that surprised at their new undertaking. They always knew I would eventually do something like this," Jerry explains.

It seems that most of his life, Jerry has been preparing for the time when he would have his own business. As a young man, he began working as a grocery boy. Later he drove a health wagon and delivered mail. "I've never been afraid of the world of work," he comments. Much of his financial experience came from working with his dad who was at one time treasurer and chief accountant for Northeast Airlines. "He taught me a lot," Jerry says.

Until recently, in addition to being a special class teacher in Quincy (he has a M.Ed. plus 67 credits), Jerry had been preparing for owning a local nursing home. But with financing as it was, he came to realize that this goal was not realistic so he changed it and eventually became a specialist in energy saving devices.

Jerry's interest in energy conservation began with his own home where his goal has been to keep the fuel bill the same as the previous year. He has also attended several seminars on home energy methods.

Since moving to Cohasset in 1976, the Reeds have both been active in the community. They are well known for their commitment and hard work in any project they undertake. Their store is a reflection of the personality of these two energetic and creative people. There's a country feeling to the place which is

Photographer Gail Bryan talks about her work

By Patricia Desmond

The darkroom of Gail Bryan's home on the edge of Little Harbor in Cohasset is warm, with finely polished wood and three yard long sinks.

It is the darkroom of an artist, a professional, a careful conveyor of images.

Outside the darkroom in the rooms found in houses everywhere — huge windows look out to the salt water harbor. In the distance you can peer at the sea.

Against that background, Bryan talked about her artistry and that of the other members of the now much talked about 13-81.

Bryan and 12 other visual artists — sculptors, photographers, painters — came together and formed a unit of strength.

"The idea was to give feedback," Bryan said. "Lately we've been mainly concerned with the show."

The show is at Schnabel Galleries in Hingham for the next three weeks. Interest in the show has brought out all the South Shore art critics. The artists are still waiting for the Boston critics to acclaim the show.

"The problem with being an artist is that you have to do your work in isolation," Bryan said.

She bought her house, which was once ancillary to a nearby estate, back in 1977 and right away she left on assignment in Nepal.

Her assignments have taken her to exotic places like Brazil and Saudi Arabia.

"What we hope to do is to make people aware of the fact that a level of creative excitement is missing," Bryan said.

Her own work is strong, dramatic, clear. Her latest series is an exploration of sexuality.

She describes herself as a bedrock feminist. But 13-81 doesn't get involved in political discussion. She hesitated when asked if the other members were feminists and said, "I don't know."

What the group does talk about is art — their own. They talk about how they feel about one another's work, whether an image is working, whether the work brings an emotional response.

Bryan sees her work in photography as a process in self discovery. She talks about going beyond herself through her art.

"I'm seeing all I can be through photography," she said. Outside the window gulls were landing on the rocks of Little Harbor and the grey sky whistled with the cold.

She said photography is an outgrowth of her feminism.

"Because of my feminism I want to be all that I can be."

Her own work is based on emotions. She said she likes a relationship of control/noncontrol between herself and her subjects. She finds the group feelings about work seem consistent.

"They all tend to like the same work or feel the

'A Man for All Seasons' next for Drama Club

The second play to be presented this season by the Cohasset Dramatic Club will be Robert Bolt's great dramatic tragedy set in 16th Century England, "A Man for All Seasons."

This is a play of vast scope and profound depth; a brilliant study of the personages and events occurring in a tumultuous age. We present a play made up of Kings and Cardinals, of shining intellectuals and of the common man. Strong passions abound, both of love and/or hate. "A Man for All Seasons" is a play of strength, power, subtlety, wit, and ultimate tragedy.

Tryouts for those wishing to participate in the Club's winter presentation will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall on Sunday, Dec. 13, from 2 to 5 p.m. Directing the play will be Rosanne Ring of Cohasset; Production Manager, Harry Heineman. Dates of performance are scheduled for Feb. 25, 26, and 27 at the Town Hall.

The cast of characters is as follows:

The Common Man: in his middle years, crafty, loosely benevolent, and basely humourous Sir Thomas More: "fortyish," pale, middle-sized, and not robust. His mind is abundant and debonair; his movements have a natural moderation. He is intellectual, serious, and compassionate. In moments of high crisis, his face becomes freezingly ascetic. Master Richard Rich: young, unexercised, studious, unhappy. He is an academic, hounded by self-doubt and longing to be rescued from himself. The Duke of Norfolk Earl Marshall of England: he is a great nobelman, heavy, active, a sportsman, and soldier held together by rigid adherence to the minimal code of conventional duty (in middle years). Lady Alice More (Sir Thomas' Wife): same age as Sir Thomas. Born in the merchant class, now a great lady. Impressive, overdressed, brave, hot-hearted. She worships her husband. Lady Margaret More (Sir Thomas' Daughter): young good looking girl of ardent moral fineness. She both suffers and shelters behind a reserved stillness. Cardinal Wolsey: older, a large man with an almost megalomaniac ambition unhappily matched by an excelling intellect. Thomas Cromwell: subtle and serious; his face expressing the tremendous outgoing will of the Renaissance. An intellectual bully. Signor Chapuys, the Spanish Ambassador: a professional diplomat and lay ecclesiastic. Dignified, a man of the world, who trots happily along a mental footpath as narrow as a peasant's. Chapuys' Attendant: an apprentice diplomat of good family. William Roper: youngish — has a stiff body and an immobile face. Little imagination, a moderate brain, but all-consuming righteousness. King Henry the Eighth: a young Henry, cleanshaven, graceful and athletic. The Golden Hope of the New Learning throughout Europe. A Woman: middle years — self-opinionated, self-righteous, selfish, and indignant. Thomas Cranmer, Archchbishop of Canterbury:middle years, sharp-minded and sharp-faced. He treats the church as a job of administration and theology as a set of devices, for he lacks personal religiosity.

If you want to try out and are unable to attend the Dec. 13 tryout, please call Director Rosanne Ring at 383-6623 or Club President, Florence Kelley at 383-9099, for an appointment.

Murray announces student government Reps

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, announces that elections were held in Cohasset and Hingham High Schools on November 3, to select that school's delegate to the thirty-fifth Annual Student Government Day Program.

Cohasset Student Government Representative is Justin Hoffman and Paul Johnson is alternate for Student Government Day. The Hingham Representative is John Magill and Sheila Falvey is alternate.

The program was established in 1947 by the Massachusetts General Court in order that secondary school students of the Commonwealth would be able to learn about state government by participating in an unique and meaningful experience. This idea has developed into a six-month program which explores all aspects of our state governmental system and includes a one day "take over" of the state administration by the students.

"Any secondary school in Massachusetts is eligible to send one student representative to this program. The student must be sixteen years of age on or before May 31, 1982. The student must be elected by his/her high school in a democratically held election. The student must be dedicated to receiving full benefits offered by the program in understanding state government," Rep. Murray said.

"After the election in each school, the namesof the delegates are placed in a "Glass Bowl." Names of the student counterparts will be drawn by the governor, other constitutional officers, and supreme court justices. Another drawing will be held to select the governor's councillors, department heads, cabinet secretaries, senators, and representatives."

Three series of workshops will be held for the purpose of educating and informing teachers and student delegates about the legislative process and state government. The first series will be held in the regional education centers. The second and third workshop series will be held at the State House. The governor will participate in these workshops along with the constitutional officers, legislators, judicial officials, members of interest and lobbying groups. The workshops will also provide an opportunity for students to observe the legislature in session.

Student Government Day occurs on the first Friday in April. On this day, students will participate in all aspects of the administration of state government in the place where it happens, the State House. This allows students who have been educated in state government the opportunity to exercise their newly obtained abilities in the atmosphere that actual governmental officials perform.

Rep. Murray, concluded, "The Student Government Day Program has been successful in many ways during its long history. Along with the responsibility of educating a concerned population of the citizens and future voters of Massachusetts, it has been estimated that one third of the elected state governmental officials currently serving in Massachusetts have participated in the program. Therefore, this program has a responsibility to Massachusetts to provide knowledge and exemplary public officials for future generations.

Frost photography at the conservatory

The December exhibition in the Staircase Gallery at the South Shore Conservatory of Music will feature the color photography of Walter (Jack) Frost. Beginning Friday, Dec. 4, with a reception from 7 to 8 p.m., the exhibit will continue through the month. The Conservatory is located off 19 Fort Hill St. in Hingham. The Gallery is open to the public free of charge Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

A most appropriately named exhibitor for the holiday season, Walter, known as Jack Frost, became interested in photography after graduating from the University of Vermont. Working for a newspaper gave him access to a dark room and speed graphic camera which he utilized and which stirred his interest in photography. Due to the demands of his career in journalism, he had to drop this hobby temporarily and did not take it up again until about eight years ago. Frost is a copy editor in the sports department of the Boston Globe and also writes a camera column for the paper.

Since his interest in photography was revived he has entered many competitions including the International Competition under the Photographic Society of America. He is a four star holder which means he has received more than 320 acceptances in this competition. His photographs have won many awards, the most recent being the Best Color Photograph in the Cape Cod Art Association show this past fall. Frost is a past president of the South Shore Camera Club and a member of the South Shore Art Center Gallery where he also serves on the Gallery Acceptance Jury.

To the man with a smooth line

By Patricia Desmond

Your voice invades my carefully ordered after-life.
I hear your words, deep, semisweet chocolate words aimed at throwing me off my diet.
You sound so understanding and caring and friendly on the other end of that electronic connection.
Thrusting yourself back unexpectedly,
uninvited into my world.
Just hearing you puts butterflies in my stomach and fantasies in my dreams.
Chocolate fudge heaped with my own whipped cream couldn't be as tempting as you when you're trying.
But sorry, honey tones,
I'm off high caloric intake until thoughts of what we were become just sweet memories.

Cool welcome...

Even the signs were frozen last weekend. PhotographerMary O'Keeffe sent us the proof this week.

WHAT'S ROCK . . . AND ROLLS?

The answer: Beautifully handcrafted natural marble rolling pins with pastry boards.

You will delight in making delicate pastries of all kinds . . . even a common pie crust becomes a gourmet's dream.

Why? Because marble has a non-stick surface naturally (no flour needed) and it's weight, combined with its smooth surface (much smoother than wood), gives you a thinner, flakier crust. And marble stays cooler . . . important for making good pastry.

These quality marble products will be here soon and supplies will be limited.

Two Questions:

Want to cut your taxes?
Want to retire richer?

One Answer:

Invest in an IRA!

What's an IRA? Here are three basic questions about Individual Retirement Accounts (IRA) and brief answers:

Q. Who is eligible?

A. In 1981: Any employee not in a qualified pension or profit-sharing plan.
In 1982: Any employee.

Q. What is the yearly amount that I may put into an IRA and deduct from taxable income on federal returns?

A. In 1981: Lesser of $1500 or 15% of earned income.
In 1982: Lesser of $2000 or 100% of earned income.

Q. Can I begin an IRA right now to save taxes on this year's income and then still be eligible for next year's more generous deductions?

A. Yes. In fact, you have until April 15, 1982, or your tax filing date, to contribute for 1981.

For further details, please visit any office of the Quincy Cooperative Bank in Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover or Quincy, or call 479-6600 and ask for an IRA consultant.

Mr. Beam...

enhanced by the handsome woods of the various kitchen displays and the warmth from the Pro Former coal stove.

It's also obvious that the staff, too, besides being both knowledgeable and helpful, really like their work. Lewis Fisher, who is Mr. Beam's vice president in charge of marketing and manages the store during business hours, has experience in design and remodeling and specializes in building products.

Whether it's a sale of lumber to Martha's Vineyard or a stove to Billerica, the products at Mr. Beam are much in demand. One very popular item is the hand hewn pine beams.

For the Reeds, Mr. Beam is a family enterprise. Jerry continues to teach during school hours. Peggy spends most of the time when the children are at school at the shop. Working with her husband agrees with Peggy who says she likes it because, "I see him more often."

Sons Jerry, Billy and Steven help out on Saturdays. Daughter Debbie answers the phone and helps with the bookkeeping. And young Johnny enjoyed helping out at a recent Open House. All five of the Reed children are paid for their work and although they are required to save a portion of their pay, they recently presented their dad with some pretty special birthday gifts, including a glass statute to "the greatest Dad in the world."

Bulldogs Are Bitten

Philip Mahoney

The Rockland Bulldogs narrowly escaped the hungry grasp of the Skippers last Saturday. The Skippers were propelled by senior quarterback Kevin Dooley and junior runningback Mark Gunville. Gunville scored the two Skipper touchdowns. The offensive line of the Skippers did a commendable job blocking the incoming Bulldogs.

Bob Donahue gave the defense its momentum with his hard-hitting aggressiveness. Donahue's injury later in the game hurt the Skippers a lot. The defensive line showed an impressive performance hitting the Bulldog runningbacks at the line of scrimmage. The linebackers and the secondary proved that they meant business by thwarting sweeps and runs up the middle. Overall the Skippers' defense was very tough.

Although they lost the game 22-14, the Skippers played well The Skippers scored in the first and third quarters. One touchdown was a bullet pass from Dooley to Gunville 7 yards out. The other touchdown was a hand-off to Gunville, who scampered into the endzone with two Bulldog defenders on his back. Both extra points were kicked by senior Paul Buckley.

StudentsThink Politics

By Tina Birmann

Reagan. Republicans love him; Democrats oppose him (but somehow find themselves drawn under his spell); Students — well, what about the students? No one, to the best of my knowledge, has ever shown a significant amount of interest in the political views of high school students. Perhaps the majority of adults today don't expect the younger set to become involved in politics, yet perhaps they should. Involvement does not necessarily mean becoming a politician; it merely means being aware of what's going on within the government and knowing how government policies will affect each person individually and the nation as a whole.

As students approach the twelfth grade and turn eighteen years of age, they take on more than just the frantic search for the "right" college; they also assume the responsibility of voting for whom they believe to be the right man for President.

We may begin to include students in the world of politics and discover which direction the younger generation is leaning towards by finding out what they think of the government of today. Concerning Reagan and his government, the majority of Cohasset High seniors questioned all agreed on one point — that Reagan is at least doing something. Whether for the good or bad of the country, not all were in compliance. In regards to Reagan's economic policy, the students split straight down the middle, with those opposing the President voicing the stronger argument. One student neatly summed up the situation saying, "His (Reagan's) policies are elitist, allowing the rich to get richer and the poor to get poorer...It just won't work.

When asked questions dealing with Reagan's foreign policy, views were again diverse. One student replied somewhat astonished, "Reagan has a foreign policy?!" Others felt that Reagan has made a start in the right direction by showing foreign countries (especially the Soviet Union) that the U.S. is "not just a nation to be pushed around."

While some students appeared pleased with the President's foreign affairs, others expressed their disgust over Reagan's lack of control with his own cabinet. In order to resolve the situation, many students would have all three "troublemakers" removed from office. Haig, according to one student, is a "dangerous, power-seeking warmonger."

Last but not least, students were asked to comment on Reagan himself. Although they agreed that the President has many weaknesses, the majority agreed that his major asset lies in his lack of fear. As seen in the passing of his AWACS sale proposal, when the President feels that something is for the benefit of his nation, he will go to no end to achieve it.

Knowing this much about the views of high school students, do you think the younger generation would opt for a President with similar qualities and policies in the 1984 election? Why not ask a student and find out for sure.

Mrs. Goff's 'Last Hurrah'

"For Sale" signs will appear in front of Mrs. Goff's home in the beginning of May. Our senior class play director will be changing scenes to Florida, where she will live in a motor home. However, she will leave Cohasset in a blaze of glory.

When I entered Mrs. Goff's cozy home to interview her about the new job, as director of the senior class play, I was warmly recieved. We sat back, with root beers in hand, to discuss with enthusiasm and conviction my class play...no, our class play.

I wondered why she ever accepted such an immense responsibility as director of our senior class play; which had been an uphill battle from the first. She smiled and gave a little laugh. Last year, a few juniors approached her to direct our play. This year, more students approached her. Although she applied and was not accepted the previous year, she decided to try again. She won! Mrs. Goff is convinced that she can do the job. "If I didn't feel I could pull it off, I never would have tried in the first place." As Mrs. Goff summed up the situation, this will be her "last hurrah."

I further questioned her as to what she could offer that other candidates could not. Although Mrs. Goff has had no experience directing, she's "turned on, not off." Two professionals will assist her, Helen Ketchum and Joanne Fichtner. "They have directed more plays than Carter has liver pills. If I ever have a question, I can turn to them." Then she smiled, "Give me one week and I can be just as aggravating as a seasoned director could be.

One aspect of my conversation with Mrs. Goff hit me forcibly...she never lost sight of the purpose of the class play..."the seniors should meet and get to know each other. They've been going to school together, at least most of them, all their lives, and never have come to really know one another. The Senior Class play provides such a chance." She doesn't want the seniors to be negative, and urges them to try out for the show. "The worst they can do is enjoy themselves and put out a good finished product."

Self-Confidence

Optimism

Although she's a novice like we are, Mrs. Goff believes she'll have more patience, since she has been on the other side as an actress. The rehearsal schedule will be comparatively flexible. The only problem she foresees is, "Who am I going to get for Stupefying Jones?"

The play the senior class chose was Little Abner. Mrs. Goff was thrilled, feeling this was the best choice. Straight plays have fewer parts compared to musicals. She spoke to a representative from Tams-Witmak, a musical agency which covers the whole country, and inquired as to the best suited, most popular play for a senior class. Little Abner was recommended as being the best choice. This play has 72 parts now, and is expandable, which means at least half of our class will be involved. Everyone ought to try out. Don't let the chance pass you by!

Little Abner can be described as an updated musical. The government needs the most unnecessary area in the U.S. to perform nuclear testing. Deciding upon a backwoodsy town of Dogpatch, the government tells the people of Dogpatch that they should be proud to service God and their country. When the full truth of the swindle dawns upon them, they attempt to discover something which is necessary to save Dogpatch. In their frantic search, they come up with many screwball ideas. During this nonsense, they maintain one tradition, Sadie Hawkins Day. The play is "colorful, fast moving, funny, witty, and ridiculous." The costumes are "outrageous and high-fashioned." As Mrs. Goff stated, "Calvin Klein, eat your heart out."

Set construction will be expertly created by volunteer fathers and friends. Karen Crehan and Jeanne Birmann volunteered to be the vocal coaches. In addition, Karen Crehan will play rehearsal piano. Joe Shoshan, Grace Wilkins and Gordan McCray have also volunteered their services. Jeff Dodge will be the band director, and Scott Ketchem will be the choral director. Mrs. Goff will enthusiastically accept any parental or other contributions. With the help of many individuals, Mrs. Goff's "last hurrah" will be a standing ovation.

Yes, this senior class play is going to be the best one yet!

ST. JUDE

TO HOLY ST. JUDE, Holy St. Jude, Apostle and Martyr, near kinsman of Jesus Christ, rich in miracles, I come to you, who God has given such great power, and urge you to intercede on my behalf with the Lord, our God. In return, I promise to make your name known and cause it to be invoked. St. Jude pray for us and all who invoke your name, amen. Say 3 Our Fathers, 3 Hail Marys, 3 Glorias, publication must be promised. This Novena has never been known to fail. R.M.G. (12/9)

This faucet is playing taps.

Water is a most precious resource, yet we use it like it's going out of style. And it is. Plymouth County is in the middle of its worst drought in years. Of the county's 27 communities, 16 are experiencing water shortages and have instituted restrictions.

Saving water is mostly common sense. Think before you turn on the faucet next time. Let's not blow taps on our water future.

This message was brought to you as a public service by this newspaper and the Plymouth County Development Council

Town meeting scorecard...

The box card for the first session of the special town meeting shows:

—the Penn Central right-of-way will be purchased for $135,000.

—$50,000 was appropriated for aerial spraying of the town for gypsy moths. Sevin will be used.

—various fees charged by town clerk were raised.

—$4,250 was appropriated to reprint the town's bylaws. The bylaws are now out of print.

—$4,300 was appropriated for the operation at the landfill. The amount means there will be two full-time people working at the dump without taking help away from the highway department, as has been the case.

—unpaid bills amounting to $11,487.12 were paid. One of the bills involved $5,601.03 for Burns and Levinson, a Boston law firm, hired to handle the case of the town versus the Lowry Bells' tennis court.

—authorized the town to join the Plymouth County Mosquito Control project at an initial cost of $10,000. That was the only appropriation not recommended by the advisory committee.

The meeting then adjourned for lack of a quorum to Monday, Feb. 15, at the high school to clear up the remaining three articles. The most important issue left for the town is the future of the dump. An article asks about a quarter of a million to keep the present landfill operating in accordance with state regulations.

Getting a gun in Cohasset

Some people in town are armed and ready for their private wars.

At the rate gun permits are issued in town, it seems likely more than 10 percent of the populace have weapons in their homes.

Police Chief John DeBassio interviews every applicant for a gun license.

"Most of what I give are renewals," he said. He guesses there are 30 or 40 licenses a year in town. Pistol permits are good for five years. Rifle cards are a one-time issuance.

The chief points out the problems in having guns in a home to anyone who comes in for a new license or renewal. He says it's a misconception that guns are a protection.

"A lot of people have weapons but unless they are in the hands of a very qualified person, they can be easily used against them.

"The record will support that," the chief said, pointing out the manager of the Cohasset Country Club had a gun. The chief said it was that gun that was used to kill Robert Kemp.

"Guns can be taken away from you or stolen from your home."

DeBassio pointed out that a small girl in Brockton was recently shot accidentally by a family member.

In his interview the chief tries to determine whether the applicant knows enough about firearms to warrant the license.

"I also want to be satisfied if it's a renewal for protection that the reason the license was issued still exists."

He said there are people who he suggests take other precautions, rather than carrying a gun.

"If you need a gun because you carry large sums of money, maybe the answer is to have the money transported some other way," he suggests.

After the interview, applicants are checked out at their proficiency in handling the weapon by the department's armorer, Patrolman Richard Ab-

Town meeting approves Penn Central purchase for $5,000–acre

By Patricia Desmond

The town is buying the three-and-a-quarter mile Penn Central right-of-way for $5,000 an acre.

Just about the time officials were deciding a time to adjourn the special town meeting Monday, the 200th voter showed up to make a quorum.

The start, an hour and ten minutes late, was filled with affirmative actions. Nothing that came up for action failed to pass, even the one appropriation that was without the blessing of the advisory committee.

Lack of quorum left six articles undiscussed.

A move made by Osborne Ingram, advisory board member and an abutter to the right-of-way, to put off purchase of part of the property failed.

Ingram hoped to purchase the right-of-way from Beechwood Street to the Scituate line.

The selectmen, advisory board and planning board all asked for the full $135,000 price to buy the land from a spot 1,000 feet east of the Hingham town line to the Scituate line.

With Ingram's offer to give the perpetual and free utility easements over the land he was interested in buying, the price would have decreased to $112,500.

Judge Frank Murray, who is also an abutter to the strip, spoke about the Penn Central land being a public use corridor for many years. He abutts more than 200 feet of the line and also contacted the railroad last spring when the for sale signs appeared.

He said the full property should be acquired by the town and preserved for public use.

Barbara Power, planning board chairman, said that if the land were split up now it would be impossible for the town to ever acquire a similar strip, town-wide, providing access.

In the past the land was either overpriced or unavailable, she pointed out.

Questions about the first 1,000 feet from the Hingham line were never answered. Officials feel the parcel is owned by the state or federal government.

A question of the purchase price was answered with information about the bids already received by the railroad. Ingram and others are willing to purchase the 66-foot wide strip at the railroad's price.

It was entertaining at home

Cohasset entertained this week, opening some of the loveliest homes in town to public inspection.

The result was a great success for the Community Garden Club of Cohasset despite the foul and wet weather.

The women of the club smiled graciously throughout the long day, providing everything necessary for a day that will long be remembered by women who came from as far away as New Jersey for the spirit of Christmas house tour.

The houses along the route were varied.

Home number 1 is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Henry. The house at 50 Lantern Lane, built in 1970, is a Saltbox Colonial on a tranquil country lane.

A comfortable, elegant and authentic Williamsburg colonial reproduction, the attention to detail is obvious, the unexpected in this day and age, when one studies the beautiful wainscotings, moldings and cupboards. The dining room centerpiece is a fragrant family tradition, as is the use of two Christmas trees, a "children's tree" in the family room, and a more sophisticated version in the formal living room.

House Number 2 is that of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Meallo. Located at 187 South Main Street, built around 1860 and purchased in 1979, this interesting home has been completely renovated by the owners themselves. The home of a dedicated collector and restorer of interesting Victoriana, most of the pieces have been gleaned from yard sales of those less knowledgable than our hostess.

Second mailing

Residents who already have paid subscriptions will receive two week's credit while the paper was mailed free.

Cohasset's week ...

Elderly housing dinner

The Cohasset American Legion gave a Christmas dinner for the residents of the elderly housing project on Elm Street last Saturday night.

According to Selectman Rocco Laugelle "a great time" was had by all.

About 60 residents attended the catered dinner, prepared by Strawberry Parfait.

The Legion bought in a pianist and young singers for after dinner entertainment.

A&P now closed

The old A&P was boarded up last Friday.

Part-time workers at the supermarket were let go, most others were given the chance to transfer to other stores, none of which are within easy commuting distance.

The only A&P between here and Cape Cod is in Duxbury.

Fees are raised

A series of fees for documents handled by the town clerk were raised this week at the special town meeting.

The list, which was already printed in the Mariner, was accepted as proposed in the warrant.

Among the fees now in effect are charges of $10 for recording a podiatrist, $10 for a business certificate, $5 for changing a business certificate, $2 for a marriage record, $100 to license a junk dealer, $2 for a voter's card and so on.

Recreational income up

James J. Collins, Chairman of the Norfolk County Commissioners, says income for the Wollaston Recreation Facility for this past season was a record $238,817, an increase of 33 percent of last year's income of $179,056.

"Operating deficits at Wollaston are a thing of the past," stated Collins. "This beautiful 90-acre recreational facility in its fifth year of operation is now and will be in the future self-sustaining at no operating cost to Norfolk County taxpayers. It normally takes up to five years before a golf course becomes profitable according to the National Golf Foundation and this is Wollaston's fifth full year."

The Norfolk County Commissioners 1981/82 budget in the state legislature for approval is pegged at $231,000, a reduction of almost 20 percent from the previous year. "At the current rate of growth," according to John C. Nourse, Administrator of the WRF, "the facility will realize an operating surplus of over $30,000 for the current fiscal year."

Special permit granted

The zoning board of appeals recently decided to grant a special permit to Charles Wills, trustee of Sylvan Realty Trust, for construction of a house off Lamberts Lane.

The house is going up in the flood plain but the testimony before the board indicated the land is not subject to flooding and is not unsuitable because of drainage conditions.

The conservation commission has already written an order of conditions for the work on the lot, which will allow 4,000 square feet to be filled.

The decision on the permit application was signed by the zoning board members, Robert Booth, chairman, John Rousseau and William Kendrick. It was filed Dec. 3 with town clerk.

State wants answer

The state is pressing the town for answers on the lack of progress with the problems at the present sewage plant.

The sewage treatment plant was declared as overtaxed by the state several years ago and a suit filed against the town.

Janet Daggett of the sewer commission said her board would be discussing the state's letter this week.

Arthur Clark, executive secretary to the selectmen, told Assistant Town Counsel Richard Henderson he could see the selectmen's copy of the certified letter soon.

"They want the sewer commission to respond to what they are doing about the deficiencies in the plant," Clark explained.

The sewer commission has been working toward construction of a new sewage treatment plant that could handle the amount of flow generated by the town. But that construction hinges on a federal grant.

Hike in mooring fees sought

Selectmen want the annual town meeting to authorize a $3 charge for mooring fees, recommended by the Harbor Study Committee.

Though the mooring fee of $1.50 per linear foot of each boat was not increased, there will be an additional charge for stickers so we should move toward a stricter enforcement of the collection procedure.

Harbormaster Harry Ritter said the delinquency rate of payments is about 50 percent and much of his time is spent trying to enforce the rules. "I'll get a list of who hasn't paid, go out and pull up their mooring — after several warning letters — and then they show me that they've just paid and I have to go out and re-set the mooring," he said.

The proposal means that boat owners would receive colored stickers to be affixed to their craft as proof of payment for their mooring fee each year. Payment would be due in June and stickers must be attached by July 1.

The main purpose of sticker use is to easily identify freeloaders said Harbor Study Committee Chairman Charles Fink.

Selectman Rocky Laugelle frowned in regard to the extra sticker charge. "The public has to pay again. People are sick of it. People are saying, 'What are we getting for our tax dollar?' " said Laugelle.

Selectmen also endorsed a committee suggestion to allow commercial firms to perform mooring repairs and inspections in the harbor.

Ritter said that he could not do the work for pay because it would be a conflict of interest. "Somebody has to service the moorings. It's not fair to have a neighboring boat break free and damage other boats," he said.

The Harbor Study Committee suggested a $10 fee for the inspection which is supposed to take place every five years.

Selectmen said both the sticker charge and inspection fee proposals would be included as an article in the annual town meeting warrant.

Getting a gun...

badessa.

The chief said there are a number of people who come in looking for a license who decide against pressing the application after talking with him.

"For people with young children in the home, it's especially dangerous."

He said he doesn't think the town is unique with the number of people wanting gun licenses.

"We have a lot of executives, some people in business for themselves, even if the rate were to be a little higher, I wouldn't be too concerned," he said, talking about the number of permits in town.

As yet he hasn't actually turned anyone down as applying inappropriately.

"Most after they understand the impact will think it over again. A lot change their minds and don't apply," he said.

Thoreau landscape award

The Henry David Thoreau award for excellence in landscape was given to a Scituate garden center for designing the grounds at the home of Diana and Lowry Bell on the end of Gammons Road.

The award was given to the Kennedy Garden Center for their work. Examples of the work sent in to qualify for the award included the house with its controversial tennis court plus several other area grounds projects.

Aaron River Road mix-up causes problems

By Donna Cogliano

AARON RIVER ROAD is the scene of quiet, new charm in the Beechwood section. Nestled near the backyard of Wompatuck State Park, the neighborhood boasts two houses of the same number. (Derr photo)

It must have seemed similar to an episode from the Twilight Zone, when the newly married Mr. and Mrs. Jack Richmond returned home from their honeymoon in September to learn that a neighbor, six houses away, had the exact same street address as their new home on Aaron River Road.

The Krueger residence also displays the 40 Aaron River Road address which has caused mix-ups for visitors and mailmen during the past four months.

The Richmonds asked selectmen to rectify the situation last Wednesday night following a nightmarish incident which occurred two weeks ago.

On a Friday night at about 6:30 p.m., Lily Richmond called the police because two men were attempting to break into her home. Fortunately bright lights scared the intruders away while police had responded to the other 40 Aaron River Road instead.

Jack Richmond arrived home a half hour after his wife called the police. He called the police to find out why they had not responded — he was told that the call was unfounded.

With two prowlers on her deck that night, "The inconvenience turned into something very scary," said Lily Richmond, who was home alone at the time.

Mrs. Linda Krueger said her home was assigned the address four-and-one-half years ago through the post office, but not from the town. There were only three families in the area at that time, and the Krueger's was the first house assigned a number said Lily Krueger.' She said it was then, that they realized, they lived on Aaron River Road. "Because our front door faces Aaron River Road we were given that address rather than the Flintlock Ridge Road address."

Mrs. Krueger said, "We were surprised we weren't notified about this meeting (with selectmen)."

Andrew Krueger said the assessors sent a letter two months ago offering them the address of 46 Flintlock Ridge Road.

As a result of Wednesday night's meeting the selectmen will have the assessors renotify the Kruegers about taking an address of either, 67 Aaron River Road or 46 Flintlock Ridge Road.

Chairman Henry Ainslie said, "If Mr. Krueger doesn't accept, we will have to take action. I think it's the town's responsibility."

Also present at the meeting was the builder of the Richmond home, Joe Crossen. Crossen said he was granted the building permit for the 40 Aaron River Road address in August.

In a telephone interview, Andrew Krueger said he sympathizes with the Richmonds' situation, but, "I don't think we should suffer because of the town's error."

"We would be more than willing for a change of address so long as we are helped with the clerical expenses involved," he said.

Krueger said he hadn't worried too much about the situation until last week when his mail was withheld at the post office.

Currently the Kruegers have been using four different addresses. Krueger said 40 Aaron River Road is the address the town gave us, while the tax bill goes to 46 Flintlock Ridge Road, voting material goes to 46 Aaron River Road and the assessors have offered usage of a 67 Aaron River Road address.

Krueger said one of the first things his daughter Bonnie learned as she started kindergarten this year, was her home address, 40 Aaron River Road.

"It would be terrible if she had to learn a new address," he said.

Lily Richmond said they learned about the other Krueger address through their paperboy in September. She said it's a hazardous situation and an inconvenience for both parties.

A.G. investigates charges of phony casino signatures

The state attorney general is looking into a charge that signatures on letters supporting the Hull casino bill are not valid.

But for now at least the A.G.'s office is refusing all comment.

Is it a crime to send a letter supporting a legislative issue in someone else's name? No one seems to know.

Rep. Thomas Brownell of Quincy discovered the problem when he sent out replies to some 60 of his constituents who were included in the batch of form letters supporting the gambling bill.

Ten out of the 60 or close to 20 percent turned out to be phony. Brownell's aid explained that the representative's letter outlining his opposition to the casino bill sent back to these 60 people brought 10 quick replies that the person named had never signed the letter.

The Brownell letters were delivered to the A.G.'s office late last night, according to the press spokesman. The 5,000 other letters delivered to other legislators are still scattered about the State House and as far as anyone knows, those letters are still unchecked.

Sen. Allan McKinnon's office has thousands of the form letters that were delivered there in two huge shopping bags.

One of his aides said the letters would have been acknowledged eventually with a detailed statement of the Senator's own opposition to the bill.

"I don't know what we'll do now," she said referring to the possibility of forged signatures.

The people who gathered the signatures say any fakery is as upsetting to them as it is to the anti-casino people.

There was no check on signers identities as the letters were gathered. But then the casino proponents point out there is seldom any check on people who sign nomination papers or petitions or other such devices.

☐Seaman Recruit Mark F. Rattenbury has been chosen Honorman for Company 372, Great Lakes, Illinois. Mark, a 1981 graduate of Cohasset High School, will graduate, this week, from basic training at the naval training center.

The certificate of honor which Mark received is based on individual performance in all phases of basic training. After graduation, he will attend electrician mates school and then on to a nuclear power school in Orlando, Florida. Mark is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rattenbury of Briarwood Lane.

☐Mrs. Francis Antoine needs someone to drive her home once a month on Friday after her dialysis treatment. She can be picked up at 1053 Commonwealth Avenue after 4:45 p.m.

Mrs. Antoine especially wants to thank all who have driven her the past four years while she has been going for treatment. She notes that her transportation was originally arranged for her by Brewster Pattyson of the Council on Aging but that several of the men who would drive her home have now retired.

Anyone who is able to provide this important service may call her at 383-0288 or A.J. Antoine at 383-1527.

☐Children at the Joseph Osgood School will be instructed on the various hazards associated with winter play, this Friday, during a special safety program. With what looks like a real New England Winter ahead this sounds like a great idea.

☐Cohasset Girl Scouts are really striving to spread the holiday cheer, this year, and on Monday, they will be carolling throughout the village. Afterwards, they all plan to meet at the community center for hot chocolate.

☐Congratulations to Deer Hill "Musician of the Month," Steven Myers. Steven, a 6th grade student, was chosen on the basis of home practice, class performance and general musicianship.

☐Cohasset Boy Scouts will be spreading Christmas cheer at one of the local nursing homes. They are also busy collecting canned goods to be distributed to the needy.

☐For everyone who enjoyed the recent Stroller put on by the Village Merchants Association, word has it that plans are already underway for a repeat of the popular event, again next year. "There is no reason why it shouldn't become an annual tradition," says Ellen Morrissey. Cohasset with its straight expanse of shops in an attractive village setting really lends itself for the Stoller, explains Morrissey, who notes that the idea came from the well-known event on Nantucket. There's also the added attraction that those attending need never worry having to spend time snowbound on an island in the middle of the winter, as happened, this year, on Nantucket.

Ellen, propietor of the Tides Inn, and her good friend Tina Watson, owner of the Potter Loft, have worked hard together to create a picturebook background for the holiday season.

☐Robert Booth of Cohasset, a student at Ripon College, is one of the producers of a film to be distributed to public and commercial television on the "Little White Schoolhouse," a building near the college community in Wisconsin where 50 members of the community met in 1854 to discuss strategy of abolishing slavery.

The meeting is regarded as the birth of the Republican Party.

Booth was on the fund-raising staff of the production.

Dog officer needed

With all the talk we've heard about the dog problems in town, we hope the selectmen will proceed with all possible speed to appoint a new dog officer.

Richard Yocum, the dog officer, is now a police officer. He did a good job, according to all reports, but the time has come for him to move away from settling animal disputes and on to settling the problems of crime and neighborhood arguments.

We don't think it's a good idea to combine the two jobs.

If it is possible to combine the jobs, perhaps the town could drop the dog officer's salary from the new budget, letting the police take over the work all together and providing more money for the capture and boarding of strays.

It seems the position of dog officer is not terribly attractive. The human part of the problem is far from easily dealt with.

But the job is part time and comes with a new telephone answering machine. Yocum told selectmen earlier in the fall that his budget only allows him to pick up 11 animals a month. That translates into less than three a week.

We hasten to point out that Yocum was not responsible for that budget. He brought the matter up as he asked the selectmen to institute a travel charge for dogs picked up by the dog officer in the hopes of increasing the amount of money available for hauling the unleashed and unwatched animals to the kennel in Marshfield that serves as the town pound.

Mooring bills

The idea of making sure mooring fees are paid for any boat moored in the harbor seems so simple we thought it was already in practice.

We too endorse the new plan to give boat owners a colored sticker to show they have paid the mooring fee.

We would also like to suggest another idea developed recently in neighboring Scituate. There the officials plan to make sure that the boat excise tax for the previous year has been paid before assigning a harbor mooring.

The boat excise tax is one more way of funding the operation in the harbor. The state's new rules require half of the excise tax be placed in a fund earmarked for waterways.

Once the boat owners realize the various fees are being enforced, we're sure they'll pay more promptly.

The facts of life

By Paul Steven Stone

A man I know recently went to Heaven. And once there, of course, he met up with his father who at the time was negotiating the eleventh hole on his personal golf course.

"Hi, Randy," the father said, noticing his son walk on to the teeing green. "I'll be with you in a second."

"Fine, Dad," Randy said simply.

He watched patiently as his father closed his eyes and swung at the ball.

"Dad?" the son gasped, shocked to see the club strike the ball dead center for a perfect drive. Following the high and far reaching arc, he could see that the ball was flying a true course towards the putting green, and involuntarily he emitted a strained, elongated groan that exploded into a cry of disbelief as the ball fell to the green and rolled into the cup.

Turning to his father whose eyes were still closed, he shouted, "What was that all about?"

"The hole in one?" his father asked with tired assurance. Opening his eyes, he turned to his son.

"I didn't expect to see you here so soon." He walked over and kissed the younger man. "How's your mother? Sheila and the kids?"

"Mom's okay," Randy answered. "I don't know about Sheila though. She took my illness pretty hard. She was never a strong woman. She always looked to me to handle things like money, making plans, making decisions. I'm afraid she's in for a rough time." As he spoke he followed his father to a nearby golf cart.

"She'll get a job," his father said with no emotion.

"I suppose she'll have to," Randy answered with concern, "if she can."

"Oh she'll make out," his father said. "Get in," He nodded to the seat beside him. "The twelfth hole is a real beaut: two sand traps and a water hazard. Any other course and you'd get a par four."

Randy stared silently at his father, unable to believe the older man's lack of concern for the struggles of those he had left behind, of those whom he had once loved.

"What's happened to you, Dad?" he finally asked.

"Happened to me?" the father repeated. "You can see what's happened to me. I've come to Paradise. I've gotten everything I once wanted. Afterwards I'll show you my new Mercedes. Remember how I used to pore over the new car catalogs?"

"Yeah," the son remembered with a smile. "And then you'd go around for weeks cursing our old Chevy."

"Your mother didn't do so badly," the father pointed out. "I mean after I left her."

"It took a while, though. She was pretty miserable. I did what I could, but it was still..."

"A struggle?"

"Yeah, exactly. It was almost two years before she got clear of the debts."

"Here we are," the father announced, pulling to a stop on the lush green. He got out of the cart and retrieved his ball from the cup.

"Aren't you going to write down your score?" the son asked.

"I know my score," his father replied drily.

The two men walked slowly under a canopy of blossom-studded trees to the teeing green of the next hole.

"You're wondering why I don't seem concerned about Sheila, and what she and the kids will have to go through now that you've joined me here," the older man said. "You're also wondering what Paradise can do to a man to make him so callous."

Randy noticed the ironic note that his father lent to the word "paradise." He laughed uneasily.

"I guess I'm new here," he said. "Nothing seems to make sense at the moment."

His father walked up to the tee and deposited his ball, saying as he did, "Well, in Paradise you get the things you've always wanted — everything, no exceptions. What you valued most in life is what you get in Paradise."

Closing his eyes, he swung at the ball. Again it was a perfect strike, and the ball like a homing pigeon sought out the far distant twelfth hole as if there was no place else in the world to go. Opening his eyes, the father continued to speak without looking to see where his ball had gone.

"The struggles are all behind you here," he explained softly. "Those that valued money during their lives get all they want — cars, houses, pools, fancy clothes; you only have to have valued those things and you get them."

"Then what's wrong, Dad? Why do you seem so... depressed?"

"If you're lucky enough to have valued beauty, to have felt nourishment from the little pleasures in life — a sunrise on the ocean, the birds stopping at your backyard feeder, a Beethoven symphony, the laughter in a child's face, then life doesn't seem so different here in Paradise; not really different. All those struggles you had when you were alive seem to have had their place in the scheme of things, for it was through them that you decided what was important, what you valued. It's not the struggles that count, but what you struggled for. Sheila will be all right. One way or another she'll come through."

"You make me wonder what she'll have waiting for her when she does," Randy said, confused. "What will she find in Paradise?"

"It's simple," his father explained. "Either heaven or hell. Let's go back to the golf cart." With a sigh, he added, "I've still got six more holes left to go."

Dear Ann, my kids are being rotten

DEAR ANN LANDERS:

My kids are being rotten to me again. The last time I wrote you advised me to stay at home and work things out. Well, if things don't work out pretty soon, I'm going to take all the change I can lay my hands on and move into a phone booth.

All the other mothers' kids let them use the phone once in a while, but I don't get any telephone privileges at all. It isn't fair.

Last night my friend, Fauna, called to tell me that a meeting had been cancelled. Kevin answered the phone and when he gave it to me had his hand over the mouthpiece.

"It's Mrs. Longwind," he said. "But please keep it short. I'm expecting a call from Kim.

"Can't I tell her about the mugging I saw yesterday?" I asked. "And anyway, you just talked to Kim for three hours."

He sighed patiently. "That was deciding where we're going tonight. Now she has to phone her friend, Paula. Paula and Jim are going out with us. So after she talks to Paula and Paula talks to Jim, I have to talk to Kim about what time we're going."

I took the phone, and Fauna was positively snappish with me. "What took you so long? My kids will only let me have the phone for 10 minutes and I have seven other calls to make. I don't suppose you could make some for me?"

"I would," I told her, "but Kevin's expecting a call from Kim and Breida hasn't had her turn to talk to Ann yet tonight."

Skipper placed a hand on my arm. "She didn't talk to Ann yet? They always talk for hours. How can I find out when my soccer practice is? And I want to call Scott. His father has tickets to a wrestling match, and he said I could go. If he can't get the phone he'll probably call someone else. Ma! Are you still talking to someone?"

"Still trying," I snarled. "Listen, Fauna, your kids won't let you talk now, and my kids won't let me talk now. Why don't we set our alarms for 4:30 a.m.?" I hung up quietly.

Breida rushed into the room. "Mother! Kevin says he needs the phone. If he gets on with Kim, I'll never get to Ann, and I have to know what she's wearing to school tomorrow."

The phone rang, and Brieda snatched it like a survivalist reaching for dried food.

"Hello? Ann?" she placed the receiver on the table, an expression of startled disbelief on her face. "For heaven's sake — of all the crazy things. It's for Daddy."

When the alarm went off at 4:30, I tiptoed to the telephone and lifted the receiver. Larry's voice came through the ear piece.

"Look, Andy, I couldn't talk earlier. How about if everyone comes to my house tomorrow after supper. Frank can bring his Sound City amplifier and we can jam for a couple of hours."

Ann, do you know where there's a phone booth for rent, cheap?

T.M. okays $50,000 to spray gypsy moths

If nothing were done about the gypsy moth infestation, there would be millions of the wiggley creatures defoliating the town next spring, according to calculations supplied by Peter Laugelle, tree and park superintendent.

After debate on the options — use of Sevin versus use of a bacteria known to cause disease in the gypsy moth — town meeting voted Monday to spend $50,000 for aerial spraying of the trees.

There is some question whether the Bancroft Bird Sanctuary will be sprayed with the toxic Sevin or with a less toxic substance. There is also some question whether the state will spray the more than 200 acres of Wompatuck State Park.

Hingham recently voted to approve the spraying, no funds were allocated, however. Norwell will discuss the spraying at a special town meeting soon. Scituate has made no plans to spray.

Laugelle told the voters that what happened last spring was something he had never envisioned. Last spring the town sprayed the roadsides by truck for the gypsy moths. Private property was not sprayed.

He said they decided to go to the overall spraying because he wasn't sure what would happen to the town's trees if they are twice defoliated.

He said the Trustees of Reservations are the only agency in town to oppose the use of Sevin, which he called a proven product. His own experience is that the product kills 80 percent of the eggs. The other possible product kills 50 percent of the eggs and costs more.

The bird sanctuary may still be sprayed with Sevin if the state declares the 238 acres to be infested, Laugelle said.

The spraying will happen two mornings in May from 5:30 to 8 a.m.

School will be started late on those days to make sure children are not on the streets while the helicopter is spraying the trees.

The late start has already been agreed to by School Supt. Eugene Crowell, the voters were told.

Another potential problem, bees, can be solved by keeping the bees in their hives those two mornings. The product dries in an hour and then will not harm the bees, Laugelle said.

It will kill gypsy moths for two weeks.

Barbara Kearn of the board of health said her board could not recommend the aerial spraying because of unanswered questions about the product.

Laugelle said there has never been a proven health hazard to humans.

He pointed out that areas of town like Forest Avenue have 500 egg masses an acre and each egg mass will produce 300 to 700 gypsy moths.

He said Sevin has been marketed for 20 years.

Charlotte Leland said the Audubon Society recommends against spraying and favors use of a baccilus.

Lot Bates told the meeting his uncle, Howard Bates, was tree warden back 30 or so years when the last heavy infestation happened.

"They sprayed the town with a two engine fixed wing aircraft. I didn't hear of anyone being harmed and I'm sure we used something more lethal than this," he said. Bates said the spraying would not be done within 300 feet of the water supply.

Charles Gainor registered complaints against using anything that would harm a living tissue. He backed the Audubon Society's recommendation.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Selectmen's briefs...

Officers appointed

Selectmen appointed two new police officers last Wednesday night to fill vacancies on the force. John H. Small and Richard Yocum started work this past week.

The new patrolmen are both members of the permanent intermittent and auxiliary police rosters. Of six certified Civil Service candidates, four withdrew from consideration. The board's vote was unanimous.

Patrolman Richard Yocum will also continue with his dog officer duties until selectmen appoint a replacement.

Traffic signal updating

Selectmen approved a traffic signal updating project for the intersection of Ripley Road and Sohier Street.

Executive secretary to selectmen, Arthur Clark said work is scheduled to begin in the summer. A traffic signal light will extend on an arm over the intersection and push buttons will be made available for pedestrians.

Wine tasting regulations

Selectmen unanimously voted to adopt stiffer wine tasting regulations last Wednesday night which were recommended by police chief John DeBassio.

DeBassio said, "After a review of the existing Retail Package Store Regulations and the proposed 'Wine Tasting Guidelines,' I suggest that the existing regulations be amended by inserting the following:"

A Wine Tasting may be conducted on the premises providing that the following terms and conditions are strictly adhered to:

a. There shall be no charge or fee of any kind to a participant in a Wine Tasting.

b. A Wine Tasting shall consist of a participant's sampling at one time of up to five (5) varieties of wine.

c. An individual serving of wine may not exceed one (1) fluid ounce.

d. Each wine tasting shall be conducted under the supervision of either a representative of the wine wholesaler/distributor or an employee of the licensed premises designated by the manager for that purpose; if a licensee chooses to offer wine tasting under the supervision of a representative of the wine wholesaler/distributor only, he shall be responsible for any violation of this regulation to the same extent that he would be had he designated an employee to supervise.

e. The wine tasting shall take place in a designated area of the licensed premises and this area shall not be left unattended at any time during the period when wine tasting is being offered.

f. Individual servings of wine shall not be poured except during an individual Wine Tasting; and servings not consumed during that time shall be promptly disposed of at the conclusion of the Wine Tasting.

g. Wine Tasting shall be permitted only between the hours of 1:00 p.m. and 8:00 p.m.

h. All other statutes and regulations shall apply and remain in full force and effect as they pertain to minors.

Reduction denied

Selectmen denied the Village Fair Committee a reduction in fees for use of town hall. The board's vote was 2 to 1 with Rocky Laugelle opposed to the decision.

State aid accepted

Selectmen accepted $23,021 in state aid for "construction, reconstruction and improvements on all approved public ways which qualify under the State Aid Highway Guidelines."

Free cash in surplus

The town has quite a bundle of free cash left even after the spending at the special town meeting this week.

Jean Cotton, chairman of the advisory board, said the town raised close to the limit of its taxation last spring, using the regulations of Proposition 2½.

"Since then we've received additional state aid," Mrs. Cotton said.

There was $483,000 in surplus revenue before town meeting began spending. The majority of the money under discussion involved capital outlays for purchase of the Penn Central right-of-way and work at the dump. Neither cut into the immediate tax levy or free cash greatly. Penn Central will be handled with a five-year bond. The dump, should it be approved, would be paid for with a 10-year bond.

The town still has well over $300,000 in surplus funds.

Only a few years ago, the town kept $800,000 in free cash.

Free parking for the 'T-less'?

Somebody in the legislature wants to work out a deal for use of the MBTA garage. He thinks commuters from towns with no MBTA service should get free use of the T garages.

The plan brought out last week by Rep. Philip Johnston of Marshfield will be a part of the thousands of ideas gone over by the legislators in the next session.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said her first push would be to get Cohasset completely out of the T district. She's been filing a bill to do just that every year since she won election.

The idea of free parking "would be better than nothing but it wouldn't help the majority of taxpayers in the 23 cities and towns that pay assessments and get no service," she said.

She pointed out Cohasset's own T assessment began modestly in 1965 at about $6,000.

"I'd have to check to get the exact figure but it's $120,000 to $200,000 a year now," she said.

Rep. Murray strongly supports the T bill of Rep. Louis Nickenello which would provide more state aid for the financially troubled T.

"That way we could get out without further burdening the other communities," she said.

But as far as new expenses go, Rep. Murray said she doesn't plan to vote for many added state expenditures.

"You can't do that and say 'no' to a tax bill and I see one coming in this year," she said.

Her attitude toward state spending is that it's time to cut back on the size of government. She wants departments that overlap eliminated and some of the state's higher paying management positions abolished.

"I'm a taxpayer too," she said.

In that line, she plans to vote against the Tregor bill. She won't agree to the parking excise tax that is included with the Tregor bill.

She pointed out that Boston's Mayor Kevin White, who is pushing for Tregor to help the city, wasn't willing to cut his public relations staff when he made the cuts of city workers recently.

"That really did it for me," she said. "And here I sit with 8,000 state workers gone. The majority of them were the $11,000 to $13,000 workers not the $20,000 and $30,000. We should cut back on the Secretariats."

"I don't know why we can't apply the same sense in government as we do in our homes."

Cohasset dump sold for $5 million

The dump at Cohasset Heights will soon be sold for $5 million, according to the owner.

The imminent sale makes members of the health board even more reluctant to consider the facility as an alternative to the Cedar Street landfill.

James Tyerar, who has owned and operated the dump for the past five years, has made no secret he would like to sell the 48-acre landfill operation to the town or to a regional muncipal group. But there has been little interest expressed in purchase.

The town was considering an offer for disposal of trash — should the present dump close down — at $10.50 a ton but members of the board of health wanted some guarantee of the tipping price over a longer haul.

"One year just isn't enough," Board member Marilyn Sweeney said recently. "The price could double in a year unless we have some guarantee."

Prospects bright for girls basketball...wrestling

By Rob Tis

The girls' varsity basketball team is looking forward to a good season this year. Coach Bill Fallen has spent much time and thought in preparing his team for a successful season. Two starting forwards, Angela O'Brien and Kate Salerno, were hurt with pre-season injuries but are planning to be back within a couple of weeks. Seniors Madeline Roy, Laurie Sandblom and Laura Hines will be starting in the forward and center positions. While senior Karen Froio and junior Gia Barresi will start as guards. Also adding to this team's power are seniors Stacy Thompson and Sue O'Rourke, along with juniors Alara O'Brien, Katie Clinton, Elizabeth Glasfield, Beverly Mullaney, Kristin Wilkin and last (but not least) Jill Grant. Sophomore Jenny Dickerman will also be seeing some action this year. Their season began Tuesday against Duxbury and Friday the game will also be away against Hanover. Monday, Dec. 21 will be the girls' first home game. Please come and give them your support. You won't be disappointed.

WRESTLING TEAM

The wrestling team will be back again, led by veteran co-captains J.T. Price and Torin Sweeney.

This is the first year the team will be in its own league and hope to conquer such dynasties as Duxbury and Rockland to take the league championship.

Starting for the Skipper matmen at 100 lbs. is "Iggy" Igo. Eighth grader John Jackson has a hold on the 107 lb. class. Sophomore Lee is the premier grappler in the 114 class with Kirk Sweeney handling the duties at 121. Veterans Ron Bergenhien and Torin Sweeney will compete in the 128 and 134 lb. classes respectively. In the 140 lb. category, Gordon Ricketts is the ruler. Mike "Stickman" Ellis has a wrap on 147 with J.T. Price grappling at 157. Football superstar Bob "hands" Meers will handle the 169 class and Bob "Mad Dog" Donahue will smother all comers in the heavyweight class.

The Skippers will have had their first meet by the time you read this, but there are still plenty more to come. Give the school a call to find out when the next one is and come up and give the ascetic matmen your support.

At the annual Gridiron dinner

Recreation report...

By John Worley

Due to budget restrictions placed upon the Recreation Department there will be no special vacation programs this Christmas vacation. Also, the Recreation Office will be closed from Thursday, Dec. 24, to Wednesday, Dec. 30.

Basketball Leagues and Street Hockey Leagues will not meet during the holidays. That is; Saturday, Dec. 26, and Saturday, Jan. 2. League Play for both sports will commence Saturday, Jan. 9.

Skating lessons at Cohasset Winter Garden will not meet Sunday, Dec. 27. Classes will resume again Sunday, Jan. 3. Also, registrations for new classes, scheduled to begin Sunday, Jan. 17, will be accepted by calling the Recreation Office, at 383-6791, starting Monday, Jan. 4. Further information will be available for program registrations.

DEC. 19, SKI TRIP

The Ski Trip for Dec. 19 is full at this time: 44 youths will be going to Crochet Mountain that day. Additional day trips will be scheduled for later on in the season.

A few openings remain in the Friday afternoon Ski Lessons at Blue Hills. Ski lessons are open to children and youth aged 5-19. If interested call the Recreation Office immediately for further details and/or registration.

SAFE SKATING GUIDELINES

There are specific ways to test ice for safety. Throwing rocks, branches, sticks, etc. is not the way to properly test ice for safety. Most debris thrown out on the ice will eventually freeze into the ice surface making it dangerous for skaters.

Please do not throw debris on the ice surface but rather test the ice on the edges of the skating area, by carefully stepping out about 6'' to 8'' proceeding carefully out to about 2' if ice appears safe. Chip ice with tool or stick until you can get a rough idea of how thick the ice is. You should always have another person with you when you do this.

REMEMBER SAFE ICE STANDARDS

The ice is safe for single skaters at 0-30 - 1 3/4 inches, 30-40 degrees - 2 3/4 inches, 40-50 degrees - 6 inches.

The ice is safe for couples at 0-30 degrees - 2 3/4 inches, 30-40 degrees - 3 3/4 inches, 40-50 degrees - 8 inches.

The ice is safe for crowds at 0-30 degrees - 3 3/4 inches, 30-40 degrees - 4 3/4 inches, 40-50 degress - 12 inches.

STAY OFF SALT WATER ICE COMPLETELY!

Girl's J.V. basketball looking good

The J.V. girls' basketball team is also looking good. Coach John Anderson is preparing his team of freshman and sophomores for the big season ahead. Sophomore Trina Moore and freshman Janet D. Gerolino and Tracy Fitzpatrick will head this team through a successful season along with sophomores Kim Willet, Jackie Plante, Nina Atkinson, Maura Corkery, Kathy Branagan and freshman Krissie Pompeo, Carla Lucas, Jillian Ayer, Vicki Spooner, Kristen O'Brien, Sarah Seavey, Jill Nedow, Tracy Vecting and Kerry O'Brien. This enthusiastic team is almost the exact same junior high team that dominated the league last year.

Entertaining at home...

There is a huge old butcher block table from a shop in Boston's North End, and the beautiful "Barber's cabinet" now in a bathroom.

Number 3 on the tour is the Lothrop House at 14 Summer Street.

Built in 1823 and acquired in 1975 by the Cohasset Historical Society, Lothrop House has been completely renovated from cellar to the attic.

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset has undertaken the job of restoring and rebuilding the gardens, granite walls and terraces, and has already spent over $9,000 on this massive ongoing project.

The house is now used for meetings, wedding receptions and parties and is the location of Historical Genealogical Archives and Library as well as many of the Society's Antiques.

House Number 4, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Sturdy, is at 270 Jerusalem Road.

An early 1900's Georgian Mansion high on a hill with a view of the ocean, it was built as an elegant summer home around the turn of the century. This was one of the original homes in the neighborhood with gorgeous moldings and wainscotings throughout. The unusual woodwork in the entrance hall is carved teak.

The enormous pale green and white dining room is all ready for a delicious Holiday Dinner Party... cooked, no doubt with recipes from our own cookbook: "Cohasset Entertains."

House Number 5 is that of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Peters, Jr. at 498 Jerusalem Road.

A Victorian cottage, in the grand manner, overlooking the ocean, it was built in 1872 with a 1981 kitchen.

Built in the days when money was no object, this is one of two "Twin" houses set side by side on a hill overlooking the rocky coast and ocean.

The new owners have lived here less than a year. Mrs. Peters' business is furniture restoration and she has furnished it with antiques — many showing her expertise.

The 14' ceilings, raised oak paneling in the living room and the Italian tile dining room floor is exquisite.

Number 6 belongs to Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey R. Power at 74 Beach Street.

Family room and kitchen are 1981 vintage.

A center entrance Colonial farmhouse overlooking Little Harbor, the house is from 1825.

Mrs. Power is the recipient of many prestigious awards for Flower Arranging, Landscaping and Horticulture, including the John Taylor Arms Award for the Highest scoring arrangement in the design section of the 1981 New England Flower Show. In her gracious home overlooking Little Harbor, she emphasizes many ideas and techniques for holiday decorating.

Number 7 is the Second Congregational Church at 43 Highland Avenue.

A Country Georgian New England Village Church overlooking the Common, it was constructed in 1928.

Designed by the early architect Asher Benjamin, so as to be able to be built by country carpenters, the church is most famous for its beautiful two stage steeple, arched and shuttered windows in the sanctuary, and its banner weathervane, one of three on the Common. The others are on the Town Hall and the First Parish Church.

Some unpaid bills meet opposition

There were at least 10 people at the special town meeting this week opposed to paying some old bills.

Questions that preceded the vote indicated the matter in dispute was the legal case against the tennis court at the end of Gammons Road.

It was brought out that the $5,600 bill to Burns and Levinson brings the town's legal payments to date to about $10,000.

Charles DeSantis said he was against paying the bill which he sees as having few ramifications for the rest of the town.

"I don't think this is in the interest of me or anyone else in town except the ones involved," DeSantis said.

Town Counsel Blake Thaxter said the unpaid bill was to defend the town in the civil rights suit.

"Obviously we have to defend the town," Thaxter said.

Chairman of the board of selectmen Henry Ainslie said that if the town were to lose a civil rights case, it could cost a million dollars.

Other unpaid bills paid under the total $11,487.12 appropriation included $950.29 for Eastern Edison for street lights plus $2,678.01 for power for the water department, $203.50 for hydrant charges to Hingham Water Company, $724.90 for gypsy moth spray, $150 to Harry Silvia for repairs to a cruiser, and $1,179.39 to Leonard Plumbing of Cohasset for repairs to private property at 431A South Main Street.

The bills were not paid in the last fiscal year, when they were due, because the advisory committee ran out of money in the reserve account, according to Advisory Committee Chairman Jean Cotton.

Troop 28 completing its 65th year

By Ty Martin

Boy Scout Troop 28 is completing its 65th consecutive year providing the boys of Cohasset with outdoor adventure and citizenshilp development. It is one of the oldest continuous troops in the country.

The Boy Scout movement began in England as the brainchild of Lord Robert Baden-Powell, who had achieved fame in England's Boer War in South Africa at the turn of the century. The program was brought to the United States in 1910 and gained a formal Congressional charter in 1916. Similarly, Scouting seems to have come to Cohasset in Sept. 1913 with Edward C. Hovery, Jr., as Scoutmaster of "Troop 1."

Ander Stoddard can be identified as one of the boys forming the original group. The Troop was sponsored by a "community men's council," and seems to have functioned fitfully for a year and a half or so before lapsing from official registration for another eighteen months. Rejuvenated in 1916, the same year the national movement gained federal recognition, the Troop has been active ever since.

The Reverend Fred Stanley, the Congregational Minister, was the Scoutmaster in 1916 and continued in this volunteer position until 1937, when he "retired" to the Troop Committee (which he chaired 1945-47) for sixteen years more. There were about two dozen Scouts in the Troop then, and this number has been the norm through more than six decades.

During World War I, the Scouts were active in a variety of patriotic programs: they sold $23,000 worth of Liberty bonds in 1917 and more in the following year, as well as raising potatoes and turnips in a Troop garden. It was felt at the time that these efforts "put Scouting on the map in this vicinity."

In 1920, the First World Boy Scout Jamboree was held in England. Six Scouts and the Reverend Mister Stanley attended, and later visited Paris and the battlefields of northeast France. A diary kept by Louis E. Salvador then is one of the treasures in the Troop's archives.

Henry F. Howe became the Troop's first Eagle Scout in 1922, and the following year was Mr. Stanley's Assistant Scoutmaster. During the same period, the Troop moved its weekly meetings from the G.A.R. Hall to the Town Hall.

The Scouts were active selling "Tuberculosis Stamps," planting trees, and acting as ushers at public gatherings. I.C. "Bud" Blossom became an Eagle Scout in 1924 so today is the patriarch of Cohasset's Eagles. He became assistant Scoutmaster in 1925 and held the position for five years.

September 1926 saw another well-known town personality become affiliated with the Troop when Gilbert S. Tower assumed the duties of Troop Committee Chairman. During his five-year tenure, the Troop continued to support the Tuberculosis Stamp Drive and the Red Cross, as well as participate in Memorial Day and Fourth of July programs and, of course, spend two weeks at Scout summer camp. Patrols were introduced as sub-units of the Troop. In 1927, Troop meetings were moved to the "Grade School House Hall" on Ripley Road, but the meetings continued to be held on Friday evenings at 7.

Arthur Lehr, Jr., joined the Troop in 1931 and has been with it ever since. In 1937, he became Cohasset's seventh Eagle Scout and was one of those attending the First National Boy Scout Jamboree in Washington, D.C. He became Assistant Scoutmaster in 1938 and Scoutmaster three years later. During 1941, Troop 1 formally became Troop 28 of the Old Colony Boy Scout Council, when an effort was made to eliminate duplicative troop numbers in adjacent towns.

World War II took young Lehr into the Navy, where he rose to be a Chief Petty Officer before returning home. In his absence, Scoutmaster duties were assumed first by the Reverend Harry C. Meserve and then by Donald E. Sladen (another 1937 Eagle who now lives in Scituate). As in the earlier conflict, the Troop conducted activities in support of the war effort.

Mister Lehr resumed the position of Scoutmaster in 1947 with Jerome F. Wadsworth as Assistant Scoutmaster. Meetings were shifted to Monday evenings, but remained at the Ripley Road School.

The Troop might be said to have reached full maturity in February 1951 when Fred C. Blossom II, "Bud's" son, was awarded his Eagle. In 1957, the Rotary Club succeeded the informal "town committee" as sponsor of the Troop and continues its support to this day.

Nelson C. Pratt, Jr., who had been a Scout in the Troop in the 1940s, became Assistant Scoutmaster in 1960. He succeeded Arthur Lehr as Scoutmaster in 1968, when Mr. Lehr became involved in founding Explorer Scout Post 28 as a program for Cohasset's teenagers.

Mr. Pratt's 10 year's leadership was as dynamic as his predecessor's — if 11 new Eagle Scouts is any criterion. (Since 1910, less than 2 percent of all Scouts nationally have achieved the Eagle.) David James, son of the Troop's Committee Chairman in the 1960s, has been Scoutmaster since 1978.

And so it is that Troop 28 Cohasset is celebrating its 65th anniversary in 1981. A spaghetti dinner is being held on 29 December for all present and former members of the Troop able and desiring to renew old acquaintances and tell tall tales of their "good old days" in Scouting. Readers who were registered members of the Troop and who wish to attend may get more information by calling Arthur Lehr at 383-0388 or Ty Martin at 383-6073.

Waves

Untitled

By Jack E. Powers

perhaps, at a time like this,
it would be best to drift off from the dark shore alone under the clouded moon in an oarless boat, drifting away from what was or couldn't be lying back on the rough boat bottom looking up at the black sky, peeking stars, misted moon,
the smell of fresh ocean growing stronger as you ride the soft current through the bay, out, out, past the blinking lighthouse, foghorns sounding, buoy bells clanging, the wind lifting light spray, the boat bobbing, rocking, in the larger waves —
drifting, drifting past all human sound into the mystery and peace of the sea, drifting in absolute abandonment, like a tiny creature in a walnut shell on the broad rolling sea
under the mighty sky, feeling the tingle under your back of the billion vibrations of life beneath you, feeling the movement of giant seaweed shifting in the current hundreds, thousands of feet below, the massive hum of life cycle, deep organ tones sounding through the boat drowning thought, memory — drifting, drifting at last in the absolute knowledge of life and death, alone, in the black of ocean, with the slap of waves,
the whisper of spray, the glimpse of stars and moon, drifting toward that which is timeless and, and you open your arms, you smile, embracing the sky, you glow and the clouds dissipate slowly, uncover the deep galaxies, the furthest stars shining, the ocean and the sky as one with the drifting, and,
like a snake skin, the withered rag of you,
that petty thing, outgrown, and your spirit expands luminescent and covers all and becomes all, the tiniest particles and energies of you flung instantly past light speed to the deepest corners of the universe, past the limits which don't exist, past calendar and birth and death to the pulsing core and extremities of all, and it is one, in the drifting, the abandonment —
the tiny boat found charred and empty in the sea somewhere.

Winter schedule

The Program Committee of the Community Center of Cohasset is excited about their new Winter Schedule which will be mailed out during the first week in January.

"We have many new courses and naturally will continue with our traditional favorites," says program co-chairman Nancy Kinchla. Some of the new courses included basketweaving, knitting, crocheting, weaving, forged silver jewelry, sewing, guitar, recorder, awareness through movement, creative writing and a fashion and modeling course.

The center is a private, non-profit organization and membership is open to all at $10 for families and $5 for individuals. There is a $2 non-resident fee.

Programs will be mailed to all members and Cohasset residents. Anyone who would like further information may contact Program Coordinator Laura Doherty, weekdays at 383-0088 between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.

'Family Home Evening'

Local Bishop, Dennis L. Lythgoe, of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Mormon) announces a special "Family Home Evening" this Monday, Dec. 21, when mothers and dads will gather their families around the home TV set to watch the special, "Mr. Krueger's Christmas" on Channel 38 at 6 p.m. The film which stars actor Jimmy Stewart and features the Mormon Tabernacle Choir is a story of holiday magic that will lift the hearts of all who see it.

'Charlotte's Web'

To register, call 383-0088, weekdays, from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. or 383-6625, evenings. Checks may also be mailed to the center at 3 North Main Street.

Candlelight Concert

A concert of Christmas Music, which was an important addition to this year's Cohasset Village Fair but which had to be cancelled because of the storm on Sunday, Dec. 6, has been rescheduled for Sunday evening, Dec. 27, at 7 p.m. in the Greek Orthodox (Pope Memorial Church) on Jerusalem Road in North Cohasset.

The concert, now to be conducted in the church sanctuary in candlelight, will feature the Thomas Bunting Chorale presenting Christmas and liturgical music and culminating in an audience sing-along. Of special interest in the program will be three Greek Christmas hymns with Mrs. Andonea Guilbault as soprano soloist. Music lovers will also particularly enjoy hearing the church's exceptional organ which is considered one of the very finest in this area.

Tickets are $5 each, or $2 for senior citizens, may be purchased in advance through ticket representatives in each of the five churches participating in the Village Fair, or at the door.

Dump issue still in limbo

The question of the dump is still in limbo.

But local officials don't expect there will be serious problems with the delay.

The state wants something done about the condition of the town dump on Cedar Street. The board of health wanted town meeting to appropriate $239,000 to upgrade the dump operation enough to continue for another five or so years.

The dump was article 8 and 9 on the 13 article warrant. Due to lack of a quorum, the meeting adjourned at the start of article 8. The next session is planned for Monday, Feb. 15.

The matter of the town dump was about to become a court order.

Officials of the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering had turned the situation over to the Attorney General's office.

The disposal area study committee was not convinced the board of health's engineering plan for continued operation of the dump was the way to go. But it seems the possible sale of the town's private dump may bring more support for the plan.

Chairman Ernest Stevens of the Disposal Area Study Committee told selectmen last Wednesday night that there is not adequate information before the committee, for them, to make a recommendation at the special town meeting.

Stevens said he was working on some calculations and is in disagreement with the figures of the E.J. Flynn Engineers report.

Eleanor Cooney said last week that because there aren't enough firm figures, the town should wait, possibly, until the annual town meeting.

According to E.J. Flynn Engineers, the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering has reviewed the plans submitted on behalf of the Town of Cohasset for the continued operation of the municipal refuse disposal facility located off Cedar Street in Cohasset.

The plans and report propose a design for continued interim operation and expansion of the existing landfill. The proposed expansion area will be operated in conjunction with the capping and sealing of the present landfill site. This proposal will provide the Town of Cohasset with additional refuse disposal capacity for approximately 5.6 years.

Preparation of the proposed expansion area will consist of filling the area to provide a minimum separation of six and one-half feet between maximum high ground-water elevation and the bottom of the refuse, providing for compensation for the anticipated compression and settlement of underlying peat and previously deposited debris. The top six inches of prepared base will consist of impermeable material and insure a separation between former and proposed landfill operations, with the underlying fill material consisting of silty sand. In addition, a clay curtain wall will be constructed at the interface of the wetlands and the 60-foot buffer zone provided at the northern limits of the proposed expansion area.

Refuse will be deposited at the base of the daily working face and spread and compacted in layers not to exceed two feet until a total depth of six to eight feet is reached. Six inches of cover material will be placed over all exposed refuse at the end of each workday.

Plans call for restriction of automobile traffic in the proposed expansion area, with only packers and trucks depositing refuse directly at the base of the active daily operating face. All other vehicles will dump refuse into transfer bins, which will be transported to the disposal site via the landfill machine.

Accolades for Place

A resolve congratulating former Town Moderator David Place passed the special town meeting without a whisper of dissent.

Another former town moderator, Robert James, rose to bring the matter to the floor just before the serious matters came up for debate.

Mrs. Penelope Place, seated toward the front of the hall, smiled an acknowledgement as the resolve commending her husband was read.

Place resigned June 11 to accept a Presidential appointment as general counsel to the U.S. Air Force.

The resolve mentioned that piece of background, adding that Place has served as moderator since 1969, and demonstrated "integrity, fairness and devotion to the best interests of the town."

The meeting unanimously wished him success and applauded the man.

Penn Central ...

Back in 1972 the town had a professional appraisal done on the land placing its value at $60,000.

There is no definite use for the land right now. Sewer mains have been mentioned as a likely use. Bicycle paths, horse trails have also been discussed.

In the center of town, it would be possible to use the land to expand town parking and highway department space.

During the debate the quorum was questioned. After counting the hall, Town Moderator Bill Weeks ruled business might continue.

Ingram told the meeting there were several reasons the town should accept his offer, among those was the chance to keep 4.5 acres of the right-of-way on the tax rolls.

"I think we have a completely common cause," he said. "The problem now is it's a race track and the town has no real way to stop unwelcome use."

The town by voice accepted the idea of purchasing the 27 plus acres.

'Mistress of Wynds'

[Editor's Note: The following scene is from "Mistress of Wynds," published at $2.95 in paperback by Dell. The book was written by Helen Ketcham under the psuedonym Meg Haviland. It can be ordered through any book store with that information. The book is 448 pages.]

By Helen Ketcham (Meg Haviland)

Auntie Maude's dreary quarters were fiercely festooned with nearly every kind of beribboned greenery available in this harsh land of scrub and heather. Sprays of bedraggled holly were draped strategically here and there: Vibrant red berries, peeking through their nest of brittle leaves, extended a fragile gaiety. Around a miniature Christmas tree, cleverly fashioned of pine sprigs and stationed atop a scarred oak chest, were spread a few brightly wrapped packages.

The atmosphere of determined cheer was pitiful.

"Well, Elizabeth, dear, here you are!" Auntie Maude was in high spirits. "We can have a nice little visit before Millie brings in our tray." She patted a frayed cushion on an upholstered settee in invitation. "Here love, sit here. You will find it more comfortable." Gingerly Auntie Maude lowered herself onto the stern edge of a straight chair. "There now," she beamed, "how is that, dear?"

"Fine," I answered politely.

"Not quite like old times," Auntie Maude sighed, "but at least we are together."

I nodded absently.

"I have a few little things for you," she crooned. "Why not open one of them now?"

"All right," I consented dully.

Tenderly Auntie Maude extracted an oblong parcel from beneath a straggly branch of the makeshift tree. "Rather cunning, don't you think, dear?" she asked, viewing her contrivance with a diffident show of pride. "How I miss our old ornaments from Leicester Square...But," she scolded herself promptly, "We mustn't dwell, now, must we?"

"No," I agreed.

Handing me her first selection, Auntie Maude waited in a state of naked anticipation for me to open it. Her smile was beatific as I tugged at the flimsy paper and drew out a knitted, tasseled scarf. "Very nice," I said automatically, trying to conceal my distate as I eyed the drab gray of the wool.

"Do try it on, dear!" she urged gaily. "It should keep you snug and warm on those rides you insist on taking!"

The yarn was coarse and plucked at my skin as, at her insistence, I wound it around my neck. Despite its dun color and harsh texture, I had to admit that the scarf was certainly thick and promised stout defense against the cold and penetrating winds of the moor. "Thank you, Auntie Maude," I said dutifully.

Her eyes were radiant, and I could see that her gaze was drawn compulsively and regularly to the small parcel resting in my lap: my Christmas remembrance to her. "Why not have a look at yours?" I suggested.

"Oh, no! I couldn't!" she refused happily. "I shall save that treat for the very last, if you don't mind, dear!"

"As you wish," I shrugged.

"Would you prefer to open the remainder of your gifts now — or wait until after Millie has brought our feast?" Auntie Maude's brow wrinkled with the delicious conflict. "If we open everything now, the surprise will end too quickly! Oh, my!" she giggled, "I am really in a quandary!" Abruptly she resumed her perch on the stiff chair. "Perhaps we should wait, after all, and have our visit now..." Her eyes flew to the little tree. "Then again, maybe we should simply continue with our gift-giving and visit after dinner...Dear me, I cannot seem to make up my mind!" She sprang eagerly from the chair to consult the tree, lovingly fingering a scrubby branch; immediately a tiny shower of needles sprayed the top of the ancient chest.

Sudden activity in the hall put an end to Auntie Maude's delectable dilemma: Millie, all but buried beneath a tray laden with our Christmas meal, was struggling with the door while still contriving to keep the container upright. Small of stature, the girl was almost bent double under the weight of her burden, and her expressive eyes desperately sought an ultimate destination for it. "Oh, Millie!" Auntie Maude glowed, "that looks scrumptuous indeed!"

"Miss — ah — Treadway —" the girl gasped.

"Set the tray here, Millie —" Auntie Maude indicated the bed as the only surface eligible to receive such a vessel, since the chest was preoccupied with the Christmas tree. "A trifle awkward," Auntie Maude confessed ruefully, "but we won't mind that, will we dear?" She turned to me.

"Will there be anythin' else, ma'am?" asked the breathless girl.

"No. Thank you, Millie," Auntie Maude answered after careful consideration. "I am sure we have everything we need —"

Millie curtsied and prepared to leave.

"Millie —"

"Yes, ma'am?"

"A Merry Christmas, child."

Millie flushed. "And the same to you, ma'am, I'm sure," she smiled.

The meal was interminable. Auntie Maude resolved to cover my plate with monumental portions of this and that until my physical discomfort grew to the point of actual nausea. I noted with dismay that since Auntie Maude's departure from Leicester Square and our former life together, her mien at table had seriously deteriorated. She had developed the noisome habit of licking her fat fingers after partaking of a particularly tasty morsel, and smacking her lips in what was loud appreciation. I found that sharing her board had become a disagreeable experience. A disproportionate period of time passed, it seemed, before her hunger was finally appeased. What had happened to that ladylike restraint — that studied poise affected by the dainty maid reared in delicate circumstance — readied for a coveted position in society? Although it did occur to me (in fairness) that my aunt's drop in station naturally occasioned lesser associates and entailed a certain amount of drudgery besides (possibly contributing to what was, I thought, an appetite to excess), I found the spectacle degrading and longed for that moment of escape to my own room or, better still, to the outdoors and the bracing wintry air. Auntie Maude, however, was determined that "our feast" — as she would have it — should last indefinitely. At last, drained of all patience, as well as uncomfortably surfeited, I rose abruptly and announced that I must soon leave for the village and suggested that we had best not dawdle further in completing our ceremonial exchange of presents.

Auntie Maude could not mask her disappointment. "Y-you must go to the village?"

"To church."

"Oh — lovely, dear." Her response was vague, but her face brightened as she added with a wink, "In the company of the good doctor, perhaps?"

"No. Sir Robert."

"I see," Auntie Maude nodded in instant approval, "to help with Lady Frances..."

"No. She will not be accompanying us."

Auntie Maude's eyebrows flew upward.

"She is unwell."

"But, dear —" Auntie Maude swallowed. "Why you?"

"It is Sir Robert's request."

"But, dear. I don't believe I quite understand."

"I really do not think it necessary that you should," I snapped.

To conceal the tears of hurt that welled up in her eyes, Auntie Maude turned quickly toward the tree and its as yet untouched yield. "Dear," she said softly, "there are two more gifts for you..."

"Very well." I resumed my seat and waited.

Auntie Maude drew the smallest of the remaining packages and placed it almost shyly in my hand. "Here. A little frivolous, perhaps, but I hope you will enjoy it."

Although the cloying scent, easily escaping its wrappings, betrayed the contents of the parcel, I simulated eagerness and tore at the paper as if in anticipation: a sachet — as I had predicted. The effort considerable, I smiled my appreciation while managing to keep the noxious little packet as fair a distance from my nostrils as decently as possible. "And — the best for last!" Auntie Maude purred, draping the final and largest bundle across my lap. "On this joyous day, Elizabeth, given with all my love..." Nesting in its web of tissue lay a nightdress of unrelieved white flannel, itself coarsely woven and almost box-like in its design (sleeves wide and long and neckline rising high enough to strangle). The pristine collar and cuffs each bore an edging of simple embroidery: it, too, was white. "Do you like it, dear?" Auntie Maude hovered anxiously.

"Fine," I managed.

"Do you think it will fit?"

The bloody thing would hang on a rhinoceros. "Fine," I repeated.

"Perhaps I could have used a lighter fabric," Auntie Maude reconsidered thoughtfully, "but the flannel seemed so warm and — well — practical. Don't you think?"

I nodded politely.

"Nothing like good flannel in the winter," she observed while her eyes, tantalized, strayed once again to rest on the gift awaiting her. "I do believe I shall open it now," she breathed. "Oh, I am excited!" Her ardent gaze all but devoured the rude pincushion as she held it this way and that in order to examine it thoroughly from every angle. "Precious! And sewn so beautifully!"

"I am glad you like it," I said perfunctorily.

"Like it!" Auntie Maude exclaimed. "Why, this must be the very nicest present I have ever received!" Her eyes were tender. "And made by my dearest Elizabeth's loving hands!" Tears of delight bright in her eyes, she embraced me warmly. "Thank you, dear, thank you!"

I moved. "I must be on my way."

"Oh!" Auntie Maude's face, clouding momentarily, made a forced recovery. "Yes, Yes, of course," she smiled bravely. "It was a lovely Christmas, wasn't it, Elizabeth?"

Boston Magazine names Kuhn publisher

James P. Kuhn, Jr., of Cohasset associate publisher and director of advertising for "Boston Magazine," has been named the periodical's publisher. The promotion, which becomes effective Jan. 1, 1982, was announced by D. Herbert Lipson, president of Municipal Publications, Inc., the Philadelphia-based corporation which owns both "Boston Magazine" and "Philadelphia Magazine."

Kuhn had worked for "Philadelphia Magazine" as an advertising salesman for over seven years and then as general manager of "Miami Magazine" before going to Boston, where he has been for the last six years.

Kuhn is married and is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School.

T.M. votes to join county mosquito project

Town meeting voted Monday 129 to 65 to join the Plymouth County Mosquito Control project despite the objection of the advisory committee.

The selectmen received a large number of complaints last year when no mosquito spraying was done in town, Henry Ainslie, selectmen chairman, told the voters.

In previous years the town belonged to the now defunct South Shore Mosquito Control project.

Fire Facts

The Christmas season is a time for celebrations, family gatherings, and good will. Unfortunately, the season can be marred by tragic fires.

Your fire department offers the following safety rules and precautions to help avoid needless fires.

When selecting a Christmas tree, do not buy a tree that had dried out from being stored too long. A new cut tree should be made in the tree trunk and then the cut end of the tree should be immersed in water until taken indoors.

Once inside, the tree should be secured in a stand that has a water receptacle and the water level should be checked daily to keep the tree from drying out.

The tree should be kept away from fireplaces and heating appliances and should never be placed where it will block a door or other exit.

Also, candles should not be used on or near a Christmas tree and only electric lighting sets that are approved and have the Underwriter's Laboratory label should be used to illuminate the tree.

All tree lighting should be turned off when leaving the house or when going to bed, and a swtich should be provided some distance from the tree for turning the lights on and off.

Christmas gift wrappings should be disposed of immediately, but not in a fireplace or stove as a chimney fire may result.

Toys operated by flammable liquids such as kerosene, alcohol, and gasoline are especially dangerous, and electric trains and other electrically operated toys should not be operated near a Christmas tree because an electrical spark my result in a fire.

Avoid smoking near the Christmas tree or among decorations, and keep matches, lighters and burning candles out of the reach of children.

People should plan ahead what the family will do if a fire does break out. An escape plan should be formulated. Also, a fire extinguisher should be available or a garden hose connected to a faucet or buckets of water within easy reach of a tree.

In case of fire, the fire department should always be called immediately.

Hopefully, these safety tips and precautions will ensure a joyous Christmas season for all!

Just another serene December day

By Patricia Desmond

Beloved was sitting at the kitchen table, puffing clouds of vile smelling nicotine and reading the Boston newspaper.

"Hi," Super Mom said, trying to open discussion.

"Mmmm," he replied.

"Mommy, I want a candy bar. Let's go to the candy bar store right now," Mit came running at her. He grabbed her leg with lollipop covered fingers.

"I just came in, besides you seem to have had enough sugar for this hour," she replied.

"But I want a candy bar," he obviously thought she missed the point.

"No," she made clear the point had not been missed. "Go find your superman doll and fly him around the playroom." The playroom in Super Mom's home would have been called the living room anywhere else.

It was the only room where company could be entertained, bedrooms and kitchen not counted. It was also cluttered with toys and usually scattered with food crumbs. A large television, with recurring fuzziness, sat in the center of the room. A sofa stained by spilt milk, split coke and ground-in chocolate was at the other end of the room.

Sometimes the sight of the room made Super Mom feel like crying. More often she would look at it and say, "I'm going to run away from home tomorrow if everything isn't picked up."

It seemed that was her favorite expression.

She was about to tell Beloved that she was ready to run away due to lack of attention when he looked up from the paper and smiled.

"You back already?" he asked politely.

"Yes, you know the funny noise in the car?" she began.

"Mmmm," his eyes slipped back to the newspaper.

July walked into the room, tears flooding in her so blue eyes.

"Mit hit me," she pouted.

"Where did he hit you?" Super Mom inquired.

"In my very own bedroom, I told him to get out and he said 'No,' and smacked me right on the face."

Outside the three-legged dog barked to come in. And the December chill whistled through the town, infiltrating the world.

July could not have seemed more sad. Tears that kept coming though her sobs were quiet heavings rather than her usual screams.

Beloved kept reading.

Mit ran into the kitchen, his body chugging along like a locomotive. He stood, hands clenched, ready to barrage July with further evidence of his displeasure.

"What's wrong?" Super Mom demanded.

"She won't play with me," he lunged forward with a punch aimed at July's thigh — which was as high as he could hit her when they were both standing.

Super Mom deflected the fist of iron.

"Don't," she screamed.

Beloved snarled, "I'm trying to read. Why don't you argue in a different room?"

Tears kept streaming from the lovely July.

"Aren't you going to punish him?" she wanted to know, tears invading the tone of her sobbing voice.

"You're angry and you think Mit should be punished," Super Mom said, trying what a book on parenthood called active listening.

"Yes," July volunteered, but said no more.

"You were really hurt when Mit hit you," Super Mom tried again.

"Yes," July said. "He won't leave me alone."

"And I was hurt too," Mit seemed to get the idea of the book better.

"You were hurt because July wouldn't play with you?" Super Mom decided it might work better with someone not quite three.

"I want to play with someone," Mit said.

"Okay, Mit you go to your room and find a book and I'll come down and read it in a minute."

"That doesn't sound like punishment to me," July said, anger creeping into the sadness.

"It's not punishment, but I'm going to make sure you are left alone. That will be better won't it?" Super Mom asked.

"Yeah, I think I'll go over to Arual's house anyway."

The tears seemed to vanish.

Bill Weeks takes charge

Bill Weeks banged the gavel down for his first whack at being town moderator at 8:40 p.m. Monday.

That was more than an hour after the meeting was scheduled to begin. But no one was blaming the new moderator. Blame went to voter apathy, the falling snow and the Christmas season.

Weeks used to be the state senator for the district back about 10 years ago. He still has a notion to provide for public service.

The meeting continued on until about half the business was done at 11 p.m. before being interrupted by a call for a quorum count.

Some people in the hall say a question of a quorum might not have been tolerated so early in the meeting by another moderator.

Weeks said after the session a question of the quorum is not debatable and can be brought up at any time.

"I think it went pretty well on the whole," he said, packing up his portfolio to leave. "I'd hoped to have gotten through all the business.

"What was left would have taken a long time for debate," he added.

By the time the question was called there were slippery roads and more than an inch of snow accumulation.

Weeks said he thinks the position of moderator is a wonderful way to serve the town "in a small way."

He did make one small change in procedure to hurry along the meeting. He did not read the warrant articles at the start of discussion. His announcement of that change brought scattered applause.

Weeks was chosen by the selectmen to replace David Place, who resigned to take a Presidential appointment in the Air Force last spring.

A success story for the Ripley family

By Laura Doherty

The hours are long and the pressure, especially at this time of year is often unreal, but owning their own business definitely seems to agree with the Ripleys of Old Pasture Road.

After 22 years in the school supply business, Bob Ripley was informed that his company was phasing out his division. It was then that he and his wife, Betty, turned a leisure time woodworking hobby into a full time business.

"We began putting some of the toys and furniture that Bob had been making for our own children in local shops. After our first craft party led to orders and more house parties, everything mushroomed," recalls Betty.

The Ripleys believe very strongly in what they are doing and judging from the number of orders they were busily trying to fill this past weekend, so do many of their customers. "Crafts by Ripley" are not only well-crafted and durable but they are also very original. "We don't want to copy but to come up with ideas on items that aren't on the market," Bob explains.

Often the four Ripley children are a great source of ideas. "We give them something good to start with and let them go and we learn from them," says Betty. Last year, Kerry Ripley used their puppet theatre to perform an original play which she and her third grade classmates had written. That same theatre, Kerry used as a lemonade stand, later that summer.

Success story for the Ripley family ...

One of the Ripleys most popular items is a 3 foot gas pump which is complete with crank and bell. At their craft shows, the pump is as popular with adults as with children. "They really love cranking it," laughs Bob. The pump was Betty's idea, he continues, and can also be used as an educational tool.

The doll changing table, also much in demand, demonstrates the versatility of much of their furniture. Four year old Jennifer uses it for her doll while her sister, Gay, uses it as a bookcase in her college dormitory.

From preppy whale jump ropes to bat and ball holders, from doll houses to personalized wall racks, the Ripley's crafts are both fun and useful. Many of their items can be personalized because they've discovered, Bob says, that "people love to see their name."

Many of their items are now sold in stores all over New England. Bob reminisces on how he introduced his merchandize to FAO Schwartz. "I drove up in my old pickup truck and parked on Newbury Street between the Jaguars and Mercedes. I lugged everything in through the front door." Having shown his wares, he was packing up to go when he heard, "Before you go, I want to give you and order,"...an order which, he recalls chuckling, was a sizeable one.

The two oldest Rilpley children often help their parents with their work. When Gay has a break from her studies on the hospitalized child at Wheelock, she does anything from secretarial to finish work. Scott, a senior at Cohasset High School, finds time from his studies and hockey playing to help especially with the workworking in which he, like his father, is quite talented. Betty's mother, Mrs. Alden Bailey, assists with the large amount of record keeping.

Both of the Ripleys grew up in Cohasset and their many friends are excited about their success. Bob describes the self-satisfaction of owning his own business, "In a one house operation, when you want to make a change, you just go ahead and do it. There's also the fun of watching it grow and develop," he adds.

The Ripleys advise starting slow for anyone interested in beginning their own business. They recommend trying to keep the overhead down by doing most of the work, themselves. Coming up with an item that no one else has is also important, they continue. Above all, they emphasize, the quality and uniqueness of whatever item they decide to offer determines its success.

Richard Nesseralla (L) of the Chase Group congratulates Hollis French, president of Appleseed's Inc., on the opening of the newest Appleseeds store in Cushing Plaza. Looking on are Joseph Quinn of Cushing Plaza Inc., and Mrs. Frederick Heap, who manages the new store.

Computers are part of the Cohasset curriculum

By Donna Cogliano

Seventh graders in Cohasset are learning a new language. It's not a foreign language, it's an introductory course to computer language.

Before the close of the school year, every seventh grade class at Cohasset High School will become familiar with the BASIC language of the TRS-80 Radio Shack computer.

Mathematics teacher Elizabeth Beatson instructs students for 15 lessons, over a three-week period, where they learn how to communicate with the computer and write simple programs. Once their 15 lessons are completed students are required to pass in an assigned computer project at the end of each quarter.

In the past only honor classes were exposed to the computer. This year all five seventh grade math classes will use the computers. Each class averages about 27 students.

Besides the computer in Beatson's classroom, there are four computers in the math lab available to students before and after school and during study periods.

The students don't have a separate textbook for the computer, instead they must rely on the accuracy of their notes. Beatson said she tries to correlate programs on the computer with lessons in regular student textbooks. Recently students have programmed functions on the computer in regard to geometry, temperatures, averaging and metric system conversions.

Beatson said she is pleased with the results of her students' work on the computer. They have become more logical and organized, she said.

Most students have been very enthusiastic about their computer lessons. "It's something new and different," said Beatson. Some students grasp on to the computer faster than others, she said.

Seventh grader Scott Fitzsimmons said he enjoys working on the computer. "At the beginning, it's difficult, but not too hard. It's a lot of fun because you can learn many new things," he said.

Scott's classmate, Jeff Hartwell said working on the computer is challenging. "We are learning a lot of new things on the computer and how to solve them also," he said.

Jeff Hartwell said the teachers are very helpful to students learning on the computer. Scott Fitzsimmons agreed, he said the teachers don't write the programs for us — they guide us.

Hartwell said, "When I told my mother I was using the computer, she couldn't believe it. I'm sure it will help us a lot when we grow up since there are a lot of jobs that deal with computers."

Fitzsimmons recommended that other towns let their seventh graders as well as fifth and sixth graders begin to work on the computers. "It helps you with a lot of basic things...and like Jeff said, there are lots of jobs in computers," said Fitzsimmons.

Beatson said that some students use computers at their parent's business offices or in the home, which allows for extra practice time.

They haven't replaced your reading, writing and arithmetic, but computers have definitely found a home in the classroom. Here Elizabeth Beatson instructs Donald Mulligan, a 7th grader, on how to use the mini computer that has become a part of the math class. (Greg Derr photo)

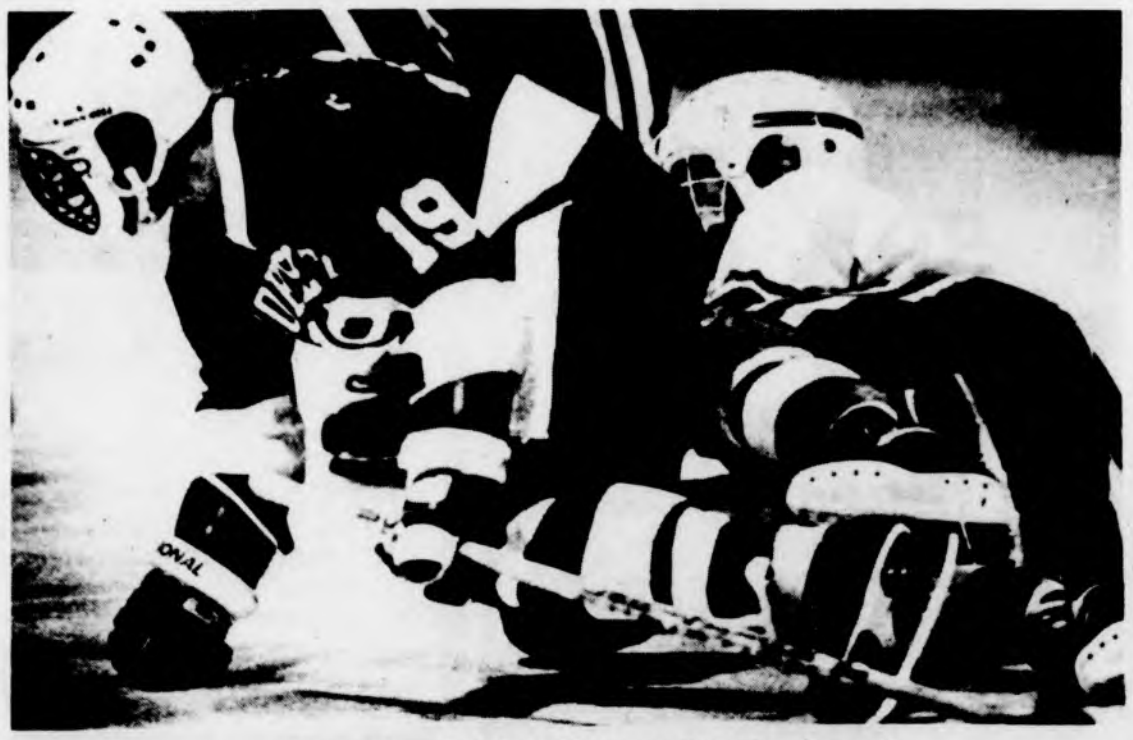
A 2-0 victory at the jamboree gave Cohasset players something to cheer about when the final buzzer hit.

Mike Nedrow, another mainstay, moves for the puck along the boards.

Goalie Steve Bowen made several good saves like this one to register his first shutout of Cohasset's new season.



Though impeded, Andy Pottenger fights for the puck.

Village shop talk

By Larry Fone

As many people have said Cohasset is a well-kept secret. After last weekend I don't think this is true any longer.

The fun events and the crowds of folks who participated are evidence that shopping in Cohasset can be fun. So many shops and businesses bust their knickers to appeal to the shopper. Special items, special prices and shops that are peopled with service in mind. Price and creativity are important in shopping for gifts.

A fine tie from the Corner Light House for dad or uncle may be his style. However, the Cohasset Hardware always has good practical gifts. The good folks there will advise you.

At Tides Inn besides grand clothing accessories, gifts galore, some strange and wonderful furniture. Ellen Morrissey gift wraps better than Lord and Taylor.

Food is always a fine present. Central Market and the Party Pantry provide a gourmet selection. Unbeatable.

Cards and Shards has a fine selection of gifts, wrapping, cards and special designer clothing.

Classics always provides "classic" gifts for the lady of the house. Beautiful gift wrap...free! Stop in and visit Kit and Kaboodle...unusual gifts and the new paintings of Cohasset are just great...delightful primitives at a good price for the collection.

Petersen Realty is serving nog daily. Stop in and have a sip. All are welcome.

For the best selection of wallets in town try the Colonial Pharmacy. Grand gift wrap free. Many other items too. From good splash fragrances to stocking stuffers. Don't forget most shops and restaurants will provide gift certificates.

The most unusual gift is fresh lobster or fish delivered Christmas Eve. Margie's at the harbor provide fine fish daily, but how about a Christmas afternoon delivery with recipes. Call me at Cookworks 383-1906. Also if you need dinner party help call. I'll put you in touch! Shop, visit Cohasset!

'Shoestring Christmas' at the Conservatory

On Sunday, Dec. 20 at 2 p.m. the South Shore Conservatory Creative Drama Workshops and The Shoestring Players, under the direction of Ellen Kelly, will present "Shoestring Christmas." This program of varied pieces will be given in the Cox Recital Hall at the Conservatory, off 19 Fort Hill Street in Hingham. Everyone is welcome to attend this program and there is no charge for admission.

Thirty students aged 7 to 12 from Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Hull, Norwell and Hanover will participate. Workshop I will do an adaptation of "The Shoemaker and The Elves" and Workshop II will perform theater pieces from their Poetry Bag. Workshop III, The Shoestring Players made up of the more advanced students, will present several pieces they have been working on and plan to take "on tour" to libraries on the South Shore. Their first engagement for the New Year will be on Saturday, Jan. 23 at the Hingham Public Library.

In addition to the drama performances, two woodwind ensembles from the school will add music to the afternoon's entertainment. Members of a young flute ensemble, coached by faculty member Helene Rosenblatt, include: Michaela Houston of Hanover, Amy Desroisers of North Weymouth, and Juliane Diercks, Sarah Ohmans and Kathy Lubrano of Hingham. A flute trio with Joy Waugh, Pam Winch and Kathy Michon all from Hingham, will also play. Refreshments will be served by Ellen Kelly and parents of the performers following the program.

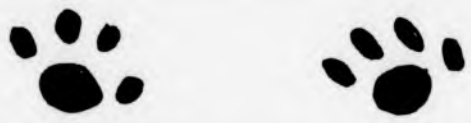
Cleaning up ... or what happens when cuteness fails

By Lois Martin



He looks for all the world like someone who's been up all night with a new baby.

And in truth, he has. There are those telltale circles beneath his eyes. They bespeak, though, of a man who's been trying to train his dog.

If someone were to see publisher David Cutler these days, he might wonder if business had caused undue strain this holiday season.

It's not the business. It's his dog. You remember "Banner," the adorable little golden retriever who was featured in print several weeks ago. Who could resist him. No one here certainly.

Yet it was the publisher who capitulated and put his money behind his response to the endearing pup.

He's still cute (the dog). But you know how it is with pets. The person who bought it is the person in charge of training it. And the training's been somewhat disheartening.

"I'm really discouraged," said Banner's master two weeks ago. "I take him out all the time, really I do. And it's getting cold out there. Last week I stood out with him half an hour. He did nothing. We no sooner got inside the door and..."

For a while staff members were compassionate about the wee dog's failings. No more. This morning a person in the front office spotted a major offense in the middle of the room and said, mercilessly, "Where's David!?"

She fetched him and he walked by with the posture of someone who's bent over a lot lately, paper towels in hand, his publishing work rudely interrupted by a dog that pranced proudly behind him. Banner likes his master. He knows he'll take care of everything. And everything'll be all right. What's to worry?

When he (the owner) had a moment last week, he paused to sit down in my rocking chair. "He's really a handful, you know it? I had no idea."

At that he was constrained to speak firmly to Banner who was barking at the cat. The dog left that bit of diversion to harken to his master's voice. He rolled over on his back (Banner) and wagged his never-fail tail. "He isn't stupid, you know it?" said the publisher.

But there's been a change. "This was supposed to be everybody's dog. But I'm the one who ever does anything," he said. If one were to define 'anything,' she should say that means to clean up after a dog.

Still that's not quite so. Our staff has taken turns showing affection to the pup. And now and then one of them launches a discipline program. One woman commenced a Wednesday by rolling up newspapers for everyone who was to whack the dog with authority whenever it performed unacceptable social behavior. This included: stealing a glove from a purse, tackling the left legs of customers, assuming a certain posture that has, we've learned, prefaced the offenses major and minor.

Banner's face has grown darker with his maturity. Perhaps the same could be said of his owner...owing to wind, snow and sleet burns.

But if you want to see some solid training, let us know. In all my years of mothering I've not been privileged to see responses so keen. He reacts like lightening to disconsolate whimpers and puddles alike. Indeed of Publisher Cutler, Banner has created the best trained dog owner in town.

Ma Bell's moving service

By Lois Martin

Dear Mrs. Bell,

I feel like I know you. You've been part of our lives. And no one's been quicker to use your phones. We never had one of those Mickey Mouse ones, or even a Princess. But years ago my grandmother had one of your cranks. And there were friendly people on party lines.

You've come a long way from cranks. But...

It's about your computer.

Apparently you set great stock in it. It seems to have the final word in all matters. And if someone doesn't agree with it, it's her word against its. And it holds grudges. Once challenged, it sticks to its guns, says anyone else is warped to disagree and then has its own ways to get revenge.

PATCHES

Certainly we appreciate progress, like the long cord that allows me to stir soup while I'm talking, or the personable people who give their names when you dial information. (I like Irene best.)

But the problem was this.

Sometime in September I called your office to request a new telephone cord to reach the stove in the kitchen. Mine was worn out and no longer conducted conversations. No problem.

But somehow the computer decided that I didn't want a new cord, that instead I wanted to move. So the next Saturday we picked up the phone to find it was dead. We hadn't been told we were moving. We thought the phone was out of order.

Meanwhile a son who'd stayed overnight with a friend, dialed home for a ride. But instead he got that nice recording that told him the number he had dialed, carefully enunciated, had been changed...to a new number, explicitly pronounced in the Boston area.

He was surprised, Mrs. Bell. As much as we have our little disagreements around the supper table, he'd never dreamed we'd move out when his back was turned. He argued with the operator, saying he was part of the family and we wouldn't move without him...to no avail. The information on the computer said we moved...so get used to it, kid, face the facts.

And up in Maine that day my Mother decided we should chat a bit. She got that woman's voice about our having moved. She dialed her operator, John. "My daughter wouldn't move without letting me know," she told him. John checked his computer, though, and there it was, we'd moved and already had phone service in our home, a new number in the Boston area.

But the computer hadn't told us about any of that. We reported a phone out of service from a friend's house. The operator, Harry, was courteous but firm. We had moved, he phrased it diplomatically three times... "Are you sure you're not moving?"

The supervisor was contacted and we wondered if in the interim the computer would give our number to another family. By late afternoon, though, as if by miracle, our phone service was restored. We had a good laugh about it.

Until we got a letter from the computer saying we hadn't returned your equipment like we'd promised. We didn't know what it was talking about.

And it was a full two weeks before a good-looking young man with a lot of telephone equipment hanging from his belt came to the door as we finished supper.

He apologized for interrupting our meal but said he knew we were anxious to get one phone out and another in at our new home before we moved.

We said we weren't moving. We were getting adamant about it. Let 'em try to get us outta here. This is our house. We've been here a long time and neither of us wants to clean out the attic. We grew paranoid. Had the neighbors devised a means of getting rid of the sight of our smashed trash barrels on Fridays? Was it something we said at town meeting, a friend offended at one of my batches of brownies? Who wanted us out of town? And did it have to be Boston?

The young man called your office and someone there reminded him the computer was right, we were moving. But our fellow didn't take out the phones. He confided in us that the computer might be wrong.

We thought we were in business. The computer was corrected. We were no longer moving. We didn't exist. There were no Richard Martins on Forest Street.

There was no bill from you...because we had moved, didn't have that phone anymore...owed you nothing.

Honestly, Ma, there was a spell when I considered letting you think that forever. But there were two problems. 1) Guilt at stealing service; 2) Fear of a bill when the computer caught up, took revenge and charged us for disconnecting and installing.

So I called your business office, where they don't use first names. Mrs. McDonald leaned back in her chair and let me tell her the long story. What's more, she believed me when I told her we hadn't moved and weren't going to, so there, computer.

She took care of everything. We have our phone service, same number. And now we get our bills.

Still I just wanted to warn you. Don't believe everything you hear from that computer of yours. For my money, Irene's better for progress and that computer ought to move to your competitor's firm....if you had one, Ma. But we know no one can compete with you.

Sincerely,
Lois Martin

If you are a teetotaller, calorie watcher, or non-dessert person, this column is not for you. If however you're in the market for a special dessert for a holiday meal, or baking for holiday gift-giving, you face a real challenge in having to pass up Marguerite Miller's

There are those who say that if a hostess enjoys her own party, it's a sure sign that it was a success. All too often, the happy hostess is in the minority and entertaining is just one big headache. Will there be a blizzard that day? Will there be enough in the way of food and drink, or will there be seemingly hundreds of soggy, inedible canapes left over? Cole Porter, the famous songwirter, has said that all you should have is sherry and olives. Nothing else. Betty Campbell's pie is fit for a king (or emperor) and I don't know who could pass up

NAPOLEON'S COGNAC PIE

Crust: make a graham cracker crumb pie crust following directions on package and line a 10" pie plate with it. Bake 8 min. before adding:

Filling: Mix 4 egg yolks (reserving whites for a souffle later) with 1 heaping cup of granulated sugar and 1/3 c. cognac. Beat thoroughly. Add 1 envelope plain gelatin dissolved in 1½ T warm water. Mix well. Beat 1/2 pint heavy cream until it peaks, but is not too stiff. Fold into other ingredients. Pour into pie shell and refrigerate for three hours, or, if possible, overnight. Before serving, whip another 1/2 pint cream and spread over filling. Grate a piece of bitter chocolate to decorate top.

Home-baked gifts of food are part of the Christmas spirit of giving and look most festive when packaged in decorated cans or jars, inexpensive glasses, or a plastic bucket made festive with decals. I guess we all have someone on our shopping list who seems to have everything. That's when homemade foods are a treat. For your child's teacher, or as a gift to take with you to a holiday party, here is another recipe where a splash of liquor adds a little something to the taste of

Postmaster asks for 'winter' help

The current adverse weather conditions serve as a reminder that certain safety factors controlled by our customers should be brought to their attention, according to Cohasset Postmaster T. Gerard Keating.

As we enter into this winter season, kindly make certain that walks and approaches to your mail receptacles are cleared of snow and ice. In addition defective stairs should be repaired, defective mail receptacles repaired or replaced and threatening dogs restrained.

Your carrier has the right to withhold the delivery of mail if a hazard exists.

We appreciate your past cooperation and look forward to serving you in the new year, Keating said.

The Derby Academy Parents' Association, in conjunction with the Massachusetts Ski Club, is planning a ski outing for Derby students, Grades 4 through 7, during the Christmas holidays.

Buses will leave the school early on Tuesday, Dec. 29 for a full day at the Crotchet Mountain ski area in New Hampshire.

Novice skiers will be introduced to the slopes under the supervision of the mountain's ski school staff and more seasoned skiers will get a chance to try out new equipment while traversing the slopes with classmates.

This faucet is playing taps.

Water is a most precious resource, yet we use it like it's going out of style. And it is. Plymouth County is in the middle of its worst drought in years. Of the county's 27 communities, 16 are experiencing water shortages and have instituted restrictions.

Saving water is mostly common sense. Think before you turn on the faucet next time. Let's not blow taps on our water future.

Yes, Virginia, Santa's coming

By Patricia Desmond

Santa Claus is indeed coming to town. His scheduled arrival time is pegged at roughly 1 a.m. Friday. But as everyone knows, the bearded missionary of kindness will make no deliveries if watched.

He happened to be breakfasting with Cohasset children at the Community Center last Saturday, getting ready for the coming world tour.

The Mariner was able to obtain an exclusive interview with Claus.

He wanted our readers to know how much he enjoyed Cohasset's rooftops and he wanted to warn people not to leave smouldering embers inside a fireplace on Christmas Eve.

Claus complained that last year he scorched his favorite red suit at a house on Sohier Street. He does not oppose a roaring fire.

"I can easily see the smoke from a nice blaze," Claus said. "It's the dregs of a fire that bothers me."

He let us in on an undisclosed secret. Last year when making his round Police Chief John DeBassio arrested him on a burglary charge.

Claus said the chief mistook him for a ne'er-do-well because he was prying open a back window in a chimneyless house in Beechwood.

"But, ho, ho, ho, no harm done. I'm glad local police are working the holiday," Claus commented.

He was not booked, fingerprinted or arraigned.

And he said he still made his world tour in time allowed.

This year he expects to break all records for spreading love and generosity.

He wished a "Merry Christmas" to everyone in town.

Cites crime, traffic & government costs

S. Shore Chamber opposes casino

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce gave the anti-casino forces an early Christmas package.

Last week the chamber released a detailed study explaining with force and effect the economic problems of casino gambling.

The people working for legalized gaming in Hull decried the study, which came as no surprise.

The study was handled by a special task force from the chamber which began meeting last spring. It found crime would increase tremendously, traffic problems would be beyond acceptable levels, tax benefits would be offset by new governmental costs.

It also found that property values and employment would increase.

The report is ripe with statistics that take issue with the numbers the casino proponents have been using.

"Casino gambling has been likened to a powerful cancer drug," the report states. "It may be necessary as a last effort to revitalize an area, but it will have strong negative side effects. The task force does not believe that the MGM proposal is safe enough medicine for the region, the state and probably Hull to warrant its adoption at this time."

Hal Davis, a Boston attorney and chamber member who chaired the special task force, said he and others in the group have been to and enjoyed casinos.

"Our finding wasn't out of some bias or some morality thing," Davis said. "Even the people in Atlantic City said the idea was a last resort measure. We didn't think the situation in Hull was that bad."

Davis said the members of the chamber would be willing to work toward the solution.

"You don't want to force anything on a community but if Hull was interested in other types of development, we could help."

He took issue with stories depicting the chamber as elitist. There are five or six chamber members in Hull and Hull is not a noted business community. Davis said marginal businesses are apt to give up membership in a chamber "even though they are the ones who most need it."

He didn't see industry moving to Hull even with chamber help.

"I think it's a residential, recreational and commercial economy there," he said. He pointed out the chamber has a corporation set up to finance the job generating portion of development.

"Something else would have to be found for developers interested in condominiums or other residential properties," Davis said.

State gets tougher on sewer violations

The state has given the sewer commissioners 30 days to explain violations and deficiencies at the present sewer plant.

That's a plant everyone will remember a state court ordered the town to upgrade more than a year ago.

We all know the town voted to apply for federal funds for the new sewer treatment plant. What even the sewer commissioners don't know is what happened from there.

A call placed fairly recently to U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds' office seeking information about the status of the town's grant application brought the response that the grant was being processed through the state. The Mariner was also given a Boston Environmental Protection Agency phone number for assistance.

(Editorial comment: this is your hometown, Gerry. Even liberals should consider constituent service part of the job.)

The town has applied for a $1.2 million grant for the design phase of the project. Word has yet to be received. Calls are referred from one person who knows nothing to another who knows something or other but not the answer.

The request for the design money was submitted over 18 months ago. The total project will be over $13 million.

The initial hold-up was apparently the town's refusal to select a designated outfall for the system.

A dry goods store for the Village?

There may be a dry goods store going into the Village.

Louis Bravo has the land right next to the building he still owns that houses Cohasset Central Market. And last week the sewer commission let him jump one of the main hurdles.

The building inspector has yet to receive an application for plans for the new structure, according to his secretary.

But there has been a rumor or two floating around the shops about the new venture.

Bravo, who ran the market in the Village for the past few years sold the business last spring. He and his wife still own the building. The vacant lot between the market and Curtis Compact on South Main Street is part of their property and that is the site of Cohasset's week ...

Making a list

The selectmen are making a list. They're checking it twice. They're going to find out who gets street lights.

Board members Rocky Laugelle and Mary Jane McArthur agreed to review a list of street light complaints in January with the stipulation that any addition of lights would be supplemented with a proportional reduction somewhere else in the town.

Laugelle said he is aware of some reductions that could be made on Route 3A.

Robbery suspect arrested

Patrolman Lawrence Ainslie, Jr., of Cohasset, a permanent intermittent police officer, and Sgt. Jack Tomkins, both of the Prudential Center Security Police force in Boston, apprehended and arrested an armed felon Dec. 17.

The accused is suspected of previously robbing a liquor establishment at the Prudential Center. He was armed with an automatic weapon at the time of his arrest. The suspect will be arraigned in Boston Municipal Court on Dec. 28.

Funds transferred

Selectmen voted 2-0 to approve a transfer of $4,000 which allows the town to process backlogged parking tickets. Chairman Henry Ainslie was absent.

Missing wheelchair

The housing authority is still looking for its missing wheelchair.

The wheelchair which was used as a loaner to people in need, was taken from the community room at the elderly housing project sometime in November.

Anyone with information about the missing chair, worth thousands of dollars, is asked to come forward.

The last appeal to the person who took the chair apparently fell on deaf ears.

Court move

The bill to move Cohasset's court cases from Quincy to Hingham will be back before next year's legislative session.

It seems its chances of moving to passage are slim for this year. So the bill, filed by Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, has been filed for 1982.

Trainee hired

Gus Lewis, originally from Texas, was hired as an "operator trainee" at the Cohasset Waste Treatment Plant and will begin his new job this week.

School appointments

The school committee this week appointed the following extra compensation positions: Garret Reagan, Assistant Ice Hockey Coach, $1,070; David Infusino, J.V. Boys' Basketball, $1,070; R. Lawrence Shultz, 8th Grade Boys' Basketball, $856; Jon Anderson, J.V. Girls' Basketball, $1,070; and Clare Brady, 8th Grade Girls' Basketball, $856.

Cluster development

Joseph Crossen, a local developer, would like to put the town's new cluster bylaw to use off Cedar Street.

The 21-unit complex would be in the upper moderate price range. Units would sell for $90,000 to $150,000. Six of the units would be attached, according to the plans given to the planning board last week.

A bylaw allowing such construction was adopted by the town meeting last spring.

COUNTING THE MINUTES Allison Kinchla, daughter of John and Nancy, stares out from her father's arms watching for Santa last week. At the time there were still five shopping days to present day. (Photo by Greg Derr)

Plans for another cluster development — this one by Frederick Thayer off Pond Street — are scheduled for public hearing of the planning board on Wednesday, Jan. 6.

The Thayer plan calls for four three-unit buildings and 27 single unit dwellings.

For mothers and others

By Tanna Kasperowicz

It's impossible to return to those days when you poked your lead pencil point into your father's favorite naugahyde chair 4,000 times...when you stuck 400 pieces of bubble gum on the back of your bedboard...when you glued Elvis Presley posters on your wallpaper (your new wallpaper). But you can relive the moods that made you do it through the reading and re-reading of "Others Croak Back."

Why did you do it? You "had to," Valerie Gill tells us. You experience her crime, her mood...her perfect need to pick the wallpaper off the wall. Same goes for Andrew Rossi's flood in the bathroom. Maybe he did or didn't break the faucet, but you know he enjoyed it. And you remember enjoying it, too.

"Others Croak Back" is the result of the poet-in-residency this past fall at Deer Hill School. It is available at Cards and Shards in the Village Proper and at Deer Hill and Osgood School offices for exactly $2. And there's not much you can buy these days that will give you as much delight. Poetry people say a last-minute (very generous) donation has allowed the printing of many more than the pre-paid orders...so if you need extras for relatives, they're available.

Many of the poems in this booklet were written by students who were touched by the poet only briefly...namely, Craig Carter, a Fifth Grader who lives on South Main Steet with Mr. and Mrs. Paul Carter (his parents), a cat called Lucky and a dog called Hilton.

Craig wrote the title poem (he didn't know it would be the title poem) during a Saturday session with poet Lewis Hyde:

When the frogs croak, mist covers the green flowing swamp.

*When the frogs croak in the green, glowing swamp, others croak back.

And croak the young poets do, and about everything.

In a brief phone interview last week, Craig told this critic that maybe he would and maybe he wouldn't write another poem. Poems are fragile pieces of inspiration and information which just happen. No one can tell when one is coming or when one will come again, as Craig more or less told us. But thank goodness Mr. Hyde was there to catch all these thoughts last fall...we would all be so much poorer without them.

If you're not into reading poetry, let me give you a gentle hint on how to approach Others. First of all, you can't sit down an read it all at once. There's simply too much truth, beauty and wisdom to contemplate at one sitting. Poetry books in particular must be returned to, time and time again.

Over the past week (reviewers get their copies early), I found myself returning again and again to Juliana Chittick's "Cartoon," a light little verse about her sister "With eyes of blueberries...legs of stilts...and a mouth like an all-night radio." While it's definitely a giggle poem, it's also a verbal cartoon...and expertly done.

On another page I fell in love with Desiree Yess's frog drawing which seems to be hanging from a sky hook and has one of the most whimsical expressions in the world on its face. And Elizabeth Hurley's riddle which began with "Under my tail is like the dump," intriguing. It was a perfect statement to lead into further observations.

"Tues. at 1 O'Clock there is art/ and I do not like art./ Patrick Controy begins...telling us how incredible his life could be only if...Other poets also played, and prettily, with this same format.

Jamie Langmaid and Matt Drinkwater clearly wrote from personal experiences. Both poets handled their materials professionally and with great restraint...accomplishing exactly what they wished in their last lines. I loved both these poems.

Matthew Kuhn's subject was Gogglegooks...and Gigi Hanlon and Melissa Nothnagle did some delightful illustrations of the illusive creature who really would like to be invited to a Deer Hill School recess.

Steve Keim knows where to get good stuff on sale as a result of his interview with a Beaver. After you get your copy of Others you'll know too. Colby Mantz drew, absolutely, the most whimsical turtle I have ever seen...capturing perfectly Sarah Hamilton's intriguing little poem about a very shy lady.

After returning to Robert Bird's "Perspective" several times, I decided those four stanzas seemed to be both an observation and a shorthand way of saying something much deeper than one would first think.

Betsy Andrade can draw on my bathtub anytime.

Seeding and loaming a muddy question

The school committee doesn't want the Osgood Playground reseeded and loamed.

Last year it was considered the committee's number 2 priority for capital expenditures.

School Committee member Jack Langmaid warned that if the loam were placed on the fields it would be tracked into the school.

State gets tougher ...

told them last week (something they must have known) the state would not approve the size plant requested by the town.

John Najarian of Metcalf and Eddy said the plant the state would accept would handle a half million gallons to 750,000 gallons a day and be expandable.

The sewer commission plans to discuss the matter with the planning board.

Another concern of the board is the funding under President Reagan.

"According to reports there is $20 million available for the State, and this was one of the projects...the grant process could not stop," Najarian said. "They could increase old grants but not issue new grants...a good idea is to get the grant increase on "step one," he added.

"Once we give them the plant size then the fonsi (findings of no significant impact) is complete. Once that's done apply to "step two." When the E.P.A. give the go ahead, then submit the application again.

"It has not been our fault. A board two or three years from now would say the board didn't do anything. We've been doing everything they asked us," Daggett said.

He said Hull is the community on the South Shore with the largest number in the work force outside the community.

the proposed store. The new store would apparently be connected to the building that houses the Central Market.

Getting the approval of the sewer commission did not happen without some discussion.

"The plant is hydraulically overloaded," said Jan Daggett, sewer commissioner. "The ban says no new connections unless for health reasons."

But after some discussion the request was allowed on the basis of a letter from the state which was interpreted to say the addition to an existing lot is not a new connection.

around town

☐Chris Abbruzzese of Cohasset won his varsity letter at Bowdoin recently. He was one of 52 football players at the school to gain either a letter or numeral. His prize was a letter.

☐Muriel Desmond of N. Scituate has made the Cohasset office of Jack Conway, Realtor, the number one sales office in the 27-office firm. Yet she still found time to sell $1.3 million this year in sales of her own.

Manager of the Cohasset office for the past five years, she started her real estate career there some 22 years ago as the first woman sales associate in the now 360-member Conway sales force.

Muriel Desmond

☐John Tirrell, partner-manager, of Village Sport, Cohasset's new sporting goods shop which just opened downtown in the village area next to Classics, feels confident of its success.

First of all, he knows the area. Many residents may have seen him around town jogging (his usual jog is about 7 miles). One day while passing the then vacant store, the thought struck him — what a great place for a sports shop. John feels his shop is convenient for his customers.

He's very enthusiastic about the beauty of the area and its open spaces which he notes, are great for outdoor activities such as jogging, tennis, bike riding and walking. In Cohasset, he points out, for some reason, people seem to be more active. With 18 years of experience in the retail field, he definitely feels that "the village area is a growth area." He expects his customers will come from the surrounding towns as well.

There are a variety of items available at Village Sport. While I was there, one customer purchased a basketball for her daughter for Christmas. John says that he has noticed an increased interest in basketball for girls and that he has sold as much equipment to them as to the boys. From shoelaces and tennis balls to attractive running suits and outerwear, all are available at Village Sport where tennis items and clothes will also soon be introduced. Store hours are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

☐The Sixty Plus Club celebrated their annual Christmas lunch last Thursday which for the past two years has been held at Hugo's Restaurant. The food which included a choice of fish or chicken was delicious, according to club members who also enjoyed singing carols following the lunch.

☐It was the best house tour yet said many who attended the Community Garden Club's recent event. Although the weather was a disappointment, it did not dampen the enthusiasm of the many volunteers and their many guests who came from as far away as the North Shore to view a select group of Cohasset homes all decorated in their Christmas best. One particularly favorite room was the "Dickens room" at the Lothrop House which was ingeniously decorated by Regina Schultz and Betsy Good.

☐One of the nicest traditions of the Christmas season are the two separate concerts by the Deer Hill School and the Junior/Senior High School bands and this year was no exception.

The music was a delight and equally impressive was the complete concentration and discipline of the students. All who were involved are to be commended for two very special evenings.

☐Christmas in Cohasset is a favorite time for many reasons such as...

—the Christmas Fair and, this year, the Stroller, which always is a perfect introduction to the holiday season.

—at night, the common which is timeless in its beauty and Little Harbor with the lights of colorful trees reflected in its waters.

—the carillons at St. Stephen's Church.

—the shops where so many different items are available in pleasant, relaxed surroundings.

—the decorations of the homes of its residents which reflect the care and the time that their owners have spent on them.

—its churches where the true message of Christmas is carefully conveyed.

—the many volunteers who help to spread the spirit of the season by giving of themselves. This would have to include "Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus" and all the other "Clauses" who bring the joy that only that special person can bring to little children. At one Christmas party this past week, one especially dedicated Santa was heard to remark, "Even if you don't have a chimney, I'll come down your chimney."

Cohasset people who have been and will continue to be the guardians of the Christmas tradition.

—Merry Christmas!

Fire facts ... in verse

THE NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS

'Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house, not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse. When down through the chimney, all covered with soot, came the "Spirit of Fire," an ugly galoot.

His eyes glowed like embers, His features were stern, as He looked all around Him for something to burn. What He saw made Him grumble. His anger grew higher, for there wasn't a thing that would start a good fire.

No door had been blocked by the big Christmas Tree. It stood in the corner, leaving passageways free. The lights that glowed brightly for Betty and Tim had been hung with precaution, so none touched a limb.

All wiring was new, not a break could be seen, and wet sand at its base kept the tree nice and green. The tree had been trimmed by a mother insistent that the ornaments used should be fire resistant.

And mother had known the things to avoid, like cotton and paper and plain celluloid. Rock wool, metal icicles, and trinkets of glass gave life to the tree — it really had class!

And, would you believe it, right next to the tree, was a suitable box for holding debris — a place to throw wrappings of paper and strin g, from all of the gifts that Santa might bring.

The ugly galoot was so mad He could bust, as He climbed up the chimney in utter disgust, for the folks in this house had paid close attention — to all of the rules of good "Fire Prevention."

A Christmas list

It's almost Christmas. It's already the start of Hannukah. And it's time to be thinking about the joy of gift getting.

We here at the Mariner want to wish the whole town happy holidays. We have a few special wishes for some special people.

To the sewer commission, many millions of dollars.

To Yvette Rattenbury, a pump to re-inflate her one-time job in the police department. It's been a deflated football long enough.

To Larry Fone, a typewriter.

To Richard Hayes, an advisory committee interested in reading.

To Ben Curley, customers who pay their bills.

To Gene Price, a whip for his horse and carriage trade.

To Richard Sylvia, more high schoolers interested in vocational education.

To Gene Crowell, a couple hundred new students to keep Osgood open.

To Arthur Clark, our affection.

To Lowry and Diana Bell, a tennis tournament named in their honor.

To Ellen Morrissey, only rip tides.

To Joe Quinn at Cushing Plaza, a way of fitting Rizzotto's, Shaw's and Roache Brothers all into the old A&P.

To Route 3A, surcease from the red and yellow neon.

To Frances Marks, a note or two from the Troika in advance of their meetings.

To Tadpole Kasperowicz, extra large Christmas tips. He's part of the reason why that other paper's here.

To Gerrit and Marilynn DeVois, a welcome to Cohasset card.

To Marylou Slotnik, a Salon d'Acceptee.

To Clark Chatterton, another interesting soccer season.

To Martha Gjesteby, a louder voice on the school committee.

To Marge Ritter, a Mariner subscription.

To Rob Tis, some Indian beads for his trip to Marquette.

A Christmas story

By Paul Steven Stone

"Hey!" the old man in bed shouted. "Why are you two standing there like that? What are you, statues?"

"No, Grandpa," Ellie answered. She was the older of the two. Her brother Robin stood next to her, staring at the old man in watchful silence.

"Well, if you're not statues, then you can walk, right?"

"Yes, Grandpa."

"Besides, you're blocking up the door."

Hesitantly, the two children walked up to the large bed.

"Over here, please," the old man directed, pointing to the side of the bed. "You first, Eleanor. Then Robin Hood right next ..."

"I'm not Robin Hood," the boy protested in a squeaky voice. "My name is Robin!"

Mock surprise deepened the lines in the old man's forehead.

"You're not that crazy fellow with the bow and arrows? Robin Hood? You don't rob from the rich and give to the poor? Are you sure about that?"

"I'm Robin Stewart Underwood," the small boy proclaimed. "And I'm in the second grade."

"Well, let's not argue," Grandpa said. "Anybody can make a mistake." He looked into both children's face; first one, then the other. "I've seen droopier faces," he finally decided, "but only on bloodhounds. Did you come here to practice for a frown contest?"

"No, Grandpa," Ellie answered. "We came here to see you. Grandma told us we could come."

"She probably wanted me to cheer you up. Well, what else are grandfathers for?"

He lifted his hand in front of his face. "How about this one?" he asked. When he pulled his hand away, the face that stared out from the bed was twisted out of shape. Though the grimace with its enlarged nostrils and twisted mouth was supposed to look funny, the pallid sunken features of the face suppressed any notion of humor.

"Oh, Grandpa!" Robin said, bursting into tears.

Releasing the tension in his face, Grandpa softly asked, "Was it that bad?"

"No, Grandpa," Ellie answered. "It was very good."

The old man rubbed the boy's head with a loving stroke, as if there was a certain fragile quality that his fingers could sense.

"Well," he said, putting an end to the matter, "there's no accounting for taste."

Ellie touched her brother's shoulder, explaining to Grandpa, "Grandma said we couldn't stay very long."

The old man frowned.

"Grandma says a lot of things."

"Come on, Robin." She pulled on her brother's arm. "It's time to go."

Robin wiped his sleeve across his eyes, then put his hand into his pocket.

"It's not Christmas yet," he said, his sadness now beginning to mix with a growing sense of anticipation, "but we've brought you your gift anyway."

"Really?" the old man exclaimed, watching with amusement as his grandson's hands moved in and out of his pockets, searching for the gift. "I wonder what it could be? Golf clubs? Maybe a set of barbells?"

"You're not even close," the boy answered seriously. "See?" He pulled out the gift and offered it, explaining, "If you put it to your ear, you'll hear the ocean."

The old man stared at the seashell in the boy's hand. He started to say something, but the words never came out.

"Don't you want it?" Robin asked, extending his hand farther.

"I want it," Grandpa said simply. He took the shell and held it to his ear. "I can hear it," he whispered with wonder. "Sounds like there's a storm on the way."

"Let me hear," Robin jumped eagerly. He took the shell and jammed it against his ear.

"We better go now, Grandpa," Ellie said.

"I hear it," the boy agreed. "I think I hear it."

Ellie again pulled on her brother's arm.

"Come on," she insisted.

Grandpa released a raspy groan from his throat as he sat straight up in bed.

"Before you go," he said, stopping them with a gesture of his hand, "I want to say something about my Christmas gift. I want you to remember that it's very special to me, and I want you to remember why. Will you promise me to remember?"

Both heads nodded solemnly.

"You've given me something I need more than anything else right now — a reminder."

"A reminder?" Robin asked.

"Yes, a reminder. People tend to forget things, so they need reminders. Right now I needed this reminder, and you've given it to me."

Ellie stared at the shell thoughtfully.

"What does it remind you of, Grandpa?" she asked.

"Well, this shell once had an occupant, you know; something that lived inside until it was time to move on. When he left — well, he packed his bags, took off, and left his shell behind. It kind of reminds me that everything's got a shell."

"Like a turtle?" Ellie asked.

"Right," Grandpa said. "And like a person, too."

"That's silly," Robin said, lending an appropriate facial gesture to his words. "People don't have shells."

The old man smiled.

"See what I mean?" he asked the girl. "Robin Hood clearly needs a reminder."

"I'm not Robin Hood," the boy protested, but there was a smile on his face.

"Okay, so I made a mistake. What are you going to do, shoot me? Anyway, I wasn't wrong about people having shells. I hope to heaven there's more to your Grandpa then this poor excuse for a body. I'll be disappointed to learn otherwise." He fell slowly back onto the pillow. Once there, he added, "We've got to be more than bodies — than shells. Elsewise you and I might never meet up again, and I don't

Some thoughts at Christmas

By Claire McDonough

I may be able to speak the languages of men and even of angels, but if I have not love, my speech is no more than a noisy gong or a clanging bell. I may have the gift of inspired preaching; I may have all knowledge and understand all secrets; I may have all the faith needed to move mountains — but if I have not love, I am nothing. I may give away everything I have, and even give up my body to be burned — but if I have not love, it does me no good.

"Finish your Christmas shopping yet?"

"Nope. It gets worse every year. I swear to God, if I go to one more store that doesn't have Strawberry Shortcake, I'm going to scream. How's your Aunt Edna?"

"Don't make me feel guilty. We had her to dinner for Thanksgiving, and I know she's expecting an invitation for Christmas, but honestly, she's getting so slow, and she repeats the same stories over and over. She drives the kids crazy. Do you think these blue icicles would look good on the creche?"

Love is patient and kind; love is not jealous, or conceited, or proud; love is not ill-mannered, or selfish, or irritable; love does not keep a record of wrongs; love is not happy with evil, but is happy with truth. Love never gives up; its faith, hope and patience never fail.

"Beautiful. Remind me to check my supplies and see if I have enough liquor to get through the holidays."

"Is there such a thing as enough liquor? Are you taking the kids to church for Christmas?"

"Now you're making me feel guilty. I'd really love to, but there just isn't enough time for everything we'd like to do. We took them to Edaville last week and it was magnificent. Really, though, Christmas is getting to be a pain. There's just so much hassle, and I know I won't be ready. We have five Christmas parties this week — do you believe it? And I have to get presents for the people I work with."

Love is eternal. There are inspired messages, but they are temporary; there are gifts of speaking in strange tongues, but they will cease; there is knowledge, but it will pass. For our gifts of knowledge and of inspired messages are only partial; but when what is perfect comes, then what is partial will disappear.

"I know what you mean. Most of the people I'm buying for I couldn't care less about. We're making the stores rich. You're probably right about not taking the kids to church, too. You know how mobbed it is at Christmas."

"Yeah. You'd think the people who do nothing but go to church all year would stay home on Christmas and give the rest of us a chance. With that kind of a crowd they'd probably all catch the Arabian crud or something."

"Anyway, they got to see the Nutcracker."

When I was a child, my speech, feelings, and thinking were all those of a child; now that I am grown, I have no more use for childish ways. What we see now is like the dim image in a mirror; then we shall see face to face. What I know now is only partial; then it will be complete, as complete as God's knowledge of me.

"Right. Christmas wouldn't be Christmas without the Nutcracker. But do you ever feel like scrapping the whole darn thing?"

"Only once a year. Still though, there is something about a baby..."

Meanwhile, these three remain; faith, hope, and love; and the greatest of these is love.

"There really is, isn't there. Well, if I don't see you, Merry Christmas."

"Same to you. Merry Christmas."

A Christmas story...

think the Good Lord makes mischief like that."

He looked into the faces of his grandchildren.

"You'll remember what I said?"

"We'll remember," Ellie answered.

"You don't have to understand it," Grandpa assured them, "just remember it."

"Goodbye, Grandpa," Ellie said. She leaned across the bed and kissed her grandfather.

He looked at her, and smiled.

"Scratchy, isn't it? I don't get to shave much these days." His eyes fell on the boy. "What about you, Robin Stewart Underwood? Can you put up with a little sandpaper and give your grandfather a kiss?"

"Sure," the boy answered. He stood on tiptoes, but was unable to reach the old man.

"I'm coming, I'm coming," Grandpa said. He lifted himself up, leaned over and kissed the boy.

"You be good," he said, falling back.

"Goodbye Grandpa," the boy whispered.

Brother and sister walked softly away from the bed. At the door, they turned around to see their grandfather staring silently at the ceiling, the seashell held firmly in his hand.

"Merry Christmas," he called out softly. "And don't forget, you promised to remember."

Four days later, Robin and Ellie were sitting in a strange room filled with high-backed benches. At the front of the room was a long, dark shiny box seated on a high stand. Inside the box, they knew their grandfather's body was resting. He had died two days after their last visit.

There was sadness in the room. A few people were crying, but everyone looked sad. A man in a dark suit at the front of the room was making a speech about their grandfather. Neither Robin nor Ellie was listening to the speech.

"I still don't understand it," the boy said. He held the seashell in his hand as if it might reveal some hidden secret at any moment. "When I saw the gift box under the tree with Grandpa's name on it, I figured he'd asked Grandma to get us something. But why'd he give us back the shell? Don't you think he liked it?"

"He liked it a lot," his sister said. She looked around at the somber faces, then asked, half wonderingly, "How do you feel? You feel like crying?"

"I don't think so. You?"

"I thought I would," Ellie answered, "but I don't."

"You think we'll ever see Grandpa again?"

"I don't know. Do you?"

"Yeah," the boy said smiling. "Grandpa always gets his way, you know."

Ellie smiled, adding, "I'll bet he's making an awful fuss in heaven right now. Grandma was the only one who could make him behave."

Robin laughed at the idea, but then a quizzical look crossed his face.

"But why do you think he gave us back his shell for our Christmas present?"

"Oh, Robin," his sister said with a fond smile. "Can't you see — it's a reminder!"

Commissioner of Public Safety proposed

By Donna Cogliano

With the retirement of Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink a matter of weeks away, there is talk of combining the police and fire departments under a commissioner of public safety.

Selectmen encouraged the town structure study committee last Wednesday night to proceed with a preliminary study on the concept of a Department of Public Safety for Cohasset.

Public Safety Commissions are most prevalent in the mid-west and southern part of the country where employees are dually trained in both police and fire work. However, vice-chairman Donna McGee of the town structure study committee said that Cohasset would be most interested in ideas at the other end of the spectrum, which combine some of the functions of police and fire departments.

Communications, budgeting, and administrative coordination are some functions which could be combined. McGee said that a public safety commissioner would serve as chief administrator (appointed by selectmen) while the fire and police departments would be headed by deputies.

McGee introduced the structure committee to the idea of a Dept. of Public Safety earlier this month at a reorganizational meeting when they were planning their upcoming agenda.

"The reason I brought up that concept to the committee is that the selectmen in the past couple of years have made some moves in the direction of taking the police chief out of civil service and at the last town meeting — to take the next fire chief out of civil service," said McGee.

Both the selectmen and committee members agreed that now is the time to address the issue — since the fire chief will be retiring in March.

Assistant town counsel Richard Henderson told board members last Wednesday night that his main concern is a legal one — can you override a previous piece of legislation which says you shall appoint a fire chief.

Henderson recommended the appointment of an acting chief for a one year contract while the study is being completed. Then if the concept is recommended to the town, it would be voted on at town meeting sometime next year, for 1983.

During the past two weeks committee members have read several case studies from the Massachusetts Municipal Association which focus on communities with a Department of Public Safety. McGee said that during their preliminary study, committee members would speak with officials in Lincoln, North Adams and Arlington (where they have already moved toward implementation of a Public Safety Commission).

The structure committee wants to find out if a Department of Public Safety would save money for the town and/or be more efficient.

McGee said that she personally has no set feelings — one way or the other about the new proposed Public Safety Commission. She said the entire committee seems to be open-minded toward the study.

"It's very, very important that the study proceed in an orderly manner. Otherwise you'd develop negative attitudes at the beginning of something like this and you'd never catch up," said McGee.

McGee said, "New Englanders don't really go for much change. But that's OK...I don't like change for change's sake."

"You have to proceed with caution and listen to everybody because everybody should be listened to," she said.

League action begins for Seahawks

League action for the week ending December 13 saw the Norwell-Scituate-Cohasset-Hull Seahawks post a record of four wins, three losses and one tie.

Coach Louis DiLorenzo's Bantam A's nipped Braintree 2-0 in a contest that featured outstanding goaltending and solid team play. Center Icemen Matthew Glennon & David Cogliano dented the nets for the local team while net-minder John Haley earned a "Shut-out" patch for his excellent play in front of the cage.

Coach Bill Ahern's Bantam B skaters ran into a buzz saw from Randolph and suffered a 7-0 whitewashing at the hands of the host team. Defensemen Sean Daley, Kevin Richardson, Russ Goulart and Mark Walsh and winger Michael Cooney all played well in a losing cause.

The Pee Wee A's, firmly entrenched in second place in the South Shore Conference, continued their fine play for the third weekend in a row with a 6-1 triumph over Braintree. Coach Barry Resnick's "High Rollers" displayed a well-balanced attack as six different skaters contributed to the scoring parade. Jeff Hartwell, Billy Resnick, Andy Thomas, Ned Flaherty, Seth Webb and Danny Hoitt (shorthanded) all found the range for the victorious Seahawk team.

Coach Ed Curran's Pee Wee B's and their division II counterparts from Randolph fought to a 3-3 standoff. Rightwinger Danny Pompeo again paced the B's offense with a goal and an assist. Center Todd Fitzpatrick and winger John Meschino also scored for the localites while James Misakian received credit for an assist.

The Pee Wee C's, coached by Larry Keating, were gunned down by Pembroke, 9-5. Gilbert Rebello, (twice), John Niland, Colin Keating and Mike Leighton all hit the Bullseye for C's while Peter Buckley and Leighton contributed assists.

Coach Dennis O'Connell watched his Squirt A's go down to defeat for the first time in six weeks when they suffered a 6-1 drubbing at the hands of a powerful Braintree squad. Leftwinger Chris Olivieri was credited with the lone Seahawk tally.

The Squirt B's, under Coach Tom Hingston, exploded past Hingham by a score of 10-1. Winger Jon Mahoney garnered this week's "Markmanship" title as he whistled four shots past the beleaguered Hingham goalie. Teammate Dennis Peacock added a "hat-trick" to the attack while Paul Norton, Pat Glennon and Michael Moog also joined the scoring parade. Glennon, Norton and Mark Resnick received assists during their teams awesome attack. Goalkeeper Scottie MacKay also must be complimented for another fine performance in the nets.

Coach Frank McGovern's Squirt C's continue to lead all teams in their division at the Hobomock Arena. The front-running Seahawks blanked Pembroke 5-0 behind the superb goaltending of Damon Parsons. The young net-minder also earned a "shutout" patch for his efforts which included stopping a second period break-away. The C's showed why they are the "Class of their League" as they dominated every facet of the game. McGovern's team was sparked to victory by Steve Boardman's two unassisted goals. Sean Noonan also blasted a pair of rockets into the opponent's net, and little Tony Muzzi popped in the final tally. Assists were metered out to Eric Fitzpatrick (two), David Farrag and Terence Shea.

'Tis the season...

Pam Maynard wins a place on national gymnastics team

Local super-star Pam Maynard of Cohasset is now a member of the United States Junior Elite National Team.

As a result of the recent Junior World Games Trials in Reno, Nevada, Pam ranked eighth of the juniors remaining in the junior program. The top 10, from the 22 who participated, represent the U.S. team. This team will represent the U.S. at junior international invitationals throughout the world in the coming year.

Pam, who started gymnastics locally when she was 10 years old, was a medalist this summer in the 1981 Sports Festival, and again in Reno, where she placed third in vaulting. At Thanksgiving, Pam moved to the Maryland suburbs, where she has joined the MG Gymnastic Team. This team, coached by Olympian Gregg Weiss, has had international stars for the past ten years, including present World Games Team member Shari Mann.

Pam lives with the Weisses at their Olympic-development center, where she trains up to six hours a day, six days a week. She is on an abbreviated school schedule to accommodate the gym load.

An eighth grader, Pam has her sights on international competition. In the near future, she will compete in the annual Niagara Cup in Niagara Falls, in Arizona at the Elite Coaches' Association Championships, and in Delaware at the USAIGC National Championships, along with her USGF Elite schedule. In early spring, Pam and her teammates are planning an exhibition in Cohasset. A travel fund is being set up, thru the non-profit MG Team Organization to help Pam's financial needs for the national team.

Cohasset Christmas services

Special church services are planned by most of the town's religious community.

It's the time of year when people's thoughts seem to automatically turn to meditation and God. It's a time of year celebrated by Christians and non-Christians alike.

Secretaries at a few of the town's churches predicted the Christmas congregations would be standing room only.

Thoughts aren't totally spiritual, however, the town's merchants say the season filled the shops and depleted their inventories.

As the world rushes through last minute shopping chores in a pace that would say there's no room at the inn, it's time to pause and remember the town's religious community.

ST. STEPHEN'S

There will be two special services on Christmas Eve and none on Christmas Day.

The Rev. Muir will celebrate the Holy Eucharist at a service at 5 p.m. at the church. The singing of Christmas carols will precede the service, starting at 4:45 p.m.

At 10:30 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 24, there will be a music program. The festal service of Holy Eucharist begins at 11 p.m. The Rev. Muir will deliver a sermon at that service.

St. Stephen's Parish (Episcopal), South Main Street. 383-1083. The Rev. Richard Muir. Sunday services at 8 and 10 a.m. Nursery care provided for 10 a.m. service.

FIRST PARISH

A service of carols and anthems begins at 8 p.m. at the church. The congregation will join together for carols. The church choir will sing anthems.

The Rev. Atkinson will read the Nativity, according to Luke during the candlelit service.

Music is under the direction of Carolyn Curtis.

First Parish Church in Cohasset (Unitarian-Universalist), 23 North Main St., 383-1100. The Rev. Edward Atkinson. Sunday services at 10:30 a.m. in the meeting house on the common. Church School at 10:15 a.m. in the parish house across the street.

GREEK ORTHODOX

The Greek Orthodox Church will celebrate its Christmas service beginning at 9 a.m. on Friday, Christmas Day. There will be no Christmas Eve service. The liturgy will be celebrated at 10 a.m. by Bishop Anthimos.

Sunday the church will have the regular service beginning at 10 a.m.

Fight the blahs at the art center

A wonderful way to fight the winter "blahs" is to enroll in an art class at the South Shore Art Center on 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

Registration must be made in advance for classes starting the first week in January whether the class meets weekly or is a workshop.

Starting Jan. 4 and meeting for eight times is "Basic Drawing" with Virginia Moore. The class is held Monday evenings and is good for beginners, either adults or teens, who would like to learn to draw or who want drawing as a base for learning how to paint.

"Introduction to Painting" with David Tandy will begin on Thursday, Jan. 7, and is available for both teens and adults who have either beginning, intermediate or advanced skills. The first class begins with stretching a canvas, selecting supplies and setting up a painting; intermediate and advanced students begin painting. The class meets eight times and can be taken for credit through Mass College of Art Continuing Education.

"Children's Art Workshop" will accept new enrollments beginning Wednesday, Jan. 6 from 3:30 to 5:30. Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman will teach five sessions where ages 7 to 11 learn how to draw and paint and to explore mixed media projects.

"Pastel Portraits" with Constance Flavell Pratt will accept new enrollments starting Tuesday, Jan. 5. Students may enroll for eight classes by attending both morning and afternoon sessions between Jan. 5 and Feb. 2.

Popular One-day workshops are a good way to get acquainted with the Center or to liven up a Saturday.

"Winter Watercolor Day" with Virginia Avery will be held on Saturday, Jan. 16 from 10 to 3 p.m. If the weather is clear with snow on the ground, the group will bus to outdoor locations and paint looking out the window. If weather does not permit, the class will meet inside the Center studio. Painters should bring a bag lunch and all supplies, including water. Class will start with a brief watercolor demonstration and instruction for beginners, intermediates and advanced will be individualized.

Painters who work on their own but would like some support should sign up for the "Critique Day" with Rosalind Farbush on Saturday, Jan. 23 from 10 to noon. Artists may bring five paintings that are finished or are in progress.

"Monoprint Workshop" will be given by Louise Kalish for two sessions on Friday mornings Jan. 29 and Feb. 5 from 10 to 12:30. This workshop is suited to advanced or intermediate artists who want to learn a new technique and explore the possibilities of direct printing.

For further information and enrollment procedures telephone 383-9548 Monday to Friday, noon to 4 p.m. or Saturday 10 to 1 p.m.

Library friends donate filmstrip projectors

By Richard E. Hayes, Librarian
Paul Pratt Memorial Library

The Friends of the Cohasset Library have donated to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library three new filmstrip projectors which are now available for loan to patrons as well as for use in the library.

The new projectors replace old ones that were beyond repair, after years of constant use. The new models may be borrowed by adults for one week. A slide adaptor for these projectors is also available. Cassette players may also be borrowed for home use.

The children's department has in the past five years built a small but high quality collection of filmstrips, cassettes and recordings. The materials have been selectively chosen on the basis of literary value and artistic presentation. The library staff reports great use of filmstrips and cassettes in the library by small groups of children. The collection includes Caldecott award picture books, folktales and fairy tales, famous speeches and poetry.

Children's librarian JoAnn Mitchell said: "Some of the children who most enjoy the filmstrip presentation would never pick up the book form of the material because the reading level is beyond them. Others choose the filmstrip/cassette presentation because they can replay a favorite story or poem over and over again. This is especially worthwhile for folktales and poetry as these genre are not often introduced at home. Unlike beautifully illustrated picture books these forms usually need to be introduced to the child, to be read aloud and to be shared. The filmstrip/cassette accomplishes this well. "The Owl and the Pussy Cat," "Aesop's Fables," "The Loon's Necklace," "The Fir Tree" or even Beatrix Potter's "Peter Rabbit" are thus enjoyed as old favorites or as a new literary background." Filmstrip and cassettes recently ordered for the collection include Caldecott winners "The Girl Who Loved Wild Horses" by Gable and Arnold Lobel's "Fables." New recordings include the new Folktellers series produced by Weston Woods.

The adult collection also circulates a wide variety of cassettes on material including "Buying a House," to the "Art of Interviewing." The record collection offers an excellent selection of spoken word records such as Anne Frank's "The Diary of a Young Girl," read by Claire Bloom and old favorites from the radio such as "Baby Snooks" and "Abbott and Costello Comedy."

All audio visual equipment and materials may be borrowed for one week. Materials may also be reserved for children's parties and group activities.

How festive we all look with the holiday wreath in place and tree lights twinkling at dusk. When we are snug by our fire may be the time to recall there are some who are not caught up in the mad rush of preparation and you and your presence are a gift that would make their Christmas happier. After all, how long would it take to take along a gift of these

TURTLES

3/4 pound vanilla caramels
1 T butter
2 T water, divided
1 6 oz. pkg. semi-sweet chocolate morsels
3 T light corn syrup
Confectioner's sugar
Pecan halves

Melt caramels, butter and 1 T of the water over boiling water. Keep warm over hot water. Melt semi-sweet chocolate morsels, light corn syrup and remaining 1 T water over hot (not boiling) water. Remove from water. Sift confectioners sugar on foil-lined baking sheet. Drop on caramel mixture by teaspoonfuls. Press 4 pecan halves, flat side down, on each caramel round. Spoon semi-sweet chocolate mixture on top of caramels. Chill until firm.

The long holiday weekend is at hand at last and I'm sure we're the envy of people throughout the nation who consider our New England towns THE place to be at this time of year. No doubt they picture us evenings enjoying whole walnuts roasted in their shells, to be eaten in front of the fire with apples and big bowls of snowy popcorn, as we watch white flakes drifting lazily down outside. Late breakfasts eaten by the Yankees are rumored to be hearty enough to stave off the cold and this recipe from Ocean Spray Cranberries sent to me by Ellen Garretson should do the job. It's called

CRANBERRY FRUIT NUT BREAD

2 c. all-purpose flour
1 c. sugar
1½ tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. baking soda
3/4 c. orange juice
1 T grated orange peel
2 T shortening
1 well-beaten egg
1½ c. fresh or fresh frozen cranberries, coarsely chopped
1/2 c. chopped nuts

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In a bowl mix together flour, sugar, baking powder, salt and baking soda. Stir in organge juice, orange peel, shortening and egg. Mix until well blended. Stir in cranberries and nuts. Turn into a 9x5" loaf pan, greased on bottom only. Bake for 55 min., or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool.

Now, from my kitchen to yours, I'd like to send Christmas thoughts winging with the wish that the spirit of Christmas that transforms each home into a haven of holiday joy, remain with you all throughout the season. Merry Christmas to you all!

'The Minot Light Cup Plates'

By David Wadsworth, Historical Society Curator

The ancient art of glassmaking is alive and well and is being actively pursued in New England. At Sagamore on Cape Cod the Pairpoint Glassworks maintains a factory specializing in hand-made works of art made from glass.

One of a handful of companies keeping alive the old tradition of glassblowing, the Pairpoint works produce a wide range of unique products created from hand-made lead crystal. This company was founded in 1837 with a factory in Boston, moved to New Bedford in 1867, and opened its new facility on the banks of the Cape Cod Canal in 1967.

Several years ago the Cohasset Historical Society commissioned the Pairpoint Company to produce a special new product in traditional form known as the Pairpoint Minot's Light Cup Plate. Made of hand-crafted glass, the Minot's Light Cup Plate has become a popular attraction eagerly sought by collectors of fine glass. Numerous Historical Societies and other organizations have commissioned commemorative cup plates, and Cohasset is no exception.

A specialized society of Pairpoint Cup Plate collectors has come into existence nationwide. The Cohasset Historical Society's Minot's Light Cup Plate is a delicately designed glass plate three-and-one-half inches in diameter and features the image of the famous Minot's Ledge lighthouse weathering an ocean storm. Around the fluted circumference of the plate is the legend "Minot's Light Cohasset" enclosed within a representation of twisted rope. The nautical motif of the plate is in keeping with the maritime history and tradition of Cohasset.

As for cup plates themselves, they represent an old tradition. Cup plates originally were used between 1832 and 1860 when fashion decreed teacups without handles. Hot tea was poured into the saucer to cool while the cup was placed on a dainty glass plate provided to avoid soiling the linen or the polished table. The Cohasset Historical Society's Minot's Light Cup Plates come in a variety of colors including cobalt blue, clear, amethyst, amber and green. The Society's cup plates continue to be popular with Pairpoint collectors the country over. They are unique in design and represent an unusually fine offering.

Commemorative cup plates make fine gifts for almost all occasions and are highly prized by collectors of fine glassware. The Minot's Light Cup Plates can be purchased from the Society at $5 per plate, with the more rare cobalt blue priced at $6. Both prices are current, and state tax is extra. For your Pairpoint Cup Plate call Constance Parker at 383-0773 or the Lothrop House at 383-6930.

Commercial haulers hurt by ban

Dump problems remain unsolved

For years town officials have been saying they believed commercial haulers were filling the town dump with trash collected outside its boundaries.

For years there has been a dump crisis with space at the dump mountain dwindling before the eyes of the town.

Last year the town instituted what some expected to be a strict sticker system.

Stickers — previously free — were sold at the police station to allow dump use and beach parking.

But enforcement of the sticker system was as spotty as ever. Sure some cars were turned away. But how much can one regular worker plus a teenager working on a CETA grant do anyway?

All this leads up to last week's health board action banning commercial haulers from the dump after Jan. 1.

Six companies are affected by the move.

State officials say they will continue watching the operation of the dump, waiting to see what happens at the adjourned session of the special town meeting.

"If the town were to refuse to appropriate the money, we would issue an order of compliance and take action," a spokesman for the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering said.

But the town hasn't refused to appropriate the quarter of a million needed to bring the dump up to state standards. The adjourned session will meet Monday, Feb. 22.

The board of health's action in banishing commercial rubbish haulers was an attempt to take measures to limit filling at the dump until the adjourned session.

Three of the affected companies are local people who claim the move may drive them out of business.

The lone dump worker will be responsible for enforcing the prohibition.

Kevin O'Brien, health agent, expects no trouble in enforcing the decision despite long standing problems in enforcing the sticker system because only six haulers are involved.

O'Brien said the full board of health met with Joe Laugelle Saturday morning to discuss the commercial haulers. He said there was no change in the board's position.

When asked if he would characterize what Laugelle had to say as "an emotional pitch to the board," O'Brien agreed.

Laugelle says he has lost half his accounts because his expenses are increasing so drastically. It will now cost his customers about $8 a week. It has been costing half that.

The difference in price is because now trash will have to be taken to the landfill at Cohasset Heights where there would be a charge for each load. The town dump was charging commercial haulers $50 a year for a permit and that charge began last summer.

Tony Sestito said few of his customers are willing to pay the increased price.

"They say they'll take it to the dump themselves," Sestito said. "What's the difference, there will be six times the traffic at the dump and they'll get the same amount of trash?

"Some of my customers are elderly people, what are they going to do?

"I would have been in this business for 20 years in April," he said wondering whether his business would survive.

Laugelle said he hopes the health board reverses the decision if the special town meeting in February appropriates the needed money.

Lagrotteria in race for selectman

With the start of the new year comes the start of the election season. Jim Lagrotteria threw his hat into the ring Monday night.

He's after the seat now held by Selectman Rocco Laugelle — who has not yet made an official reelection announcement but is said to be getting ready to do just that.

Here is the press release on the new candidate:

"James W. Lagrotteria of Cohasset announces his intention to seek the office of selectman for the Town of Cohasset.

"He is the father of eleven children and resides at 104 Howe Road. His wife of 26 years is Dorothy R.

Options for Osgood School

Of some 20 residents who were questioned in the Village shopping area on Saturday, only three were opposed to the closing of the Osgood School.

Most of the Cohasset residents, who were questioned by a Mariner reporter shortly before her two ink pens froze, approved of the shutdown of Osgood — so long as it is feasible.

One man said, "I'm definitely for less government spending. So I'm for the closing if the Deer Hill School can accommodate the children comfortably."

An elderly gentleman said, "Kids are kids and I don't see any problems in combining the grades." He also mentioned that he attended Osgood back when all the elementary grade levels were housed there.

A woman shopper agreed, "As long as it (Deer Hill School) wasn't overcrowded and the students get their fair share." She said her main concern is the enthusiasm and attitudes of teachers. With the right teacher everyone could be taught in one oversized classroom she said.

A woman, who left her car motor running while she raced in and out of the drug store, stopped to say she is in favor of any economizing that leads to better education. Though she values the Osgood School as a superb educational setting, she would not oppose the closing if students would still be given a quality education.

The father of an Osgood pupil said it would be a shame to lose the atmosphere of the Osgood School.

Another shopper said, "I think it's one of the best elementary schools in the area...and children can concentrate on their academics better without the older, wise kids disturbing them. I would hate to see it go," she said.

Remembering '81...a year with drama

It was a year filled with drama.

As last year began, Arthur Clark announced he would not be seeking reelection as a selectman.

Mary Jane McArthur jumped right into the race.

The water board announced a 25 percent increase in water rates. Philip Smith bought some properties on South Main Street from Dr. Roger Pompeo and told the Mariner that he's an "optimist...not a gloom and doom type guy. I believe in change."

South Main Street began changing. Optimism being catching.

Jay Conant asked to put a video game room in Jonathan Livingston Square on Rte. 3A.

School Supt. Eugene Crowell told a school committee concerned about the problem of cutting deeply into the budget that he was basing his budget on keeping Osgood open.

By late in January there was a water emergency.

About 20 households were frozen out of their water supply. Remember how cold it was? Isn't remembering cold one of the most difficult tasks?

Talk slipped into the open that the Deer Hill Outdoor School (which will not be held in 1982) would not be going to Camp Wing in Duxbury. In March the fifth graders went to Thompson's Island.

Don DeMichele made the front page of the Mariner at the end of the month when Karin Bartow interviewed him on his jogging. DeMichele jogs from his home on Jerusalem Road to his job at Proctor & Gamble in Quincy on a regular basis — not every day.

Those gamblers were making noises at the State House, meanwhile.

February came and Building Inspector James Litchfield issued a warning that's well worth being repeated.

The building inspector said he is worried about the installation of wood or coal burning stoves.

Stoves are supposed to be installed under a building permit and inspected by his office.

Litchfield also said that people selling stoves aren't giving enough instructions on the right way to run the devices, which are a fire hazard, if improperly used or installed.

Closer to Valentine's Day, Caroline Zwicker won our Valentine Love Letter contest.

Cohasset Central Market (the business) was sold by the Bravos to Philip Nectow of Marshfield.

Torin Sweeney wrote another chapter in his own book when he won the Division II Wrestling South Sectionals.

The beginning of March was led with near tragedy. Two Cohasset teenagers and a friend of theirs from Scituate were kidnapped by an armed robber. Police cruisers followed at high speed. And luckily, the incident ended with the capture of the kidnapper and unharmed release of the hostages.

Bobby Beale was brought from his hospital bed in Florida to Mass General Hospital due to the generosity of Marshfield Atty. F. Lee Bailey. Soon the comatose young man would show signs of recovery.

The North Cohasset fire station closed with no advance publicity.

Cohasset's week ...

Firefighter keeps job

The advisory committee has approved a transfer of $9,800 to keep Firefighter Robert Silvia on his job until the time of an expected opening.

It's expected the cost of paying his salary would be about the same as paying his unemployment benefits.

Three firefighters will be retiring next year. And Chief Charles Piepenbrink requested the advisory committee grant the transfer since the men will be taking vacation time before their retirements officially begin.

Vo-Tech budget

The South Shore Vocational School committee approved a total budget of $782,100 for next year, up about nine percent from the current budget.

The committee okayed the increase last week, which will increase assessments in four of the six towns currently served in the region.

Hanover's assessment would increase 11.4 percent under the proposed budget, and assessments would jump 9.6 percent for Abington, 13.6 percent for Norwell and 15.7 percent for Rockland. Scituate's assessment would drop by two percent and Cohasset's by 19.3 under the plan, since those two towns have sent fewer students to the school in recent years.

Most of the increased costs are due to plans to expand the region and add five to seven new programs in satellite facilities. Superintendent Clifford Easton said the expansion plans would spread the cost over a larger base, saving money in the long run.

The school is currently studying the possibility of adding Whitman and Hanson into the region, and is also looking at several sites in area towns to expand programs in the district. The proposals must go before a vote in all regional towns before final approval.

The committee agreed to charge Whitman and Hanson $400 for each new student for 10 years, in addition to annual assessments, for capital expenses at the school. The surcharge was approved on a 4-2 vote, with Hanover's representative Valentine Harrington and John Doyle from Rockland opposed. Both wanted high assessments, but Easton argued that Whitman and Hanson would not agree to any surcharge over $400, the amount paid by present members for the first 10 years of capitalization.

Easton said the total budget is actually $11,000 less than last year, and that $176,000 was added for the proposed expansion programs. He recommended the $110,000 be restored if the expansion plans fail to pass approval.

The assessments must now be considered by all six regional town finance committees.

Notices

Classes in the Cohasset schools resume Monday, Jan. 4.

The annual town meeting warrant closes early this year. The date for filing is Feb. 3.

Public Safety Commissioner

Some officials say the concept of a public safety commissioner won't fly because state law keeps police and fire departments from intermingling their work.

The concept is used out West and there are two communities in the state that are trying it.

The officials casting doubt on the hopes of a public safety czar don't want to be quoted.

Special Town Meeting

The special town meeting scheduled for Monday, Feb. 15, will be just a token session.

"We're trying to get the word out to people not to come that day," Arthur Clark, selectmen's executive secretary said this week.

The problem is that Feb. 15 is the day legally chosen for celebrating Washington's Birthday in 1982.

The special town meeting will be convened on that day by the town moderator and a few other officials just to fulfill the obligations of law. A new date will be set for Monday, Feb. 22, at the high school.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Seahawks continue to enjoy successful season

The Norwell-Scituate-Cohasset-Hull Seahawks enjoyed their most successful week of the season Dec. 26 and 27 as they posted a combined record of five wins, one tie, and only two losses.

The Bantam A's resumed their winning habits this week by pinning a 3-1 setback on Hingham. Jamie Kelly returned to action with a flourish as he posted a pair of goals to lead the Seahawk offensive thrust. Bobby Weisslinger blasted home the insurance tally and goalies Andy Walton and John Haley turned in credible performances in front of the nets.

The Bantam B's continued to roll, shutting out Braintree 3-0 behind the superb goal tending of John Belsan. Michael Cooney dented the nets twice for the Seahawks with assists metered out to Stephen Griffin and Bobby Fenton. Griffin netted the third marker with help from Kevin Richardson.

The Bantam C's receive the nod as this week's "Outstanding Team." The victorious C Squad brushed Pembroke aside 3-1 to become the fourth Seahawk team this season to hold or share a piece of first place. Matthew Cox (assisted by Mike O'Donnell) and Chris Baker (set up by John Breen) scored in the first period to give the localites a lead they never surrendered. Eric Wurzel (aided by Sean Mayo) added an insurance tally in the second stanza. Goalie Paul Bishop was excellent once again in front of the nets.

The Pee Wee A's dropped out of the top spot as they received a 5-1 drubbing from a tough Hingham team. Mickey McCarthy with an assist to Andy Thomas notched the lone Seahawk score.

The Pee Wee B's were nosed out by Braintree 4-3. Todd Fitzpatrick gunned in two scores and Brian McGovern netted the final goal. Assists were given to James Misakian and Jason Clark.

Coach Dennis O'Connell's Squirt A's got back on the winning track by beating Hingham 3-2. Center Kevin Healey (2) and Winger Chris Olivieri supplied the offensive punch for the victors.

Coach Tom Hingston's Squirt B's just keep on winning. This week they whipped Neponset 6-3 as Jon Mahoney garnered the "Marksmanship" title with yet another "hat-trick." Other goal scorerers for the high-flying B's were Kevin Quinn, Michael Moog and Michael Dundon. Assists went out to Mahony, Danny Kessinger, and Brian Pompeo.

The Mite skaters were held to a 4-4 tie when Easton scored in the final 30 seconds to knot their contest. Center Patrick Henderson (Hat-trick for the second straight week and a share of this week's Markmanship title) and Winger Paul Frey provided the scoring for the young Seahawk skaters.

Lagrotteria in race for selectman ...

(Oliver), a resident of Cohasset for several years prior to their marriage.

"Jim was born in Cohasset at 161 Hull Street, attended Cohasset schools and was class president of the first class to graduate from the new high school in 1952.

"He attended Boston College and Northeastern University prior to the military. He graduated from officer training school/rangers at Ft. Benning, Georgia in 1955. He has an extensive background in the printing trades and has held the position of board member of the Craftmens Club: the largest printing/ managers club in New England.

"For the past ten years he has held the position of business manager at Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham. He has been a cubmaster and scout leader, a member of the committee and printer of 'Cohasset — The First 100 Years,' and is presently a member of the Advisory Board."

Options for Osgood School ...

Several residents offered suggestions on what could be done with the abandoned Osgood School. The general consensus was to have the town hall offices transferred to the school.

One gentleman further suggested that the present town hall be turned over to the historical commission.

Interestingly enough, it was the elderly residents who thought the Osgood School could be used for a community center, roller skating rink, or swimming complex, while the younger residents imagined the school as an elderly housing project.

One daring resident went so far as to whisper to the reporter that the Osgood School be transformed into a gambling casino.

Due to projections of declining enrollment, School Supt. Eugene Crowell is considering three options for 1984.

They include:

— closing the Osgood School and moving the Kindergarten through Grade 3 to the Deer Hill School.

— leaving the three school buildings with the same grade configuration, the status quo as it were.

— keeping Osgood as Kindergarten through Grade 3, creating a Grade 4 to 7 complex at the Deer Hill School and using the high school for Grades 8 through 12, allowing the space to be used for more than just classrooms.

Crowell said earlier this month that those options are not the only possibilities and he doesn't feel favorable toward closing of Osgood.

Poor attendance at MBTA meeting

A recent meeting at the state house with communities that pay MBTA assessments but receive no direct services failed to produce the expected amount of support from the towns.

Only eight representatives out of 23 communities that pay into the T attended the Dec. 9 meeting, organized by state Rep. Philip Johnston of Marshfield.

The poor showing was attributed to either "frustrations and a perception of no light at the end of the tunnel, or a lack of interest," Marshfield Selectman Frank Hynes said.

Johnston has introduced legislation at the state house seeking free parking in T facilities for residents of the 23 towns that receive no other services for their assessments to the transit system.

Hynes said the proposal is not being considered as a good trade-off to the communities' payments, "but rather as a step in the right direction and a step in the door to recognize our plight."

Johnston is planning another meeting after the first of the year with members of the town's representatives to the MBTA Advisory Board, Hynes said.

Joyous New Year

Remembering '81...a year with drama ...

The Boosters Clubs were asked to raise $5,000 to save the junior high sports programs and help the others. They came through with a Night at the Music Circus later on.

April came along with town meeting. The business went quickly. The advisory board's recommendations were taken quite seriously.

Crime Watch came to town.

Four members of the Cohasset High School Drama Workshop cast of "Hold Me" received recognition at the finals of the state drama festival.

Jerry White, Pat Duffy, Kathy Collins and Tim Libby were named to the all-star cast.

The overall budget by the way was approved at $6.9 million with $3.4 of that going for schools.

Bob Hodge won the Cohasset by the Sea Road Race.

Mary Jane McArthur won the opening of the selectmen. Richard Conley took a surprising win, pushing Frank England off the school committee.

The recreation commission ran the annual chase a chocolate egg day party at Deer Hill. Everyone won something.

The selectmen decided they wouldn't have a search committee help them screen candidates for the executive secretary's job.

In May the recreation commission said it would like to see beach parking at Wadleigh Park.

The Decorator's Show House, sponsored by the Junior League of Boston, featured the work of Marge Benson of Cohasset who worked with her partner, Nancy Gesner of Duxbury. Smith and Dalton also did a room. Smith, meaning Philip Smith, and Dalton, meaning Verna Dalton of Designer Creations of Cohasset.

Quincy Court honored Lt. Charles Stockbridge on law day.

Selectmen announced plans to shut off a third of the street lights in town. The plan had critics.

The water department gave notice that seriously delinquent customers would be turned off.

Paul Pratt Memorial Library decided the way to handle the budget crunch was to close on Wednesdays. There was not outcry.

Another casino gambling bill was filed for Hull.

In June Cohasset held a special evening for Arthur Clark.

Joseph Barresi became inspector general.

The dog officer began a crackdown on unlicensed dogs, estimating only a third of the dogs in town are licensed.

The town's first condo went on the market. The condo at the corner of Sohier and North Main was converted from apartments.

Town Moderator David Place said he would resign to accept a Presidential appointment.

The town's new Crime Watch Officer, Gerald Doyle, decided to try a new job at MIT. He sought and eventually won a leave of absence. By now he's finished the leave, quit and been replaced.

Dave Toma came to Cohasset schools. He was an instant success. There is no report available on whether drug use went down.

Outdoor roller skating began at Winter Gardens.

Parking tickets went up. More of them were given out.

A gasoline truck flipped over on Spring Street. The fire department prevented the accident from becoming a fire.

Joseph Crossen released plans of his cluster development on a 12 acre site off Cedar Street.

July came and the school department decided to handle the busing without private contractors.

So far most of the complaints have been about the ages of the buses. Hannah Lindquist turned 100 at Cohasset Knoll to a celebration that rocked the whole home.

The Boy Scouts donated Recycling signs to try to help prolong the life of the dump.

The Greek Orthodox Church held a Taverna that was delicious.

Scituate decided against turning over its boat tax money.

Penn Central put out the for sale signs on the right of way.

Bill Weeks became town moderator.

Josephine Milligan did a great job working at the Ripley Road Nursing Home fair.

Randy Feola found himself in trouble again. This time the patrolman resigned under some pressure.

The state told the Mariner the dump was indeed on borrowed time.

The federal government told the Mariner the design grant was being held up because the town hadn't decided where the discharge pipe would go.

In August the selectmen voted to begin evicting the Sportsmen's Club from the land on Route 3A. The matter was placed in the hands of town counsel. We see the building is still on the lot.

Strawberry Parfait won the South Shore Civic League softball championship for the second year in a row.

The police chief confirmed rumors he would not promote another lieutenant after Lt. Stockbridge leaves. He plans instead to have a new sergeant made. Of course, the decision is up to the selectmen, but that is his recommendation.

September came, the volunteers kept the dump recycling effort going. The cost of a school lunch went to 80 cents.

The state gave the town two months to come up with a solution for the dump.

Dogs killed two goats in Beechwood.

The CHS seniors voted to have a musical for their play.

Gilman Churchill turned 95.

There were some changes made on which street lights would go out.

The long put-off water shut off for delinquent bill payers happened.

The idea of widening Margin Court received some neighborhood opposition.

In October, the higher fees for town hall use became an issue for the Cohasset Dramatic Club.

Yvette Rattenbury got her termination notice as police department clerk/dispatcher after the town refused to change the position to just a clerk.

"Table Manners" was a success.

The fire department found it had financial woes. Overtime money was almost gone.

Holly Grant became homecoming queen.

In November Jonathan deLima was a star in "Mame." The nine-year-old played the young Patrick Dennis.

A 1981 graduate of Cohasset High School, he joined the Marine Corps in March 1981.

☐Marine Pvt. Brian Cogill, son of Brian and Joanne Cogill of Church St. has completed recruit training at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Paris Island, S.C.

A 1981 graduate of Cohasset High School, he joined the Marine Corps in August 1981.

Ellen McCarthy

☐Ellen McCarthy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard McCarthy of Old Pasture Road, recently completed her first season with the Babson College women's soccer team in Wellesley.

"Ellen had a super year for us and was very aggressive on defense," said head coach Donna Tanner. "In our 2-0 win over Boston University, she totally shut down their leading scorer. Her potential is unlimited for next season."

She is a 1980 graduate of Cohasset High School where she captained the basketball team and was also an All-League selection in field hockey.

☐Stephen Sinopoli, son of Mrs. Vincent Sinopoli of 76 Smith Place, has been named to Dean's List at Northeastern University. Steve is in his fourth year at Northeastern where he is majoring in Accounting in Northeastern's College of Business Administration program.

☐Traditionally, this is a time for new beginnings and Priscilla Daniels of Beach Street is very enthusiastic about her new venture which she will start this Saturday.

A well known piano teacher in town for many years, Priscilla will be playing every Saturday from 8 p.m. until midnight at The Whitton House in Hingham. She's excited about her work in the restaurant which she says the new owners have completely redecorated. Her music, she explains, will be all improvisations of popular standards, semi-classics and jazz. A graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, Priscilla looks forward to yet "another creative outlet."

☐The sign on the bulletin board at Mt. Murphy Lodge said "Kitchen Closed" and underneath, "Call Laura Doherty" which caused some puzzlement to the several houseguests staying at Pat and Jim Murphy's on Highland Avenue for the holidays.

Pat chuckles as she explains that the first notice was a joke and the second to remind her to let Around Town readers know of the happy reunion taking place with family and friends from all over the United States.

"It's the first time in many years that we've all been together and the house is jumping," Pat says happily.

Daughter, Noreen is in from California and Jay from Pennsylvania State College. Other guests include Pat's mother and step father, Mr. and Mrs. Spiegel from New York, sister Noreen White and old friends and their children from Texas.

☐The Rotary Club held their annual Christmas party at the Lothrop House this year and word has it that the New England clam chowder was especially tasty.

☐Over half of the editions of "Others Croak Back" have now been sold, Karin Bartow reported this week. Anyone wishing copies of this impressive compilation of original poetry by students at the Deer Hill School may purchase them at either the Deer Hill or the Osgood School offices or at Cards and Shards.

☐Often times, there seems to be a trend in certain foods served at holiday parties. This year, for several, it was chili which is alright if you have a liking for that particular dish and if you don't go to three parties in a row where it's the main dish. Then you go hungry. Ask Clark Chatterton, he should know.

IN THE GOOD OLD WINTER TIME kids skating on a pond on Spring Street gather to wish Happy New Year to Mariner readers.

☐Joe Laugelle, "Doc Skinna," and his fellow residential household rubbish contractors are not happy with the town's decision that they can no longer use its dump. "It's really too bad," says Joe, "but you can't blame anybody."

He says that he is well aware that the dump is overcrowded but nevertheless suggests that there should have been a committee set up to make long range planning several years ago.

"I hope my customers will understand an increase," says Joe, who will now have to use a private dump that charges $4 a cubic yard which is equal, he explains, to four barrels of rubbish.

☐Craig Langford has just returned from an exciting cruise which included Africa and South America. Craig is a student at King's Point and a 1980 graduate of Cohasset High School. The cruise was a part of his training at the maritime academy.

Collection & processing of fines

Arthur Clark is still the town's parking clerk.

Selectmen gave him that temporary title when faced with state legislation permitting them to pick up the full amount of the town's parking fines, provided the town took over collections handled in the past by the district court.

Last week the board voted to use a Quincy company, RAPA, to process the tickets.

Back in September the town asked Hingham District Court for its outstanding parking tickets. The estimated value is $8,000.

RAPA Collections Systems Inc. will be paid $1.10 for each ticket it collects. It will be paid 60 cents for each ticket paid at the town collector's office.

Massachusetts Municipal Association would have done the work for $1 a ticket but the packages of tickets would have had to be mailed to the office of Newburyport, Clark said.

"These people will pick up the tickets," Clark said about RAPA.

He expects the contract will be ready for selectmen to sign at their meeting this week.

The ticket collection will begin with picking up the tickets in town, tickets will be stored in Quincy and filed in the company's computer, notices will be sent to persons not paying within 21 days — a $5 surcharge will be added to the ticket at this point, scofflaws who ignore five notices will be brought to district court, the registry will also be notified.

Police Chief John DeBassio estimates the town generates about $32,500 a year in revenue through parking tickets.

He pointed out that the average ticket is for a $15 fine. The lowest fine possible is $10 and that is for only a few special parts of town.

He also pointed out that the penalties — including court prosecution and registry action — are not changing just because the town will be responsible for processing the tickets.

Where before the court automatically was supposed to issue a summons, now the responsibility is laid upon the town for initiating the action.

Editorial

Looking into the Mariner crystal ball

Editorials make judgments about many matters, so it should come as small surprise that we rate 1981 indelibly mediocre.

It was a year of financial problems. Now it seems sane enough to have a year of financial crunch in Boston or even Quincy. But it hits the American dream somewhere about the midsection when the budget of a town like Cohasset runs into pecuniary problems.

Actually, now that truer figures might be known, the town probably didn't have to cut so deeply last year. Nevertheless, the budget for the coming year may increase only 2½ percent over the prior year's appropriation.

What we think 1982 needs is some magic. An instant cure for inflation — a fairy godmother with a wand to make wishes come true.

But we doubt the magic is coming soon, 1982 or 3 or...

So we decided to look into our Mariner special crystal ball (available locally for $10.98) and develop a few leads to look into the coming months.

This is the list of predictions specially prepared for our readers (details or denials to follow in subsequent months):

Building continues in Cohasset despite the usury interest charge because land here is so desirable.

Jack Worley and the recreation commission put together another year long program for the leisure time of residents, managing on an amazingly low budget.

KoKo Island changes the colors on its red and yellow parking signs. We predict red and white would look better.

Yvette Rattenbury runs for selectman on the platform that if elected she will hire a clerk for the police department.

The school committee takes a firm stand against drugs and alcohol, but at least some of their regulations on search and seizure end up being discussed in the attorney general's office.

Condos appear in Beechwood and at the Harbor.

Hugo's redecorates in a big way.

A new supermarket opens at Cushing Plaza. Our ball hazed over where the name should have been.

The Cohasset Mariner, which for the past few years now has been the town's largest paid circulation weekly, overtakes the Wall Street Journal and other combined dailies for most households covered.

Pam Maynard sets new records for attendance at gymnastics exhibitions when she brings her teammates from the U.S. Junior Elite National Team to town in the spring.

"Li'l Abner" brings rave reviews and a healthy piece of change for the senior class. The question left is: will someone train as the director of a musical so that after Beth Goff leaves town this might happen again?

Crime continues to increase.

The efforts of the local police department, under Police Chief John DeBassio, continue to become more scientific. This is the year of the detective.

Problems require family help

[Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of articles describing the services available at Coastal Community Counseling Center. The family described in the series is fictitious.]

By a Psychologist at the Center

The Jones' are stuck. Billy does poorly in school. His grades are constantly below average and he does not do his homework. Mrs. Jones thinks that her son has learning problems. Mr. Jones thinks Billy is just plain lazy; more interested in fooling around than in doing school work. Parents cannot agree and, in fact, are beginning to argue quite a lot about Billy and his problems. Mrs. Jones says she cannot sleep at night because she is so worried about Billy. Finally, Mr. Jones phoned the school principal, who also was concerned about Billy's poor school performance. The principal suggested that the Jones' call the local counseling center. Mr. Jones talked with his wife and both decided that it would be worthwhile to see what the counseling center could do to help Billy.

Mr. Jones phoned the Coastal Community Counseling Center, which provides help for families in Hingham, Hull, Scituate, Cohasset and Norwell. The Center is located at 90 South Stret in Hingham and appointments can be made by phoning 749-9306. The Center is staffed by experienced psychiatrists, psychologists, and social workers. A major goal of the Center is to assist families in learning ways to solve their own problems.

A friendly woman answered the telephone and Mr. Jones asked for an appointment for Billy. He explained Billy's problem and how the school principal had suggested that he call the Center. The woman asked that the whole family come to the first hour-long meeting. Mr. Jones thought to himself, "I wonder if she thinks there is something wrong with me," so he decided to ask why she needed to see the whole family. The woman explained that "in helping to figure out and solve Billy's problem we are going to need help from the whole family."

[Next week — What happens when the family arrives at the Center.]

I'll be more conscious of the wonders

By Patricia Desmond

Thoughts of a new year, new beginning, new hope always seem a welcome remedy to the pressure of Christmas.

It's not that I'm unfound of decking the holly, emptying the store shelves and visiting as many friends and relatives as I can, it's just that the process leaves me feeling like overcooked spinach.

But thoughts of a new year are something of a different order. Somehow there's no need to spend weeks traipsing about in search of a New Year's gift or a need to meet other people's expectations.

I don't know anyone who's ever been honestly hurt because I failed to show up at his or her New Year's Eve party. And that's one of the nicest facets of the day. You see I'm one of those people who have trouble getting to all the places they should be or would like to be. It comes from having young children, a dear love, a more than fulltime job and the inability to believe my limitations.

So here I am getting ready for a new year with joy.

This year I will be more organized. All those people who I've been meaning to interview can expect a phone call from me soon. So can the children's doctor and dentist. And I'm making a firm commitment to write down the amount of any check I write before mailing it anywhere, lest evil things happen to my credit rating.

This year I will spend less time with trivia and more time on the important things in life. That means my children can expect to see more of me. It also means more indepth pieces and less working to be first with every bit of superficiality flowing through the area.

This year I will make sure I have more cause to smile than frown. I don't think I did a lot of frowning last year (that's my opinion, my daughter's differs) but we all find our own state of mind. I will create a state of absolute wonderment that town meeting can indeed work at decision-making effectively and that the full moon happens every 28 days.

I've always thought it was a wonder that my three-year-old can recite the alphabet and do a simple magic trick. I've always thought it was a wonder that my daughter is a child filled with generosity.

This year I'll make sure I'm more conscious of all the wonders, even on deadline day.

A place in the Harbor

To the Editor:

Concerning the proposed charge and stickers for boat moorings in Cohasset Harbor:

I am outraged that the Harbormaster wastes his time and energy trying to collect delinquent fees when there is a three year waiting list for moorings. Boaters who will not abide by the rules should lose their moorings, so that the rest of us who are conscientious could have a place in the harbor for our boats!

Why all the discussion??

Respectfully,
Joan Appel

Remembering '81...a year with drama ...

Library fees went up. It now costs 25 cents to lose your card. And the maximum fine is $5, in place of $1.

Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink decided he would retire in 1982.

We found McDonald's had its eyes on land by Cohasset Motors on Route 3A for a restaurant that would be of Colonial design.

Robert Kemp, manager of Cohasset Country Club, was found in a wooded area murdered. A young Marshfield man was charged in connection. The accused was a worker at the club for a short time before the shooting.

Walter and Edward Guleserian, who run the Sheraton Commander in Cambridge, bought Hugo's Lighthouse.

A cable study committee was named by selectmen.

Plans were leaked that a new supermarket will go in to Cushing Plaza in the site abandoned by the A&P.

The Cohasset Mariner began a circulation drive.

In December a special town meeting completed half the business at hand, leaving the question of the dump unanswered until Monday, February 15.

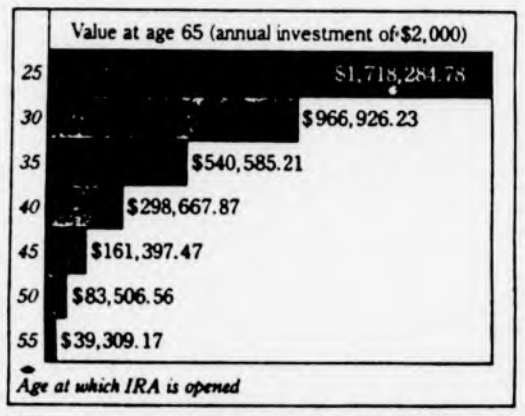
E.F. Hutton on how the new tax law affects IRA

All IRA's may look the same. Until you retire.

What makes an IRA from E.F. Hutton different?
Hutton offers a wide range of investment opportunities to help your money work harder. It's a difference you'll see when you retire. When you need it most.



Because your investment grows tax free, it can grow rapidly. Chart based on a 12% annual assumed rate of return. Your results may be more or less depending on the actual rate.

The new tax law makes the Individual Retirement Account (IRA) available to everyone. Even people who belong to company pension plans.

Thanks to this legislation, not only is everyone eligible, but the benefits have been increased.

An IRA gives you the tax break you need now. With allowed tax deductions having risen from $1500 to $2000. If husband and wife both work, the deduction can total up to $4000.

Because taxes are deferred, your money grows faster. And it can provide the added income you'll need later. But how much added income there'll be depends on when you open your IRA and the results of your investment program.

The IRA that changes with the market.

With many IRA's, your investment choices are limited. But with E.F. Hutton you have access to a vast array of investment opportunities. Including money-market investments. Growth stocks. Mutual funds. Annuities. Treasury Bills. C.D.'s, and more.

Your E.F. Hutton Account Executive is there to assist. He or she can help you change your investment strategy as the market changes. So you have a better chance of getting the highest possible return each year.

No one can forecast the future, but we believe the more investment opportunities you have available the better chance you have to achieve more than average performance.

Retire on your terms, not just your company's.

The new tax law gives you more control over your retirement than ever before.

If you don't have a company pension plan, an IRA is essential. As we all know, Social Security benefits just aren't enough anymore.

If you have a company plan, an IRA could mean the difference between simply retiring, and retiring well. It's never too early to start planning. Just fill in the coupon or call
